A wave of something that was vaguely disheartening, that was almost nauseating, swept through McKinnon. It left him momentarily dazed with that forlornest sickness which follows a seismic upheaval. He felt as though the deck under his feet had opened and let him down into the depths of a chilling sea. Insidiously and almost unwittingly he had grown to believe that this unbefriended and lonely woman was in some way very close to him. Little by little he had come to accept the hope that they might draw even closer together, that the exigencies of warfare might make their paths identical.

But as he stood listening to Ganley's thundering declaration there swept through him the impression of being engulfed and suffocated in fogs of duplicity, of being entangled in endless webs of lies and intrigues and counter-intrigues. He felt suddenly oppressed and disturbed by a sense of unlooked-for and undefined conspiracies beyond conspiracies, of bewildering and inscrutable forces at play all about him.

"Is this true?" he demanded of the woman before him.

His question was almost a prayer for its own denial. He could see that the scene through which she had passed had sorely taxed her strength. She was no longer a girl, but a woman who had known and confronted life.

Obliged to Quit Business

So Dreadful Was the Suffering From Itching Piles

After Twenty Years of Pile Torture Relief and Cure Came with

Dr. Chase's Ointment

You take no risk and you make no experiment when you use Dr. Chase's Ointment for piles. Many doctors still cling to the idea that nothing but an operation will effect a cure. But operations are expensive and dangerous and often fail in their results. Some have been cured by Dr. Chase's Ointment after operations had failed.

Dr. Chase's Ointment truly has a wonderful record as a cure. Here is a case which was reported recently:

Mr. John P. Marshall, 14 Barnes road, St. John's, Nfld., writes: "For upwards of twenty years I was troubled terribly with itching piles; at times so bad that I was obliged to lay up ,unable to attend to business.

"I tried many treatments without benefit, unti II accidentally read of Dr. Chase's Ointment, and found at last a cure by using this ointment. I only used one box and part of a second one when I was completely cured, and have had no return of the piles. That was eighteen months ago, and, needless to say, I attribute this cure to Dr. Chase's Invaluable Ointment."

Many sufferers from piles have tried so many scores of treatments that they cannot believe that cure is possible. In order to convince the skeptical we are always willing to send a sample box free to anyone who encloses a two -cent stamp to pay postage.

Sturdy Food Breeds Sturdy Children

STURDINESS means more than weight and muscle.

It also means energy.

The really sturdy child has its tissue and its energy developed in the right proportion.

That is why Tillson's Rolled Oats are the superb food for boys and girls, as well as for grown folks.

They supply the body with energy and tissue in the ratio of just about 5½ to 1, which is the proportion declared right by science.

About the only other food that does this is milk.

Tillson's Oats and milk are, therefore, the two practically perfect foods. Ask your doctor about it.

Remember this: Milk and a little salt is much better for the digestion than rich cream and a lot of sugar. Try it on your porridge.

GATE NUMBER 12

A Short Story

(From the Spanish of the Chilian writer, Baldomero Lillo.)

Pablo clutched instinctively at his father's legs. His ears hummed, and the floor, sinking under his feet, troubled him strangely. He felt himself cast into that hole, the dark mouth of which he had seen as he entered the cage, and he watched with great frightened eyes the murky walls of the pit, wherein they sank with a dizzy speed. In that descent, without vibration, and silent, save for the dripping of water on the iron roof, the lamps flickered low, and in their vague half-light the fissures and elbows of the rock showed mysteriously—an interminable line of shades, which went like arrows fleeing aloft.

After a minute, the speed slackened suddenly, all feet fixed themselves more firmly on the moving floor, and with a hoarse rasping of bolts and chains, the heavy iron cage came to a stop at the gallery entrance.

They went together into the tunnel, the old man holding the boy by the hand. There was a little movement in the mine, as it was yet early, and they were among the first to arrive. The gallery was high and they could only dimly see a portion of the roof spanned by great wooden beams, while the side walls remained invisible in the profound gloom which filled the vast and dismal excavation.

Some forty yards from their landing place they stopped in front of a kind of grotto hewn from the rock. From the rough, soot-coloured roof hung a tin lantern, whose meagre beams gave the place the appearance of a crypt, mournful and shadowy. Deep in it, seated behind a table and making notes in an enormous register, was a little man, whose pale furrowed face stook out like a white mask upon the murky background. Hearing footsteps, he looked up, and directed a questioning stare at the old man, who advanced timidly, saying in a respecful and submissive voice: "I've brought the little fellow, sir."

The clerk surveyed the small, weak body. The boy's thin limbs, and the babyish expression of the brown face, with wide-opened eyes like a frightened animal's, impressed him unfavourably, and though his heart had been hardened by the daily spectacle of so much misery, a pity rose within him at the sight of this child, dragged from his games, and condemned, like many another unhappy little creature, to languish wretchedly in the damp galleries of the mine. The severe lines of his face softened, and it was with a pretence of harshness that he spoke to the old man, who watched him, anxious for the result of the examination.

"But, man, this boy is too weak to be working yet. He's your son?"

"Yes, sir."

Then you might have some pity on his tender years, and send him to school for a while before burying him here."

"But, sir," the miner stammered, a note of dolorous supplication in his voice, "We're six in the house, and there's been only one to work. Pablo is eight now, and he must earn the food he eats. And isn't he a miner's son? He's got to do like his elders, that never had any other schooling than the mine."

His hoarse tremulous voice was choked suddenly by a fit of coughing, but his watery eyes kept begging with such persistence that the clerk, conquered by this silent appeal, put a whistle to his lips, and produced a shrill sound that echoed to the depths of the lonely galleries. They heard a clatter of hurried feet, and a silhouette appeared in the doorway.

"Juan," said the little man to the newcomer, "Bring this youngster to Gate Number Twelve, to replace that boy of Jose's, who was killed by the train yesterday." And turning roughly to the elder, who was beginning to mutter his thanks, he added, "I see that last week you didn't do the regulation five boxes. Don't forget that if it happens again, we'll have to get rid of you and have a more active man." An energetic wave of the hand dismissed them.

The three walked silently, between two rows of rails, lengthening or shortening their steps to avoid the sleepers sunk in the miry ground. The guide, a man still young, went in front, and behind came the old man, always holding Pablo by the hand. His chin was sunk upon his chest, and he was deep in thought. The menace in the clerk's words had filled him with terror. For some time it had been apparent to all that his strength was failing, that each day's work brought him nearer to that fatal minimum, which once passed, would convert the ancient workman into a simple encumbrance. It was all in vain that from morn till night, fourteen long hours, like a reptile in the narrow shaft, he would furiously attack the coal, bloodying himself against that inexhaustible vein which so many generations of slaves like himself had but scratched. The bitter and never-ending strife soon brought the youngest and strongest to decrepitude. In their damp and noisome burrow, they bend their backs and wore out their sinews, each morning feeling their flesh creep at the contact of the mineral, as a vicious horse trembles when he sees the shafts. But hunger is a better goad than whip or spur, while the vein vibrated subtly, bitten by the square tooth of the pick, as a sandy shore is eaten by the onward surge of the sea.

A sudden halt of the guide awakened the old man from his dismal soliloquy. Their way was barred by a door and huddled in the angle of the wall and the ground was a dark object, the outlines of which were revealed confusedly by the wavering beams of the lantern. It was a boy of some ten years of age.

With his elbows resting on his knees, and his pale face between his meagre hands, mute and motionless, he did not appear to notice the workmen who passed the gateway and left him plunged anew in the darkness. His wide-open, expressionless eyes were directed obstinately upwards, absorbed perhaps in the contemplation of some imaginary landscape which, like a mirage of the desert, mocked those poor pupils so thirsty for light, damp with the nostalgia of the far-off splendour of day. Charged with the management of that door, he was passing the endless hours of his prison-time in a miserable interment, overwhelmed by the enormous rock-roof that smothered for ever in him the gracious restfulness of childhood—the childhood whose sufferings leave in the heart that understands them an infinite bitterness, a sharp execration for human egoism and cowardice.

The two men and the boy after walking some time in a narrow corridor, emerged into a high gallery, from the roof of which fell a continual rain of heavy drops of water. At intervals could be heard a dull and far-off sound, as if somewhere above their heads a gigantic hammer were beating upon the earth's crust. Pablo listened in wonderment, not knowing that it was the noise of the sea on the crags of the coast. They went a space further, and found themselves at length in front of Gate Number Twelve.

"Here you are!" said the guide, halting close to the door of planks which turned on its fastenings to a wooden frame in the rock. So dense was the darkness that the ruddy lights of the lamps that they carried fastened to the peaks of their leather caps, scarcely permitted them to see this obstacle.

Pablo did not at once understand all this, and silently watched his companions, who, after exchanging a few hurried words, set themselves, with a brisk joviality, to explain the management of the door. The youngster following their directions, opened and shut it repeatedly, removing the uncertainty of the father, who feared that the strength of his son would not suffice for the work. He manifested his satisfaction, passing his rough hand through the tousled hair of his offspring, who so far had betrayed neither weariness nor alarm. His youthful imagination was confused and unsettled by his unfamiliar situation. At times it seemed to him that he was in a darkened room, and every moment he expected to see a window open somewhere and bathe the place in sunlight; but although his untutord heart had already forgotten the terror of the sinking cage, these unaccustomed gestures and caresses were gradually awakening his mistrust.

Far away in the gallery a light glimmered, and there came the rumbling of wheels upon the rails, while a heavy and rapid trotting shook the ground.

"The train!" cried both of the men, and the elder added breathlessly, "Quick, Pablo! Let's see how you do your work!"

The little fellow, with clenched fists, leaned his puny body against the door, which gave slowly until it touched the wall. The operation was scarcely finished when a horse, blackened, sweaty, and tired-looking, passed rapidly in front of them, dragging a line of heavily-laden trucks.

The workmen looked at each other, well pleased. The novice was now a tried doorkeeper, and the old man began to talk to him flatteringly; he was no longer a child like those who stayed above there whining and hanging to their mothers' skirts, but a man, a sturdy fellow, no less than a workman, that is to say, a comrade who must now be treated as such. And he gave him to understand that they would have to leave him alone now, but that he was not to be afraid. There were many others like him doing similar work in the mine. His father would be near, and would come from time to time to see him; and then, the day's toil ended, they would go together home.

Pablo heard all this with an increasing terror, and for answer clutched with both hands at his father's blouse. Until now he had not known exactly what was wanted of him, and the sudden turn taken by what he had conceived to be a simple excursion into the mine made him scared as a deer, dominated by the one frantic desire to quit that place, see his mother and brothers, and be once more in the light of day. To every affectionate argument he replied with a wailing and tremulous "Let us go!" Neither promises nor threats could weaken him, and the "Let us go, father!" burst from his lips each time more dolorous and appealing.

The old man's face revealed a keen disappointment, but the sight of those tearful eyes raised to him in anguished supplication changed his incipient wrath to an infinite pity. The paternal love that had lain dormant in the innermost depths of his being awoke in all its strength. The boy was so weak and tiny yet!

The recollection of his own life, of those forty years of work and suffering, passed before him, and with a profound disillusionment he had to admit that for the fruit of all that immense labour there remained to him a worn out body, soon to be cast from the mine as a hindrance; and at the thought that the same destiny was awaiting this poor, little creature, there swept over him a sudden imperious desire to snatch the prey from the jaws of this insatiable monster that took the children from their mothers' laps to make them outcasts, whose shoulders bent with the same stoicism under their master's brutal blows as under the fierce caress of the ever-inclining rock.

But this incipient sentiment of rebellion was quickly killed by the thought of his wretched home, and the hungry and half-naked beings whose only support he was; and all his ... ng experience showed him how foolish was his dream. The mine never let go what it had once taken; and like new links taking the place of the old and worn ones in an endless chain, the sons followed the fathers, so that in that deep well the ebb and fall of the living tide was never interrupted. And the little ones who breathed the poisoned air of the mine grew up warped, weak and bloodless; but to that they had to

The wireless wave is contained in a wooden trunking laid midway between the rails.

The system so operates that a train entering a block stops the wave in the block to the rear, giving the danger condition to a train entering that block. The current runs to meet the train always. The receiving device is located on the foot, or running board of the locomotive, and consists of a rotating coherer for receiving the current, a train line valve and an air whistle, both controlled by this coherer. Connected with the coherer is a receiving antennae suspended beneath the engine, six inches above the wooden trunking in the middle of the track. When the block ahead is safe the wireless wave emanating from the wave wire continuously spans the gap between the trunking and the moving train, assuring the engineer that all is well. Three seconds after this continuity is broken by some train occupying the block ahead the air whistle gives warning to the engineer. Three seconds more and the brakes are applied to the train,

SIR THOMAS SHAUGHNESSY.
President C. P. R.

The following dispatch gives the full story of the invention of the C. P. R. system of wireless train control:

Engine No. 798 of the Canadian Pacific service thundering along at a speed of 45 miles an hour between North Parkdale and West Toronto, last fall, was brought to a standstill with the throttle wide open, the steam gauge registering a pressure of 190 pounds, and Engineer Tom Hatha standing in his cab, a mere spectator.

The brakes had been applied on the big locomotive and train of twelve cars by electricity. The engineer's hand had nothing whatever to do with it, and there was something absolutely uncanny in the demonstration. It seemed as though some giant hand had seized the equipment while in full career and held it as easily as does a policeman a small boy.

F. W. PRENTICE.
Inventor of Wireless Train Control.

Culmination of Tests.

Experiments with a wireless train control system have been quietly conducted on that part of C. P. R. right of way for some time, and the demonstration was the culmination of a long series of successful tests. Engine No. 798 weighs, when loaded, close to 115 tons. The twelve cars making up the train would make, on a conservative estimate, about 240 tons more. When one takes into consideration the speed at which the train was running, the grip of the wireless at once commands attention.

This automatic train-control system is the invention of a Toronto man, Frank W. Prentice, of Melbourne Avenue, and the wizard Marconi can claim some small credit for the idea.

Fourteen or fifteen years ago, when the exploits of the little Italian genius were the talk of the world, Mr. Prentice became interested. At that time she was a dispatcher for the Canadian Pacific in Toronto, Ont. A Toronto man wanted to have a wireless apparatus built for advertising, and the operator built it for him. Shortly afterwards he moved to Pittsburg to the Baltimore & Ohio Railway, where he became chief clerk to the chief dispatcher of that road, in the Smoky City.

Dream Suggested Wireless.

Fourteen years ago, on the 13th day of August, there was a head-on collision between a stock train and a passenger train on the line in which a friend of his was involved. He worried about it a good deal, and that night had a dream of placing a wireless generator on the van to prevent such accidents. Awakening with the idea still in his mind, he commenced work, and has been at it ever since.

The Baltimore & Ohio Company paid $40,000 for his experiments, which were conducted on the ten-mile stretch of track between Relay and Elkridge, out of Baltimore—the same mileage where Morse, of telegraphic fame, sent his first successful message, and where the first locomotive was first successfully operated by steam. Since then he has been conducting experiments on the C. P. R.

DISPATCHING TRAINS BY TELEPHONE ON THE C. P. R.
Over 4,000 miles of the Canadian Pacific Railway's lines are now equipped with telephone train dispatching circuits. This is a great deal safer than the old method of dispatching trains by telegraph, and besides has the added value of allowing quick communication between a train stalled or derailed between stations and the nearest dispatcher.

APPRENTICES AT WORK IN THE ANGUS SHOPS.
Apprentices at the Angus Shops of the Canadian Pacific Railway at Montreal are very carefully trained. When a boy enters the shops he is first of all given a thorough grounding in the principles of reading, writing, and arithmetic, and is then put to work under a competent instructor. During this course of studies his pay goes on at the same rate as though he were working. The C. P. R. builds all its own rolling stock, and its equipment is all thoroughly overhauled every year, thus minimizing the danger arising from defective parts.

resign themselves, for to that they had been born.

So with more resolution the old man took from his belt a thin strong cord, and in spite of the boy's resistance and entreaties, bound it round his middle, and tied the other end to a thick bolt fastened in the rock. Many pieces of frayed twine hanging from the nail showed that this was not the first time it had served a like turn.

Half dead with terror, the child kept uttering penetrating cries, and they had to employ violence to drag him from his father's legs. His pleadings and clamours filled the gallery, but the tender victim, more unfortunate than the Biblical Isaac, did not hear a friendly voice to hold back that paternal arm uplifted against its own flesh and blood through the crime and the iniquity of men.

So desolate, so piercing and tremulous was the accent of the calling voice, that the unhappy father, as he departed, felt his resolution wavering once more. But the weakness was again only momentary, and putting his hands over his ears to shut out those cries that were rending his heart, he hurried his steps to get away. Before leaving the gallery he halted a moment and listened. A tiny voice, weak as a sigh, kept calling far away there . . . "Mother Mother!"

Then he took to running like a madman, pursued ever by that haunting sound, and did not pause until he came to the vein. The sight of it changed his grief to a furious anger, and grasping the pick, he attacked it madly. His blows fell upon the unfeeling bulk like thick hail upon a window pane, and the iron tooth bit into the glittering black mass, loosening great lumps that mounted up between the worker's feet, while a thick dust covered the wavering light of the lantern like a veil.

Splinters of the coal flew about with violence, wounding his face and neck, and his bared chest. Drops of blood mingled with the sweat that covered his body, as he burrowed in to the breach that he was opening widening it with the zeal of the convict who bores into the wall of his cell; but without the hope that feeds and sustains the prisoner . . . the hope to find at the end of his toil a new life, full of sunshine and fresh air and freedom.—Baldomero Lillo.

The Quickest Cough Cure—Cheap, But Unequaled

Sixteen Ounces of it for 50c. Saves You $2. Does the Work Quickly or Money Refunded.

For quick, positive results, the 16 ounces of cough syrup that you make with a 50-cent bottle of Pinex, cannot be equalled. It takes hold instantly and will usually stop the most obstinate deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Even croup and whooping cough yield to it quickly.

The user of Pinex mixes it with home-made sugar syrup. This gives you sixteen ounces—a family supply—of better cough remedy than you could buy ready mixed for $2.50. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions in package.

Pinex soothes and heals the inflamed membranes with remarkable rapidity. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative, and tastes good—children like it. Excellent for hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis, and other throat troubles, and has a wonderful record in cases of incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Too Much Gold.

An interesting suggestion is made in regard to the increased cost of living, which, like an earth wave, has sent a tremor throughout Europe, causing food riots in France, an outcry against the butchers in Belgium and protests against dearer meat and milk in Germany, while it is largely responsible for the labor unrest in England.

This suggestion is that the enormous output of gold in recent years has upset the balance of prices and that the world has not yet shaken itself down to a true adjustment.

Statistics show conclusively that in England, on the continent, and in North America nearly all the commoner and most necessary articles of food have been steadily rising in price since the century opened. Meat, especially bacon, in England the poor man's favorite food; milk, bread and sugar all cost more. It is calculated that there is a ten per cent. increase in the weekly budget of household expenses in England.

Prof. Chapman, at a recent meeting of the British Association predicted that the next three years would be an era of strikes, due to the fact that, whereas up to 1896 the cost of living had been falling it had since then been rising.

A King's Reward.

Lord Willoughby de Broke, who has been prominent in the war with the peers, comes from the same stock as Lord Willoughby de Eresby (now Lord Ancaster) and Sir John Willoughby. The name was taken from the manor of Willoughby, in Lincolnshire, but Lord Willoughby de Broke is a Warwickshire peer; Compton Verney and Kineton House, his seats, both being near Warwick.

The first Lord Willoughby de Broke was made a peer by Henry VII., whom he had helped at Bosworth Field. His son and successor died in 1522, and the barony went into abeyance, and so continued until 1604.

In that year it was claimed by and granted to Sir Richard Verney, as senior male descendant of Elizabeth Willoughby, the eldest granddaughter of the second baron.

THE STREET PLAYERS

LONDON AT NIGHT TEEMS WITH FREE VAUDEVILLE SHOWS.

Bedford Place Is a Typical Example of the Haunts of the Catchpenny Actors Who Range From Acrobats to Tragedians—Some Perform for Charity and Excellent Talent Is to Be Seen for a Penny.

In the daytime Bedford Place, London, the home of the well-to-do visitors in the city, has little to recommend it besides its floating population, and they usually float early to the Abbey, St. Paul's and the National Gallery. After nightfall, however, excellent entertainment of the continuous variety order is provided.

The performance begins immediately after dinner, when the strangers are starting to the theatres and maids in all conditions of slatternliness rush madly to the square to pick up taxicabs and ride back in them with the air of my lady on her way to a drawing-room.

The big show begins with the magical irruption of all sorts of wandering minstels, says a recent writer. Magic must really work in this plain, matter-of-fact region; you might be scanning the upper and lower ends of this place and reporting, like sister Anne, that you saw nothing, when lo! in front of your very door, to right and left of you, spring itinerant musicians, acrobats, opera singers, actors—it is as if the stony pavement had yawned and yielded them up for your diversion.

Beneath the open windows of the boarding houses, "board residences," hotels, apartments, the strange entertainment is now in full swing. We have brought out uncomfortable, backless stools and sit down with the firm determination to be amused at as small an expenditure of pennies as possible. Our particular villain is a violinist who plays an "Ave Maria" as well as it can be played on four strings. Our neighbors to right and left have drawn a gayer lot, a singer of the worn-out stuff from the halls and a tumbler who is also a ventriloquist. In a few minutes, however, there will be a shift and we may get either tumbler or singer, while the stolid auditors one side or other will have to put up with the virtuoso. Across the street there are other performers and the medley goes on as such things do in Pandemonium; each singer, dancer, musician, pursues his little program (empties his bags of tricks, to be quite professional) as if he were the cynosure of the street: It would be impossible to recognise the slow, stupid, ugly Bedford Place of daytime while this tumultuous variety of noises fills it from end to end.

Listen! A stentorian voice from the upper end of the Place dominates the clashing sounds.

"The first dramatic impersonation I will give you this evening, ladies and gentlemen, is the closing act of 'The Only Way,' from the famous novel by Charles Dickens, 'The Tale of Two Cities.' I will, with your kind permission, represent Sydney Carton."

This was perfunctory politeness, for without anybody's permission the shabby Thespian strode into the middle of the street, dashed his hat onto the pavement and launched into the tragedy. The man was by no means a bad actor. His voice was susceptible of great changes; it could be tender and sweet, it could be rich and powerful. While he acted the other performers at a little distance went on with their work undisturbed by the tragedian or he by them. Only the one-legged man who had a trained dog and the dwarf tumbler who happened to be nearest paused in their labors and gave poor Sydney Carton the tribute of a tear.

As the slow twilight faded out and the slower stream of bronze dribbled into their unwashed palms the performers gradually worked their way out of the Place in the direction of Ennesley Gardens. The pavement Irving had passed the hat and disappeared; the tumbler, the ventriloquist, the comic singer had vanished, and only the violinist with four strings still lingered, ready to play the "Ave" over again for the smallest encouragement. But even he made haste to dive into the outer shadows when, with a show of caparisoned steed, mysterious covered cart and loud staccato note from a hidden piano, entered the Masked Musicians, prepared to give their concert.

It was my first sight of this eminently British institution, and I waited with something like a thrill to see what make their perennial fascination. The black-palled cart halted, the piano gave out a gentle tinkle, steps were lowered and two men and a woman modishly dressed like dinner guests and wearing velvet masks descended and stood in front of the cart. Their first selection, given in the conventional concert style, is from an ancient florid opera; then the men step back and lean negligently on the wheels of the cart while the prima donna shrills the aria of "Santuzia." A good baritone voice follows with sentimental song of the day, his mate "obliges" with a shrieking tenor, there is a final trio, and the concert is over save for the penny catching. Baritone, a slim, elegant figure in a perfectly fitted dress suit, holds out his shining silk hat as if conferring a favor; the other masks stand in attitudes of easy unconcern, not even whispering to each other—all is carried out with the most polished decorum; it is like a game, the carrying out of a wager. Pence roll in thickly and there is no sordid suggestion.

This is the featured act of the Bedford Place vaudeville. No sooner have the maskers faded away as silently as they came than the minor performers re-emerge from the shadows to reap but a languid interest and few pennies. Indeed, it is eleven o'clock, and Russell Square economical of gas as of other material comforts, is turning it off and going to bed.

Her Query.

"Yes, ma'am, this is spring lamb," declared the butcher.

"Which spring?" asked the careful housewife.

MISSIONS AND EMPIRE.

The Gospel Bearers Have Won Lands For Britain.

It may not be generally known, but it is none the less a fact that Britain owes several of her recent acquisitions of territory to the work or influence of missionaries. We give a batch of illustrations from the latest recruiting ground, Africa.

The expansion of South Africa is largely the work of the missionaries. In Bechuanaland the northern route was for a long time kept open solely by their influence. Some of the earliest roads were known as "Missionary Roads," and many place-names preserve the memory of individuals.

Indirectly the missionaries account for the Transvaal and Orange River Provinces, our latest acquisitions For though we had to pay $1,000,000,000 for the war of conquest, in contrast to the inexpensiveness of missionary labor, it was nevertheless to the latter that the great Boer Trek of 1836 was due, which resulted in the founding of the republics. For had not Dr. Philip been so doughty a champion of the natives, and so trusted an adviser of the Government, the Boers would never have moved out.

Of the great achievements of Livingstone it is unnecessary to speak; but we must not forget that they opened the country to successive incursions of Englishmen, and that John Mackenzie, the missionary, was one of the first to follow him. It was Mackenzie who saved the native states from extinction by the Boers, and, as Deputy Commissioner of Bechuanaland helped to found that province. It has been said that if his advice had been taken the Boer War would have been averted. And a high authority has added that if the missionaries of Christ had preceded those of Empire the whole of the nine Kaffir wars might also have been saved.

The Moffat Treaty of 1868 with the Matabeles laid the foundation of Rhodesia for Britain. Yet that treaty was the work of a missionary, the Rev. J. S. Moffat, son of the famous Dr. Moffat.

Basutoland, the Switzerland of South Africa, we owe to a French missionary, Coillard of the Zambesi. Moshesh, the able Basuto chief, governed with a Cabinet of French missionaries After inflicting a severe defeat on Britain's forces in 1852, he wrote to their commander a letter in which he offered peace, saying, "I am ashamed of what happened yesterday. Let it be forgotten. Oh, my master, I am still your man. I am still the child of the Queen." After such a politic and Christian epistle it is not surprising to find that in due course Basutoland was received under our protection on the most favorable terms. The Basutos are said by Bryce to have made greater progress in civilization than any other Kaffir race. Their imports in 1903 were over $1,500,000.

Barotseland, also now known as Northwest Rhodesia, is due to French missionaries. Though it is as big as the German empire it did not cost Great Britain a single life. Coillard advised Lewanika, the king, to put himself under the protection of some European nation, and with great disinterestedness recommended the British. Convinced by past experience of the good judgment of the missionary, Lewanika agreed, and in consequence his country became a British Protectorate in 1890.

Northeast Rhodesia, again, we owe to Stewart of Lovedale. By his exploration of the Shire country, he supplied Lord Salisbury with the information on which he formed the British Central Africa Protectorate. By the founding of Livingstonia he did much more still to establish our authority there. And as it was we were only just in time to anticipate the great partition of the continent, and to resist the Portuguese claim to the Nyassa region as well. As Cecil Rhodes once said, "We owe all Rhodesia to you Scotch missionaries." Or as Stead more dramatically put it, "The frontier has advanced on the stepping-stones of missionary graves."

Lord Avebury's Pet Wasp.

The wasp is becoming a nuisance, and there are few who would choose a wasp as a companion. But Lord Avebury, who was Sir John Lubbock, is among the few. Some years ago he captured a wasp in the Pyrenees and he kept her for nine months. "I had no difficulty," he writes, "in inducing her to feed on my hand; but at first she was shy and nervous. She kept her sting in constant readiness, and once or twice in the train, when the railway officials came for tickets and I was compelled to hurry her back into her bottle, she stung me slightly. I think, however, entirely from fright. Gradually she became quite used to me, and when I took her on my hand apparently expected to be fed. She even allowed me to stroke her without any appearance of fear, and for some months I never saw her sting." The wasp ultimately succumbed to the rigor of an English February, "and she now occupies a place in the British Museum."—London Daily Chronicle.

Population of Scotland.

In a Parliamentary return issued showing the areas, population and valuation of the counties, burghs and parishes in Scotland, the total area, revised by the Ordnance Survey Department up to December 31, 1910, was given as 19,070,466 acres, the population at the census of the present year 4,759,445, and the total valuation £32,835,947. The most populous county is Lanark, with 1,447,113, the next in order being Edinburgh with 507,062 and Renfrew with 314,574. The highest valuations are Lanark £9,693,644; Edinburgh, £4,765,096; Aberdeen, £1,965,121, and Renfrew, £1,896,28.9

Lived on Shellfish.

There died the other day, at the age of 83, a hermit named Lewis, who for the last twenty years has existed on shellfish and lived on his covered trawler, beached at Lower Fishguard. He never varied his dietary, except when shellfish were scarce, and then he substituted bread and cheese. To within two days of his death he was in robust health.

Mr. Crawford—The only way for me to avoid these payments is to put everything I own in your name.

Mrs. Crawford—Won't it be just lovely for me to have all that money to spend?—Judge.

A GOOD INVESTMENT

A Solid Manufacturing Business stabilished over twenty-five years present output about $570,000 per year; net profit on this amount 20 per cent. resign themselves, for to that they had been born.

So with more resolution the old man took from his belt a thin strong cord, and in spite of the boy's resistance and entreaties, bound it round his middle, and tied the other end to a thick bolt fastened in the rock. Many pieces of frayed twine hanging from the nail showed that this was not the first time it had served a like turn.

Half dead with terror, the child kept uttering penetrating cries, and they had to employ violence to drag him from his father's legs. His pleadings and clamours filled the gallery, but the tender victim, more unfortunate than the Biblical Isaac, did not hear a friendly voice to hold back that paternal arm uplifted against its own flesh and blood through the crime and the iniquity of men.

So desolate, so piercing and tremulous was the accent of the calling voice, that the unhappy father, as he departed, felt his resolution wavering once more. But the weakness was again only momentary, and putting his hands over his ears to shut out those cries that were rending his heart, he hurried his steps to get away. Before leaving the gallery, he halted a moment and listened. A tiny voice, weak as a sigh, kept calling far away there . . . "Mother Mother!"

Then he took to running like a madman, pursued ever by that haunting sound, and did not pause until he came to the vein. The sight of it changed his grief to a furious anger, and grasping the pick, he attacked it madly. His blows fell upon the unfeeling bulk like thick hail upon a window pane, and the iron tooth bit into the glittering black mass, loosening great lumps that mounted up between the worker's feet, while a thick dust covered the wavering light of the lantern like a veil.

Splinters of the coal flew about with violence, wounding his face and neck, and his bared chest. Drops of blood mingled with the sweat that covered his body, as he burrowed in to the breach that he was opening widening it with the zeal of the convict who bores into the wall of his cell; but without the hope that feeds and sustains the prisoner . . . the hope to find at the end of his toil a new life, full of sunshine and fresh air and freedom.—Baldomero Lillo.

The Quickest Cough Cure—Cheap, But Unequaled

Sixteen Ounces of it for 50c. Saves You $2. Does the Work Quickly or Money Refunded.

For quick, positive results, the 16 ounces of cough syrup that you make with a 50-cent bottle of Pinex, cannot be equalled. It takes hold instantly and will usually stop the most obstinate deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. Even croup and whooping cough yield to it quickly.

The user of Pinex mixes it with home-made sugar syrup. This gives you sixteen ounces—a family supply—of better cough remedy than you could buy ready mixed for $2.50. Easily prepared in 5 minutes—full directions in package.

Pinex soothes and heals the inflamed membranes with remarkable rapidity. It stimulates the appetite, is slightly laxative, and tastes good—children like it. Excellent for hoarseness, asthma, bronchitis, and other throat troubles, and has a wonderful record in cases of incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

Too Much Gold.

An interesting suggestion is made in regard to the increased cost of living, which, like an earth wave, has sent a tremor throughout Europe, causing food riots in France, an outcry against the butchers in Belgium and protests against dearer meat and milk in Germany, while it is largely responsible for the labor unrest in England.

This suggestion is that the enormous output of gold in recent years has upset the balance of prices and that the world has not yet shaken itself down to a true adjustment.

Statistics show conclusively that in England, on the continent, and in North America nearly all the commoner and most necessary articles of food have been steadily rising in price since the century opened. Meat, especially bacon, in England the poor man's favorite food; milk, bread and sugar all cost more. It is calculated that there is a ten per cent. increase in the weekly budget of household expenses in England.

Prof. Chapman, at a recent meeting of the British Association predicted that the next three years would be an era of strikes, due to the fact that, whereas up to 1896 the cost of living had been falling it had since then been rising.

A King's Reward.

Lord Willoughby de Broke, who has been prominent in the war with the peers, comes from the same stock as Lord Willoughby de Eresby (now Lord Ancaster) and Sir John Willoughby. The name was taken from the manor of Willoughby, in Lincolnshire, but Lord Willoughby de Broke is a Warwickshire peer; Compton Verney and Kineton House, his seats, both being near Warwick.

The first Lord Willoughly de Broke was made a peer by Henry VII., whom he had helped at Bosworth Field. His son and successor died in 1523, and the barony went into abeyance, and so continued until 1604.

In that year it was claimed by and granted to Sir Richard Verney, as senior male descendant of Elizabeth Willoughby, the eldest granddaughter of the second baron.

THE STREET PLAYERS

LONDON AT NIGHT TEEMS WITH FREE VAUDEVILLE SHOWS.

Bedford Place Is a Typical Example of the Haunts of the Catchpenny Actors Who Range From Acrobats to Tragedians—Some Perform for Charity and Excellent Talent Is to Be Seen for a Penny.

In the daytime Bedford Place, London, the home of the well-to-do visitors in the city, has little to recommend it besides its floating population, and they usually float early to the Abbey, St. Paul's and the National Gallery. After nightfall, however, excellent entertainment of the continuous variety order is provided.

The performance begins immediately after dinner, when the strangers are starting to the theatres and maids in all conditions of slatternliness rush madly to the square to pick up taxicabs and ride back in them with the air of my lady on her way to a drawing-room.

The big show begins with the magical irruption of all sorts of wandering minstels, says a recent writer. Magic must really work in this plain, matter-of-fact region; you might be scanning the upper and lower ends of this place and reporting, like sister Anne, that you saw nothing, when lo! in front of your very door, to right and left of you, spring itinerant musicians, acrobats, opera singers, actors—it is as if the stony pavement had yawned and yielded them up for your diversion.

Beneath the open windows of the boarding houses, "board residences," hotels, apartments, the strange entertainment is now in full swing. We have brought out uncomfortable, backless stools and sit down with the firm determination to be amused at as small an expenditure of pennies as possible. Our particular villain is a violinist who plays an "Ave Maria" as well as it can be played on four strings. Our neighbors to right and left have drawn a gayer lot, a singer of the worn-out stuff from the halls and a tumbler who is also a ventriloquist. In a few minutes, however, there will be a shift and we may get either tumbler or singer, while the stolid auditors one side or other will have to put up with the virtuoso. Across the street there are other performers and the medley goes on as such things do in Pandemonium; each singer, dancer, musician, pursues his little program (empties his bags of tricks, to be quite professional) as if he were the cynosure of the street. It would be impossible to recognize the slow, stupid, ugly Bedford Place of daytime while this tumultuous variety of noises fills it from end to end.

Listen! A stentorian voice from the upper end of the Place dominates the clashing sounds.

"The first dramatic impersonation I will give you this evening, ladies and gentlemen, is the closing act of 'The Only Way,' from the famous novel by Charles Dickens, 'The Tale of Two Cities.' I will, with your kind permission, represent Sydney Carton."

This was perfunctory politeness, for without anybody's permission the shabby Thespian strode into the middle of the street, dashed his hat onto the pavement and launched into the tragedy. The man was by no means a bad actor. His voice was susceptible of great changes; it could be tender and sweet, it could be rich and powerful. While he acted the other performers at a little distance went on with their work undisturbed by the tragedian or he by them. Only the one-legged man who had a trained dog and the dwarf gumbler who happened to be nearest paused in their labors and gave poor Sydney Carton the tribute of a tear.

As the slow twilight faded out and the slower stream of bronze dribbled into their unwashed palms the performers gradually worked their way out of the Place in the direction of Ennesley Gardens. The pavement Irving had passed the hat and disappeared: the tumbler, the ventriloquist, the comic singer had vanished, and only the violinist with four strings still lingered, ready to play the "Ave" over again for the smallest encouragement. But even he made haste to dive into the outer shadows when, with a show of caparisoned steed, mysterious covered cart and loud staccato note from a hidden piano, entered the Masked Muzicians, prepared to give their concert.

It was my first sight of this eminently British institution, and I waited with something like a thrill to see what make their perennial fascination. The black-palled cart halted, the piano gave out a gentle tinkle, steps were lowered and two men and a woman modishly dressed like dinner guests and wearing velvet masks descended and stood in front of the cart. Their first selection, given in the conventional concert style, is from an ancient florid opera; then the men step back and lean negligently on the wheels of the cart while the prima donna shrills the aria of "Santuzia." A good baritone voice follows with sentimental song of the day, his mate "obliges" with a shrieking tenor, there is a final trio, and the concert is over save for the penny catching. Baritone, a slim, elegant figure in a perfectly fitted dress suit, holds out his shining silk hat as if conferring a favor; the other masks stand in attitudes of easy unconcern, not even whispering to each other—all is carried out with the most polished decorum; it is like a game, the carrying out of a wager. Pence roll in thickly and there is no sordid suggestion.

This is the featured act of the Bedford Place vaudeville. No sooner have the maskers faded away as silently as they came than the minor performers re-emerge from the shadows to reap but a languid interest and few pennies. Indeed, it is eleven o'clock, and Russell Square, economical of gas as of other material comforts, is turning it off and going to bed.

Her Query.

"Yes, ma'am this is spring lamb," declared the butcher.

"Which spring?" asked the careful housewife.

MISSIONS AND EMPIRE.

The Gospel Bearers Have Won Lands For Britain.

It may not be generally known, but it is none the less a fact that Britain owes several of her recent acquisitions of territory to the work or influence of missionaries. We give a batch of illustrations from the latest recruiting ground, Africa.

The expansion of South Africa is largely the work of the missionaries. In Bechuanaland the northern route was for a long time kept open solely by their influence. Some of the earliest roads were known as "Missionary Roads," and many place-names preserve the memory of individuals.

Indirectly the missionaries account for the Transvaal and Orange River Provinces, our latest acquisitions For though we had to pay $1,000,000,000 for the war of conquest, in contrast to the inexpensiveness of missionary labor, it was nevertheless to the latter that the great Boer Trek of 1836 was due, which resulted in the founding of the republics. For had not Dr. Philip been so doughty a champion of the natives, and so trusted an adviser of the Government, the Boers would never have moved out.

Of the great achievements of Livingstone it is unnecessary to speak; but we must not forget that they opened the country to successive incursions of Englishmen, and that John Mackenzie, the missionary, was one of the first to follow him. It was Mackenzie who saved the native states from extinction by the Boers, and, as Deputy Commissioner of Bechuanaland helped to found that province. It has been said that if his advice had been taken the Boer War would have been averted. And a high authority has added that if the missionaries of Christ had preceded those of Empire the whole of the nine Kaffir wars might also have been saved.

The Moffat Treaty of 1868 with the Matabeles laid the foundation of Rhodesia for Britain. Yet that treaty was the work of a missionary, the Rev. J. S. Moffat, son of the famous Dr. Moffat.

Basutoland, the Switzerland of South Africa, we owe to a French missionary, Coillard of the Zambesi. Moshesh, the able Basuto chief, governed with a Cabinet of French missionaries After inflicting a severe defeat on Britain's forces in 1852, he wrote to their commander a letter in which he offered peace, saying, "I am ashamed of what happened yesterday. Let it be forgotten. Oh, my master, I am still your man. I am still the child of the Queen." After such a politic and Christian epistle it is not surprising to find that in due course Basutoland was received under our protection on the most favorable terms. The Basutos are said by Bryce to have made greater progress in civilisation than any other Kaffir race. Their imports in 1903 were over $1,500,000.

Barotseland, also now known as Northwest Rhodesia, is due to French missionaries. Though it is as big as the German empire it did not cost Great Britain a single life. Coillard advised Lewanika, the king, to put himself under the protection of some European nation, and with great disinterestedness recommended the British. Convinced by past experience of the good judgment of the missionary, Lewanika agreed, and in consequence his country became a British Protectorate in 1890.

Northeast Rhodesia, again, we owe to Stewart of Lovedale. By his exploration of the Shire country, he supplied Lord Salisbury with the information on which he formed the British Central Africa Protectorate. By the founding of Livingstonia he did much more still to establish our authority there. And as it was we were only just in time to anticipate the great partition of the continent, and to resist the Portuguese claim to the Nyassa region as well. As Cecil Rhodes once said, "We owe all Rhodesia to you Scotch missionaries." Or as Stead more dramatically put it, "The frontier has advanced on the stepping-stones of missionary graves."

Lord Avebury's Pet Wasp.

The wasp is becoming a nuisance, and there are few who would choose a wasp as a companion. But Lord Avebury, who was Sir John Lubbock, is among the few. Some years ago he captured a wasp in the Pyrenees and he kept her for nine months. "I had no difficulty," he writes, "in inducing her to feed on my hand; but at first she was shy and nervous. She kept her sting in constant readiness, and once or twice in the train, when the railway officials came for tickets and I was compelled to hurry her back into her bottle, she stung me slightly. I think, however, entirely from fright. Gradually she became quite used to me, and when I took her on my hand apparently expected to be fed. She even allowed me to stroke her without any appearance of fear, and for some months I never saw her sting." The wasp ultimately succumbed to the rigor of an English February, "and she now occupies a place in the British Museum."—London Daily Chronicle.

Population of Scotland.

In a Parliamentary return issued showing the areas, population and valuation of the counties, burghs and parishes in Scotland, the total area, revised by the Ordnance Survey Department up to December 31, 1910, was given as 19,070,466 acres, the population at the census of the present year 4,759,445, and the total valuation £32,836,947. The most populous county is Lanark, with 1,447,113, the next in order being Edinburgh with 507,-662 and Renfrew with 314,574. The highest valuations are Lanark £9,694,-644; Edinburgh, £4,765,096; Aberdeen, £1,965,121, and Renfrew, £1,895,28.9

Lived on Shellfish.

There died the other day, at the age of 82, a hermit named Lewis, who for the last twenty years has existed on shellfish and lived on his covered trawler, beached at Lower Fishguard. He never varied his dietary, except when shellfish were scarce, and then he substituted bread and cheese. To within two days of his death he was in robust health.

Mr. Crawford—The only way for me to avoid these payments is to put everything I own in your name.

Mrs. Crawford—Won't it be just lovely for me to have all that money to spend!—Judge.

A BORDED TRAGEDY.

Drunken Man With Dead Wife Since Friday Last.

Montreal, Oct. 19.—Her face blue, her body swollen, bloodstains on her clothes and on the bed covers—this was the condition in which the police found Mrs. William Doolt, as she lay dead on the bed in a squalid little room on the third floor at No. 72 Inspector street.

His eyes bleary, his breath heavy, seated in the midst of whisky and beer bottles, dead drunk — this was the condition in which they found her husband, who sprawled on the floor at the foot of the bed.

The woman evidently died on Saturday or on Friday night. Every day the man passed in and out of the room as though nothing unusual had occurred. The fearful odor of the past two days caused the landlady, Mrs. Mary Hardy, to tell the man that he must leave at once. Tuesday night the occupants of the house heard him shaking his dead wife and telling her that she must get up, that they had to get out of the house at once. Those who heard did not know that the woman was dead. That was not discovered till yesterday morning.

The autopsy will decide whether William Doolt, who now lies in a cell in the police station, too drunk to murmur a word of explanation, shall be held on a more serious charge than drunkenness. The woman may have died of heart disease. But when she was examined at the morgue yesterday morning, merely a cursory examination, it was thought better not to wash the blood from what appeared to be a bad cut in the head.

Use Canada as Pawn.

London, Oct. 19.—The Manchester Guardian deals very sarcastically with Tuesday night's meeting at Chelsea, which was convened to celebrate Canada's rejection of reciprocity with the United States.

"With its aspersion upon a vast mass of loyal Canadians, with its criticism of the British Ambassador at Washington, with its sneers at the Unionist leader from his own followers and its endeavor to associate the Dominion Government with a rather coarse exhibition of party politics, this Chelsea meeting was a very pretty exhibition of how to consolidate the Empire."

The Westminster Gazette dubs it a "cock-a-doodle-do meeting."

There appears in the same paper a letter signed "Canadian Conservative," which says: "Those in Canada who, like myself, were opposed to reciprocity were actuated by two motives. First, through resentment to what seemed like American dictation and secondly through fear of drifting away from Britain. It was astounded to find at the meeting last night that we had been making an appeal to England to put a tax on wheat."

Three Canadian Heroes.

Pittsburg, Oct. 19.—Edgar A. Current will receive a bronze medal and $3,000 in cash towards paying for his education, as a result of his heroism in saving a boy from drowning at Toronto on June 27, 1909. This was one of the interesting announcements made here yesterday by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission. Forty-seven bronze and 12 silver medals were awarded at the fall meeting of the commission. Besides cash awards of $53,306, pensions amounting to $315 a month were left to survivors of men who had risked their lives to save others. Thirteen of the heroes paid with their lives their devotion to humanity.

Other Canadian participants in the awards of the commission are William H. Shaw's mother, who gets a silver medal and $1,000 to liquidate a mortgage on her property, as a result of the heroism of her son in trying to save a companion from drowning at Medicine Hat, July 18, 1909, and the father of Lars C. Risvold, who lost his life trying to save two well-diggers from suffocation at Aylesbury, Sask., Nov. 28, 1907. The father gets a bronze medal and $800 in cash.

Family Nearly Killed.

Toronto, Oct. 19.—When Francis Rea, 1,427 West Bloor street, returned to his home for breakfast yesterday morning he found the house filled with gas. He had left the house just before 7 o'clock and returned at 9. When he left, everything seemed all right, but when he searched for the source of the deadly fumes he found that a supply pipe to a gas stove had become disconnected.

He rushed upstairs and found his wife and two children. His wife had evidently been overcome while in the act of dressing, for she was perfectly clothed. Medical aid was summoned and all were revived.

Sugar May Drop.

Brussels, Oct. 19.—The International Sugar Conference has been summoned to meet at Brussels next week to consider a request made by Russia that she be permitted to denounce the agreement of 1907, whereby her sugar exports were limited until 1913. Russia's reason for this request is the exceptional crop. Her stocks are overwhelming, and she wishes to increase her exports. If the request is granted, the price of sugar will fall in all European markets.

A Big Boat.

Duluth, Oct. 19.—The big steel ore carrier, Col. James M. Schoomaker, the largest bulk freighter on fresh water, cleared yesterday for her first trip down the lakes.

The Schoomaker is 617 feet long, 64 feet beam, 33 feet molded depth, and is said to have a maximum carrying capacity of 14,000 tons at a draught of 21 feet. At Messaba ore dock the Schoomaker took on 10,768 tons.

Storm on Mexican Coast.

Tucson, Ariz., Oct. 19.—Another terrific storm has swept the west coast of Mexico. Eight schooners are reported ashore at Masatlan and the "Frisco" wharf has been severely damaged. The Southern Pacific of Mexico lost all wires at midnight. Up to that time the gale had been blowing for twelve hours.

Montreal Drownings.

Montreal, Oct. 19.—Since the beginning of the year there have been 61 drownings in Montreal district, 17 of which occurred in the Lachine Canal, while nine victims have never been identified. The heavy toll of human life exacted through accidents on the water has been much greater than usual this year.

Claim Conspiracy.

New York, Oct. 19.—When court adjourned last night 11 jurors had been chosen to try Wm. J. Cummins for grand larceny in connection with the collapse of the Carnegie Trust Co. The specific charge alleges larceny of $140,000 in connection with a note transaction. Questions put to talesmen yesterday by counsel for Cummins continued to indicate that the defence will endeavor to prove that Cummins is the victim of a formidable conspiracy.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 18.—Active buying here on the part of foreigners helped lift the price of wheat. There was also a lively demand from non-professional speculators in this country. The Argentine, Russia, Germany and Kansas all sent advices unfavorable to the bears. Close was at a net advance of 5-8 to 1 1-8c. Other leading staples also showed a unanimous gain, corn 5-8 to 1 1-8c, oats 1-4 to 3-8c to 1-3c and provisions 12 1-2 to 15c to 40c.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ¼d to ⅝d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ¼d higher on corn. Antwerp wheat closed unchanged; Paris, ⅛c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—A feature of the grain trade was the much stronger feeling in the market for oats and prices advanced ½c to ⅝c per bushel. The local demand was good, including sales of 50,000 bushels of No. 2 Canadian western, at 45½c ex-store. The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat was better and the prices bid in some cases were ¼d to ½d higher and there were also bids in the market from New York buyers for No. 3 northern, which were flat on the market at the close. A good local trade continues to be done in flour, but bids from abroad were again out of line. There was an increased demand for bran and sales of some round lots were made for export account. A fair trade is passing in cheese, butter and eggs.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 18.—At the Canadian Pacific Live Stock Market the receipts of live stock for the week ending October 14 were 1378 cattle, 2285 sheep and lambs 2235 hogs and 550 calves. The offerings on the market this morning were 1600 cattle, 1540 sheep and lambs, 1000 hogs and 700 calves.

A feature of the trade was the weaker feeling in the market for cattle and prices declined fully ¼c per lb. for good to choice stock and half a cent for the lower grades. This weakness was attributed to the fact that the supply was largely in excess of the requirements of the trade, there being 900 head left over at the close, owing to the fact that the demand from butchers was very limited, as they were already well supplied with stock for the balance of the week.

The trade thruout the day was dull and dragging even at the above reduction in prices noted, and if it had not been for the demand from canners for supplies, who bought about 400 head at 1¾c to 2c per pound for cows and at 2½c to 2¾c for bulls, the condition of the market would have been much worse than it was. The prospects are that prices will go still lower in the near future, as the number of cattle in sight is large.

A few choice northwest steers sold at $5.65 to $5.75, but the bulk of trading done in top grades was at $5.50 to $5.60; good, at $5 to $5.25; medium, at $4.50 to $4.75, and common, at $3 to $4 per cwt. Good butcher cows brought from $3.25 to $4.75, and medium, $3 to $4 per cwt. The demand for milch cows is very good at $35 to $70 per head for good to choice milkers, and at $25 to $35 for common and medium.

Supplies of sheep and lambs were also in excess of the demand and in consequence the tone of the market was weaker and prices ruled lower. Sheep, ewes, sold at 3½c to 3¾c, and bucks and culls, at 2½c to 3¼c per lb. Lambs, weighing from 80 to 85 lbs., brought 5c to 5¼c per pound.

There was a good demand for calves, of which the offerings were ample to fill all requirements and sales of extra choice heavy ones were made at $15 to $20 each and the commoner ones at from $3 to $12 each.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for hogs, prices being about steady under a fair demand from packers and sales of selected lots were made at $6.35 to $6.50, and heavy lots at $5.75 to $6 per cwt., weighed off the cars.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 18.—Cattle—Receipts, 250 head; market, trade light, steady; prime steers, $7 to $7.50; butcher grades, $6.25 to $6.90.

An Innovation in Oil Heaters

The Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater, with its drums enameled in turquoise, is an ornament to any room, whether in the country or city home.

No home is quite complete without a Perfection Oil Heater. It is a necessity in the fall and spring, when it is too warm to start the regular heating apparatus, and too cool to be without heat. In the midst of winter it is often convenient as an auxiliary heater, as there are always some cold corners in a house.

The enameled heater always presents a nice appearance, as the enamel will not tarnish or burn off. It is not an "enamel paint," but it is the same as the enamel of your cooking utensils.

The Perfection is the most reliable and convenient portable heating device you can find. An automatically-locking flame spreader prevents turning the wick high enough to smoke.

FOREIGN REFUGEES STARVING

Foreigners Escaping From Revolutionaries in China Perish of Starvation During the Trip Down the River

RUTHLESS SLAUGHTER

Special to The Examiner.

SHANGHAI, OCT. 19.—Six steamers packed with refugees from Hankow, including a large number of foreigners, arrived here this morning and the report from them is that the rebels hold all the big cities of that part of China and that massacres of Manchus have occurred in several places. The leaders of revolutionary movement depreciate the ruthless slaughter of the Manchus, but are powerless to control the mobs of Chinese who have for years been thirsting for the blood of those who reduced them to comparative servitude. Many refugees, some of them foreigners, died from starvation on the trip down the river.

$85,000 GRANT FOR THE NEW SCHOOLS

CORNER WATER AND BROCK STREETS THE SITE FOR THE NEW CITY HALL

Matter Was Up Before City Council at Meeting Last Night and City Trust Commissioners Are Advised to Buy Property as an Investment---Commissioners Refuse to Express Opinion on the Question Until They Have Had a Meeting of the Trust to Go into the Matter.

After an hour's consideration and discussion by the City Council last evening, the site for the new city hall was decided upon, as the property at the south-west corner of Brock and Water streets, now occupied by the Fitzgerald's Carriage Works. A number of sites were submitted for the consideration of the Council by Mr. Wm. Langford, who was authorized some time ago to secure options on sites in different parts of the city. This location was deemed by the Council as the best offered, considering the conditins of the others.

A by-law was drawn up by the City Solicitor, the second clause of which covers practically all of the decision, to the effect that the said land shall be purchased for the site of the new city hall, and when purchased shall be conveyed to and held as an investment of the City Trusts Commissioners' sinking funds.

The by-law was then submitted to Messrs. Moore and Kendry, as representatives of the Trust Commissioners, but they refused to express any opinion, on the ground that their views might not be agreeable to the general opinion of the Commissioners.

The Mayor thought that the matter was in the hands of the Commissioners to make any arrangements and he made that statement when the by-law finally was passed.

In addition to the site for the city hall, it was decided to purchase some land for parks. The property where the old drill shed stood in East City, has been promised the city, and the Council decided to purchase a strip of land adjacent to it, upon which some old buildings are situated.

Three acres, the property of the estate of the late Henry Best, in the South Ward, was another plot selected from the numerous offers, for a park, or more for a playing ground for the children of the south end.

When the matter of purchasing these sites was referred to Mr. Moore he refused to express any opinion, maintaining that it was not a matter for the Trust Commissioners, but something within the command of the Council, when money was being invested in public land.

When asked regarding the funds of the Trust, Mr. Moore stated that in all they had only $35,000, including mortagages, etc., but had not nearly that amount in the treasury to be expended upon any present purchases by the City.

The Mayor said that Mr. Moore had told him a few days ago that the Commissioners had $35,000 available.

Mr. Moore said that he stated they had a surplus of $35,000, but as he said before, it was in mortgages and not matured.

Mr. Moore then took some pains in explaining the source of the surplus. He said the Trust Commissioners had $15,000 paid up on the Midland Railway mortgage, leaving $20,000 or $23,000 ,roughly speaking, not yet matured.

Out of this $15,000 they had to pay $1,000 for the public lavatory; $1,000 for the East City property, as well as $5,000 for improvement at the Police Station. Mr. Moore maintained that this would not leave enough to pay for the Henry Best property and the new city hall site, and intimated that the sinking funds would not be resorted to for such purposes.

Mayor Morrow pointed out that there was $10,000 coming from the C. P. R. for the property they had purchased along the river side, but Mr. Moore argued that they might not pay that for two years.

The City Solicitor relieved the situation by saying that the Railway Company would pay it right away.

Mr. Moore, in answer to a query from the Mayor, stated that the Commissioners had no authority to borrow their shortage from the bank.

Mr. Kendry offered a solution by suggesting that they purchase as far as the funds would go.

The Mayor pointed out that the deed of the water front property would be handed over to the C. P. R. as soon as it was certain that the C.P.R. grain line would pass through the city. There was no doubt of this now, so he suggested completing the transaction, and getting the purchase price, $10,000, for which the C. P. R. are at present paying interest.

Mr. Moore suggested that the Commission purchase the Birdsall property, and hold it, as a security until the city furnishes what ever balance of the purchase price remaining above the funds already in hand, is met from the C. P. R's. $10,000 or otherwise.

After considerable further discussion the by-law providing for the purchase of the properties above mentioned, was amended to read that the City Trust Commission hold the Birdsall property until full payment of same provided for by the Council, and that the $10,000 from the C. P. R. be paid to their account to be applied to the purchase of the Birdsall property. The by-law was then carried.

Mr. Moore will submit the demand to a full meeting of the City Trust Commissioners for action.

Mr. Langford, in submitting the options for the consideration of the Council, strongly recommended the purchase of the site chosen for the City Hall as being a good investment for the city. The lot has a 192 ft. frontage on Water street, and 114 feet on Brock street, and will make an ideal site for the city hall.

A HEARTY GOD-SPEED TO REV. FATHER PHELAN

On Occasion of His Retirement From the Parishes of Young's Point and Lakefield and on the Eve of His Going Abroad in Search of Health---Presented With Addresses and a Purse of Gold.

Rev. Father Phelan, has gone on his journey in search of health, with the hearty God-speed of the parishioners to whom he has ministered so faithfully for the past ten years. On the eve of his retirement from the parish, and of his entry on his journey to the south, the congregation of St. Mary's at Young's Point, of St. Paul's, Lakefield, and the Catholic Order of Foresters of the latter place, presented him with addresses. All these addresses recounted the deep regret that failing health should compel the severance of the loving and affectionate relations that had existed between priest and parishioners for ten years; testimony was given to the fidelity and earnestness of his services, to the piety of his life and the zeal he had shown in promoting the interests of the church and of religion. He had won the respect and esteem not only of his parishioners, but of all classes of the community, independently of religious considerations. His kindness to the poor and suffering, and the practical charity by which it was given expression, endeared him to all. He has left a contented and prosperous parish to his successor.

The addresses given the reverend father were not mere tributes of words, but their earnestness was shown by the presentation of a purse of gold of $250.

Rev. Father Phelan went yesterday to the hot springs, Mount Clemens, Michigan and from there he will journey south, including California in his itinerary, in search of health, which his many friends in Peterborough and this county earnestly wish will be speedily regained.

RAIN AGAIN GAME IS OFF

PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 19.— Owing to an early morning drizzle and the soggy condition of the ground, the fourth game of the world's series had again to be postponed to-day. It will be played to-morrow if the weather is good. The delay is welcomed by the Giants, who still pin their faith on Mathewson and feel that the rest will allow Big Six to go back at the Mackmen in good shape on Saturday. Ames is scheduled to pitch to-morrow, and Mack may oppose him with Morgan, reserving Bender to face Matty.

DEATH OF MR. T. E. FITZGERALD

Well Known Resident of Peterborough Has Passed Away

Peterborough lost one of its oldest and most well-known and most highly respected citizens, in the person of Thomas Edward Fitzgerald, who passed away last night at the family residence, 460 Charlotte street, at the age of 78 years.

The deceased gentleman was born in Smith Township October 29th, 1833. On October 29th, 1863, he married Agnes Hall, who died in October, 1872. In 1881 he married Mrs. Oliver, of Newmarket, who still survives him. Most of his life was devoted to farming. In Smith Township, where he was held in the very highest esteem, and enjoyed public confidence to the high degree expressed in the circumstance that he was honoured with the position of Deputy Reeve of the Township for twenty-four years. Upon his retirement from the farm, several years ago, he took residence in Peterborough, where he has since lived. He was for some years associated with the Peter Hamilton Manufacturing Company, as their general agent. For the past twelve years, however, he has lived a retired life, in good part devoted to the pursuit of his favourite pastimes—hunting and fishing. He was, until recently, an active member of the Brookside Bowling Club. In politics Mr. Fitzgerald was a Liberal, and in religion a Presbyterian, having been a member of the congregation of St. Andrew's church. In all the relations and associations of life Mr. Fitzgerald was held in high estimation, and his death will be learned of with general regret.

He is survived by three daughters, Mrs. E. M. Elliott, city, Mrs. W. L. McKee, Marysville, Kansas, and Mrs. (Rev.) R. B. Bayliss of Saskatchewan, and one son, Mr. J. E. A. Fitzgerald, city. One sister also mourns his loss, in the person of Mrs. E. J. Sanderson of Chicago, and five brothers, John S., of Lakefield, William S., Buffalo; Samuel, Chatham; Robert, city, and James of South Carolina. Mr. Fitzgerald had also two other brothers who are some years deceased. They were. Gideon, the eldest, and Tobias, formerly a well-known citizen of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 on Friday afternoon, from the family residence, 460 Charlotte street, to the Little Lake Cemetery. The Rev. Jas. Rollins will officiate.

New Comers Electrocuted

Special to The Examiner:

MONTREAL, QUE., OCT. 19.—Robt. Wills, an Englishman to be married at Christmas, was electrocuted while attaching wires at the Canadian Rubber Works this morning. Strangely enough, his fiancee, who came to Canada only a week ago and worked as a domestic, thought she saw his ghost during the very hour her lover was killed and told her fellow servants about it just as the news was brought that Wills was dead.

A SUDDEN DEATH

Mr. John Sawers, One of Best Known Residents of Peterboro' Found Dead in Bed at His Home This Morning

FROM NATURAL CAUSES

Peterborough citizens will be shocked and grieved to learn of the sudden death at his residence, 230 London street, of Mr. John Sawers, one of the oldest, best known and most highly respected residents of the city. Mr. Sawers was found dead in bed at 10 o'clock this morning by Messrs. James Carey and Frank Sanderson, and, from all appearances, had been dead since Monday night of this week. In the absence of his wife, who is very ill and under the care of a nurse, at the home of her brother, Mr. Sawers had been living alone. He was last seen down town on Monday, when he looked after some business with Mr. W. H. Moore. Growing alarmed because nothing had been seen of him, nor had signs of life been observed around the house for the past two days, Messrs. Carey and Sanderson visited his home this morning, and, after ringing the door bell repeatedly without eliciting any response, opened a window, and gained an entrance into the house where Mr. Sawers was found dead in his night apparel. It is thought that death's call came to him after he had retired on Monday night and he passed peacefully away. Dr. Greer, the Coroner, who was called pronounced death due to natural causes. Mr. Sawers had not been in robust health for some time, but his condition was not such as to cause any anxiety, or any expectation that he would be summoned so suddenly.

Few citizens of Peterborough were better known than the deceased, who was born in this city and who had spent the major part of his life here. His genial qualities, his willingness to do any service in his power to his friends had earned him the respect and liking of the citizens generally, and his death will be deeply regretted.

The late Mr. Sawers was 67 years of age and was born in Peterborough. He was a son of the late Augustus Sawers, a former proprietor of the Examiner, and who was Mayor of Peterborough in 1860, when the Prince of Wales visited the then town. Receiving his education here, Mr. Sawers left Peterborough on reaching manhood's estate and went to Lindsay, where he established a grocery business, which he most successfully conducted for years, after which he removed to Lakefield, where a similar enterprise met with equally great success. Some twenty-five years ago Mr. Sawers retired from business and returned to Peterborough, where he had lived continuously ever since. He took a keen interest in municipal and parliamentary issues and was a member of the Council of Peterborough for some years, justifying the confidence which his fellow citizens had placed in him by his conduct in the deliberations of the civic body. For some years, too, he was chairman of the Central Charity Board, and in this position he showed himself willing and capable to deal with the business that came before him. Of recent years he was one of the most efficient and capable deputy returning officers at the municipal elections, and it was noteworthy that the returns from his division were generally the first to reach headquarters. During his residence in Peterborough he showed himself conscious of the best ideals of citizenship and unhesitatingly lent his support to measures that he believed in the public interest. He will be greatly missed in many circles and by a wide range of friends and acquaintances.

The deceased is survived by his wife and one grandchild, Harold Sanderson, of Smith Township. Three brothers, Mr. C. W. Sawers, barrister of Vancouver, B. C., Mr. Augustus Sawers, Brock street, Peterborough, and Dr. Frederick H. Sawers, of Rochester, N. Y., and one sister, Mrs. W. H. Moore, of Peterborough, are also left to mourn his loss.

At the time of going to press no arrangements had been completed for the funeral.

CITY COUNCIL GRANTS THE REQUEST OF BOARD OF EDUCATION FOR $85,000

For the Erection of New Schools in East and West Wards of the City---Deputation Representing Board of Education Waited Upon the Council Last Night and Gave Their Reasons for the Need of More Accommodation.

A deputation from the Board of Education, consisting of Messrs. W. H. Hill, Dr. Morrison, John Crane, L. M. Hayes and Col. Miller, waited upon the Council at last night's meeting and laid before the city fathers a request for $85,000 for the erection of new schools in the East and West Wards, and the completion of other schools. Aldermen Graham and Metheral at first thought the matter should go to a vote of the people, but the request was finally granted on the motion of Ald. Morgan, seconded by Ald. Edgar.

Mr. Crane outlined the principal improvements to the old schools and exhibited a plan of the two new schools for the perusal of the Council. Mr. Crane reminded the Council that the Board's action of erecting the King Edward school was criticized, but it is now shown the wisdom of the action, as there are nine rooms in use, and the rooms on the top flat will have to be completed at once to provide accommodation. He further drew the Council's attention to the fact, that the public were not being fairly treated, as the north and south of the city, as well as the centre, had been attended to and improved, while the east and west were neglected, and he believed, that the time had arrived when new and up-to-date schools should be erected in these places, for with the increased population, there must of necessity, be more school accommodation, and as a final result, he thought the matter was worth the most serious consideration of the Council.

Dr. Morrison, in summing up the condition of affairs before the Council, stated that it would not be advisable to try to repair the old schools as it would mean an expenditure of about $36,000 for the addition, and the large playgrounds. He stated that the site the Board had in view for the East City school was five acres, on the north-east corner of concession and Hunter streets, the property of the Armour estate. He said they had planned for a twelve-roomed school for that site, and said there was a great necessity of having a school that size. Last year alone there were fifty more pupils added to the attendance roll of the East City school.

The proposed new structure would be a two-storey building with six rooms each, with all modern equipments, including Domestic Science and Calisthenics rooms, etc. He explained, however, that the plans had not really been adopted, and that the one submitted was subject to some change.

He again pointed out the necessity of erecting a twelve-roomed school in the west end. He said that in the course of two years the King Edward would be over-crowded and looking forward for the course of five years, they would require at least ten rooms more, according to the increased attendance in the past five years, and he thought that when they were building, it would be wise to provide rooms for ten years to come. The amount to erect these proposed schools and for the grounds, would be about $85,000.

Mr. W. H. Hill stated that the West End school would be erected on a three-acre property, just outside the boundary at the end of Weller street. He explained that there was no vacant property large enough procurable inside the boundary. Mr. Hill said that the object of the Board was to equalize the condition in the city, as well as to provide that which was an absolute necessity. He said that the Public schools ,especially, should be made modern in every particular, as three-quarters of the pupils would only get what education they could in the Public schools, while only about one-quarter would ever have the opportunity of entering a high school. Mr. Hill further stated that one Public School Inspector, Mr. Mowatt, had reported to him that two ladies had made a special request to him to allow their children to go to the South Central instead of the King Edward, as it was too far. There was not room at the Central, and as a result, children around the age of eight were obliged to remain at home.

Mr. Hill, being one of the committee who inspected the schools, had prepared a report of the condition, in which he found the schools, showing the absolute necessity of new ones being erected. The following was his report as submitted to the Council:

East City School.

1. Building:—

(1) Two buildings—neither can be enlarged and repaired; (a) Foundation of main building distorted and walls cracked—kept together with rods.

(2) No system of ventilation.

(3) Lighting defective — no cloak rooms.

(4) Wood furnace—pipes running through the rooms.

2. No modern conveniences, and no play rooms.

3. Yard too small for games.

4. Accomodation:—

(a) Building fully taxed for accommodation at present.

(b) Seven rooms at present used.

(c) At present rate of increase, an eighth room will be needed next midsummer.

Therefore to make provision for future growth, a twelve-roomed school is necessary.

The Education Department has recently notified all City Public School Inspectors, to report to the Department before next June, regarding city school buildings, under the following headings:

(1) Water closets, (2) Water supply, (3) School grounds, (4) School buildings, (5) Class rooms, (6) Halls, (7) Cap rooms, (8) Teachers rooms, (9) Desks, (10) Blackboards, (11) Lighting, (12) Heating.

West Ward School.

1. Building.—

(1) This building is not worth enlarging, as the rooms are too small and the hall is very narrow.

(2) The lighting is defective.

(3) The ventilation system is very poor.

(4) There are no cloak rooms.

2. No modern conveniences.

3. Yard quite unfit for any games, as it is very small.

4. Accommodation.—

(1) The building is overcrowded, and the South Central is also overcrowded. To relieve these two schools two extra rooms will have to be opened in the near future.

If Manual Training and Domestic Science classes were introduced into the South Central, fully nine rooms would be required in the new building.

To accommodate the West Ward pupils and relieve the South Central, and to make provision for Manual Training and Domestic Science classes, there will be need for nine rooms as soon as the building is opened.

A twelve-roomed building would leave room for further growth of the city.

The Council did not appear to consider discussion of the matter necessary. Ald. Buller said it was evident on every hand that the schools were badly needed, and all the aldermen agreed with him.

Alds. Metheral and Graham at first advanced the idea that the matter should be submitted to a vote of the people, but it was pointed out that, owing to the great necessity of the schools, the matter would have to be put through by the Council anyhow, so Ald. Morgan said he would cut the matter short by moving that the sum be granted.

His motion was seconded by Ald. Edgar and the matter was settled without any further discussion.

May Appoint The Speakers

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 19.—There is a possibility that the Borden cabinet may this afternoon choose their nominees for speakers of both houses.

Dr. Sproule is thought to be the first in the running for Commons speaker and Senator Kirchoffer or Senator Landry for the Upper House.

WANTED FOR SHOOTING

Special to The Examiner:

CHATHAM, ONT., OCT. 19.—The arrest on Canadian soil of Moulton, a negro wanted for the shooting in Detroit, and his unceremonious hustling over to the United States, took place without extradition or formality here, but the affair will not likely lead to any international complications, as the local police and citizens are glad to be rid of such dangerous characters.

THE NEW FLAG.

The old flag got somewhat frayed by over-rise in the recent loyalty campaign, and it has been practically laid aside since Mr. Borden finds its unnecessary display might tend to wound the sensibilities of the three anti-British, anti-flag, Quebec Nationalists, whom he has called to his cabinet. In the coming provincial elections, another flag should be adopted; the British flag only helped to give pronounced place to anti-British sentiments and influences; to foist a three-fold treasonable element upon the country; and, in consistency, nothing more fitting for the use of the candidates of Mr. Whitney, who is credited with a great deal in making Mr. Borden a cabinet maker, can be found than the new flag. Since the Nationalists are now given the prize packages in the Borden Cabinet to rule over Ontario flag wavers, it would not be at all inconsistent to hoist the Nationalist flag. At a meeting in St. Jerome, Quebec, in the late elections, Mr. Jean Prevost thus brought the Nationalist flag into prominence. He created great enthusiasm by waving aloft the French tri-colour and shouting:

"This is the flag we are going to raise on the 21st of September; the red is for Provost (himself) still a Rouge; the blue is for Nantel, our Conservative ally (now a Minister in Mr. Borden's Government), the white is for Henri Bourassa, our devoted leader."

Mr. Prevost has made good his boast—Messrs. Monk, Nantel, and Pelletier, the tricolour patriots, have carried the flag into Mr. Bourassa's cabinet, and figuratively planted it in the Privy Council Chamber of his Britannic Majesty, where it might as reasonably displace the old flag, as Nationalist influence, has replaced and dominated British influence as expressed by the local electors of Ontario on September 21st.

THE CABINET OF COMPROMISE.

The Montreal Star, which claims to have done the lion's share of effective work in defeating the Laurier Government, begins to think that its victory is not so great after all. Mr. Borden is taking the meat out of it by selecting ministers without the Star's advice. The Star thus gently commends Mr. Borden's cabinet—"The ministers with clean records are easily in the majority." Who are the unclean custodians of portfolios? The Star should be more explicit. It was willing to overlook any imperfection of record of candidates in order to elect Mr. Borden, and it helped its best to elect the men it is now condemning. If a man is clean enough to have a vote to put out the Laurier Government is he not clean enough for a place in the resulting Cabinet? We are not particularly concerned with the personnel of Mr. Borden's cabinet, except from the public point of view, and from this point it justifies the "faint praise" of the Star, which, considering its party bias, becomes the strongest possible condemnation. Mr. Borden's Cabinet is a distinct disappointment to all loyal Canadians, whether they be of his party or not. He has, in selecting his Cabinet, flown in the face of all the considerations involved in his election by so large a majority. He has been ill advised in more ways than one. He was placed in power with a following that permitted him to ignore the recognition of elements of his following that contradicted the principle of the chief issues upon which he gained the public confidence, and enjoyed the power of forming a Cabinet at all. He has given prominence and chief place to treasonable elements, and not only treasonable, but in every way diametrically opposed to the principles upon which his overwhelming Ontario support was given: He has chosen the very men to occupy the best portfolios that Ontario, if given the chance, would reject with as much emphasis as it used in electing Mr. Borden. He was made strong in this regard; he has made himself weak. He was in a position to be bold; he has made a craven surrender; and has roused an antagonism in Ontario that is kept in subjection and abeyance by force of party loyalty altogether, not by any form or degree of approval of his choice. The Star's criticism is only a bubble that has escaped from the seething, underlying mass of discontent that actually exists. If we are to regard Mr. Borden's cabinet-making as an exhibition of the administration he will give, it will be an administration of compromise with principle, for the attainment of ends entirely unconnected with the promotion of public interests.

DO SOMETHING.

In another column are given the chief points of a statement of Professor Fernow, regarding a recent visit paid to the northern part of Peterborough county. The question of reforesting is of perennial interest and of pressing importance as an element in the conservation of our natural resources. Therefore, what Prof. Fernow says, will be read with interest, because it gives the views and conclusions of a forestry expert, capable of dealing with such a subject. However, Prof. Fernow has given us nothing particularly new. He could as well, except, perhaps, for a few local references, have written what he has written, without leaving his office. The information he gives is purely academic. The conditions he refers to are well known to any person with the least knowledge of the country referred to, and his conclusions are such as would present themselves to the average mind and arise naturally from the conditions.

In these columns, time after time, the Examiner has called attention to the wasteful conditions upon which lumbering operations have been carried on, the neglect of ordinary precaution to insure practical reforesting of the territory cut over. Such an expedient as cutting only mature timber and leaving the immature to ripen into a merchantable crop, would suggest itself to the least practical mind.

It did not need Prof. Fernow to tell us of the importance of forest growth in relation to conservation of water supply. This is a consideration that naturally suggests reforesting as a practical step, insistently, demanded, in the direction of improving conservation of water resources, for navigation as well as power development and other purposes.

The late Liberal government undertook, and carried out, the most directly necessary, and most practical step of conserving our water supply by artificial appliances of regulation As Prof. Fernow points out, the Dominion government has spent some seven or eight million dollars in the construction of conservation dams, in the short time since, through the efforts of the late representative of West Peterborough, in the Ontario Legislature and goverment, the jurisdiction over the Trent waters was transferred from the Provincial to the Dominion government.

This conservation enterprise was the natural outcome of the interest taken, and the enterprise shown, by the Liberal government in the construction of the Trent Canal, whose need for a sufficient and equable flow of water for navigation purposes, was self-evident. The government naturally took the practical step the occasion demanded. These conservation works, have already demonstrated their value in relation to transportation, as well as to power development. We now have a steady and increased flow of water, to the extent of having in Peterborough the power-production capacity of our river flow practically doubled.

Important and practically valuable as is this artificial conservation scheme, a large part of its value comes from its practical, as well as practicable character, in suggesting practical action in providing for the application of a scheme of forest conservation and reforestry as an auxiliary. Without this, much of the value of artificial water conservation will be lost, or at least lessened. If we do not preserve the primal sources of water supply, do not preserve the forest reservoirs of our water, we shall have less water to conserve by artificial means. One enterprising government has provided an artificial conservation system of permanently incalculable value; and it becomes the duty of its successor in national administration, to improve and strengthen the conservation expedients provided. Prof. Fernow very aptly speaks of the conserving influence of reforestry and forest preservation upon our watersheds. If he can impress the new government with a sense of this importance, sufficiently deep to lead to practical action, some practical results may follow. Otherwise, academic discussion, important as it is, will prove to be even of as little value as are holiday jaunts to the promotion of the great interests of forest and water conservation. The injunction to do something should be given and heeded.

AN UNTIMELY ELECTION.

Weekly (Farmers) Sun.

The springing of a general election for the Province, before the Legislature has run its course, and directly after a prolonged Dominion campaign, is cause for regret. It is a source of disappointment also to those who accepted at its face value the declaration of Premier Whitney that he was bold enough to be honest, and honest enough to be bold.

The contest comes months before it was looked for; months before people had prepared themselves by the study, which accompanies the near approach of a dissolution in the regular course to pronounce intelligently on the record of the Government; it comes at a time when people are more than weary of political discussion of all kinds; it comes before the people have had placed before them a clear statement of what a new and wholly unnecessary Government House is to cost; before the publication of a promised report on the exact status of bi-lingual schools in those portions of Ontario which have been invaded from Quebec; it comes on the eve of Christmas, at the most inopportune time possible for the great business interests of the country.

The Premier says $15,000 would be spent in holding by-elections to fill vacancies and this will be saved by a general election. A much less sum than $15,000 ought to cover the cost, but even if it did cost $15,000 to hold these by-elections, what of it? Fifteen thousand dollars is a mere flea bite in comparison with what the business interests of the Province will suffer from having an election forced on at the most unseasonable time in the year. A September election was bad enough; a December election will be infinitely worse. It is a great pity the Legislature was not allowed to run its regular course.

SUFFERERS FROM PILES!

ZAM-BUK HAS CURED THESE!

Friction on the hemorrhoid veins that are swollen, inflamed and gorged with blood, is what causes the terrible pain and stinging and smarting of piles. Zam-Buk applied at night will be found to give ease before morning. Thousands of persons have proved this. Why not be guided by the experience of others?

Mr. Thomas Pearson, of Prince Albert, Sask., writes: "I must thank you for the benefit I have received from Zam-Buk. Last summer I suffered terribly from [illegible] I resolved to use Zam-Buk and found it gave me relief, so I continued it, and after using three or four boxes I am pleased to say it has effected a complete cure."

Mr. G. A. Dufresne, 183-185 St. Joseph street, St. Roch, Quebec, P. Q., writes: "I can highly recommend Zam-Buk to everyone who suffers from piles."

Magistrate Sanford of Weston, King's Co., N.S., says: "I suffered long from itching piles, but Zam-Buk has now cured me."

Mr. William Kenty, of Upper Nine Mile River, Hants Co., N.S., says: "I suffered terribly from piles, the pain at times being almost unbearable. I tried various ointments, but everything I tried failed to do me the slightest good. I was tired of trying various remedies, when I heard of Zam-Buk, and thought as a last resource I would give this balm a trial. After a very short time Zam-Buk effected a complete cure."

Zam-Buk is also a sure cure for skin injuries and diseases, eczema, ulcers, varicose veins, cuts, burns, bruises, chaps, cold sores, etc. 50c. box all druggists and stores, or post free from Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. Refuse harmful imitations.

A COMEDY

In Which an Intoxicated Man Appears in the Leading Role

"All's well that ends well," as Shakespeare has it.

This is a title which might justly be applied to a comedy enacted in the vicinity of the new Power House, yesterday afternoon, in which Bacchus played a prominent part.

A young man, whose name it is not necessary to mention, evincing unmistakable signs of an over indulgence of intoxicants, was careering gaily down the road with a horse and buggy and suddenly attempted to turn round. At no time did he appear to be firmly seated, but at this juncture he completely lost his equilibrium and toppled out into the road. So far so good, and it would have proved very amusing had he not sustained a nasty cut on the side of his face, as a result of his tumble.

On being assisted to his feet by a passer by he entered what he styled "his house." A moment or so later a little girl, emerged, and, amidst copious tears, cried:: "There's a drunken man in our house, and I'm here all alone. He's on the table." It thus transpired that he had mistaken his abode. A few neighbours entered the house with the view of setting the intoxicated young man on the right path, for home, when Hey Presto! he had disappeared. Meanwhile, the horse and buggy had been taken to its rightful owner. A thorough search was made of the house and the surrounding portion of the vicinity. The outhouses did not escape being ransacked, yet he was not to be found. Where could he be? The neighbours gave up the hunt in disgust and at the same moment two other girls belonging to the house, arrived home from school, and on the first girl imparting to them her woeful tale, they all three sat on the verandah to await the arrival of reinforcements before entering the house.

After the lapse of some fifteen minutes a lady friend chanced by and was held up by the frightened girls. The good lady went in and made a second search, and coming upon a small room which the former search party had missed, espied the visitor reclining snugly on the bed. She obtained the assistance of a male neighbour, who managed to get the young man out and simultaneously a man returned with the horse and buggy, evidently with the information appertaining to the identification of the almost helpless one, as he took him into the vehicle and drove off, and the harmony of the homestead was restored.

ENTIRELY CHANGED

For years "The Gateway to the Cariboo" has been through Ashcroft, where freight and passenger traffic has had to be hauled by wagon and stage.

With the building of the Grand Trunk Pacific this condition will be entirely changed next spring when the probabilities are that a steamer service will be operated between Tete Jaune Cache, that will be the end of steel at the time, and Fort George during the construction of the line between these two points. Ashcroft will lose its Northern trade with startling suddenness. By the same token Edmonton will replace Vancouver at the same time as the supply point for British Columbia's Central Interior. Freight will be carried west from Edmonton by rail to the Cache, and barged down river to Fort George. Quesnel and Soda Creek much more cheaply than it can be wagoned from Ashcroft to Soda Creek, a distance of 167 long miles. It is a simple matter of economics.

Killing Poultry

Don't use the axe or the wringing method for killing poultry. This not only means pain to the chicken, but poor bleeding follows the use of either. Poor bleedings mean poor flavor, and poor flavor means a poorer market and a lower price.

There are two approved methods for killing poultry. One is called sticking, the other dislocating. In both methods the chicken is hung, head down to bleed. When the sticking process is used, take the head of the chicken in one hand and a thin, flat-handled knife in the other. The knife should have a sharp-pointed blade and a straight cutting edge, the blade being not more than two inches long and one-fourth of an inch wide.

To kill the chicken painlessly, thrust the knife through the middle line of the roof of the mouth until it touches the skull midway between the eyes. This paralyzes the chicken. After cutting the arteries in the neck, it soon bleeds to death. It can be picked dry, or without scalding, because when it is paralyzed the feathers loosen and can be plucked without breaking the skin. To cut the arteries, make a small cut on the right and left of the roof of the mouth where the bones of the skull end.

The other method, called dislocating, is of Canadian origin. It causes some pain, no doubt, for a moment. To kill a chicken by this method take the head between the thumb and forefinger, the thumb resting on the back of the head and the forefinger on the windpipe or under the beak; take the legs by the other hand and lay the chicken over the knee. Then give a quick pull, just enough to dislocate the neck and break the spinal cord. The skin of the neck is not broken and the chicken is then hung to bleed. The blood collects at the base of the neck. This method should be used only for local trade or private use and not for a distant market, since the blood collects in the neck and discolours the skin.

OLD GUARD CHALLENGES WEST ENDS TO GAME

Eugene Hurtubise has rounded up a rugby team composed of members of the old guard of Peterborough players and has authorized the Examiner to issue a challenge to Duke Oldham's West End Athletic Club junior O.R.F.U. team for a game for the championship of Peterborough, to be played on some Saturday afternoon, or preferably on Thanksgiving Day. Manager Hurtubise will have some of the old stars in line, and will turn out a heavy rain that he thinks will make the youngsters of the 1911 team look like three battered ten-cent pieces. It is up to Manager Oldham. The "old boys" are ready and willing. The West End manager has only to say the word.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR CITY HOCKEY LEAGUE

From the way different teams are talking, it looks as if there will be a revival of the City Hockey League during the coming winter. Last year, believing that the League was interfering to some extent with the success of the Peterborough Hockey Club the Strathcona, winners of the preceding year signified their intention of dropping out and other teams followed suit, the result being that the League was abandoned for the year. However, the result was that a number of players kept out of hockey altogether and this year will likely see a change. The All Saints' Church Athletic Club have already expressed a desire to play City League hockey. They will organize in a few days and Manager Tommy Moffatt says they will be able to place a good team on the ice. Both St. Peter's and Sacred Heart Total Abstinence Societies will have teams this winter and are looking forward to holding franchises in the City League. The C.G.E. Toolroom team, champions of the Mercantile League, are ready to take a jump into faster company and the Bell Telephone team is also a possibility. The "Hello" people are going to have a team this winter and might possibly go into the City League. Lakefield has a number of its old players back and may be in line again. There is every prospect of half a dozen teams who would be willing to play City League hockey during the coming cold spell.

Attendance Will Break The Record

NEW YORK, OCT. 18.—All records for gross receipts for the world's baseball series have been smashed in the three games between the Giants and the Athletics, while the attendance mark also is sure to go. The receipts have passed the highest mark of previous years by many thousands. The total of the three game reaches $195,914.50 as compared with $166,302.50, the previous record, made in the seven game series between Detroit and Pittsburg in 1909. The attendance records will be broken with the next game, in all probability. The figures already reach 101,783, compared with 145,295 for the seven games in 1909.

The share of the players now amounts to $105,792.89, as compared with $79,071.93, which was divided among the Cubs and Athletics last year.

SCOTTISH CURLERS TO VISIT CITY

Mr. W. G. Ferguson represented the Peterborough Curling Club at the meeting of the Ontario Curling Association in Toronto. At this meeting, the Executive committee's report, which dealt with the visit of the Royal Caledonian Curling Club, was read. They will visit Kingston, Peterborough, Toronto, Hamilton, Galt, London and Detroit and Messrs. J. W. Corcorran, O. A. Swabey and J. A. Macfadden were appointed a committee to look after the visitors.

A Star For West Ends

The West End Rugby Club had a good practice at Central Park last night in preparation for their game at Toronto Saturday with Central Y. M.C.A. and will be out again to-night in uniform at Central Park at 7.15 o'clock for another workout. The West ends have landed a real find in the person of Rathbun, the former Upper Canada College and McGill University quarter back, who has the enviable reputation of being the best quarter McGill has ever had. He will be out at to-night's practice and should be of great help to the team. Dr. McPherson will be on hand to-night to instruct the squad.

Returned From Holidays

Four more members of the Ketchecum Lake Hunt Club returned to the city last evening, having enjoyed a splendid vacation. They were Ald. W. H. Bradburn, Messrs. V. Eastwood, A. H. Stratton and Jt B. McCarter, Toronto. There are still ten members of the club up there and they intend remaining for about another week. Mr J. J. Duffus motored up to the club's camp yesterday with Mr. Eastwood's car and brought the above named members down to the city.

They reported having a splendid vacation having perfect weather conditions. Mr. Eastwood stated to a reporter to-day that the fishing was very good, and the club had spent a very happy season. He stated that the water in the lake was exceptionally low. Mr. Eastwood has been with the Club since the 8th inst.

Pheasants At The Fire Hall

Fire Chief Howard has made it a practice to bring home from the Fire Chief's convention each year, a present of some kind or other to his men, a custom he has followed ever since he has been chief.

When the Chief left for the Milwaukee convention this year, a representative of the Examiner was present when he was shaking hands good-bye. The last words were: "Be real good boys while I am away, and I will bring you home a nice present. The Chief was true to his word, and in addition to a few little souvenirs, he brought back with him a collection of English pheasants, of the golden and silver variety. They are very beautiful birds and the firemen appreciate the gift very much. As some of the men expressed this morning: "The fire station is getting more homelike every day."

The birds are kept at the station and the firemen will be pleased to welcome visitors who wish to call around and see them.

WHY HESITATE?

An Offer That Involves No Money Risk if You Accept It.

We are so positive our remedy will completely relieve constipation, no matter how chronic it may be, that we offer to furnish it free of all cost if it fails.

Constipation is commonly caused by weakness of the nerves and muscles of the large intestine. To expect a cure you must therefore tone up and strengthen those organs and restore them to healthier activity.

We want you to try Rexall Orderlies on our guarantee. They are eaten like candy, and are particularly good for children. They seem to act directly on the nerves and muscles of the bowels. They apparently have a neutral action on the other organs. They do not purge or cause other inconvenience. We will refund your money if they do not overcome chronic or habitual constipation and thus aid to relieve the myriads of associate or dependent chronic ailments. Try Rexall Orderlies at our risk. Three sizes, 10c., 25c. and 50c. Sold only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

NEW FREIGHT SHEDS

The C.P.R.'s new freight sheds will be erected this autumn. The location will be along the river shore, about the end of Sherbrooke street, and a gang of men are at present engaged in filling up the holes and levelling the ground, preparatory to building the foundations. The new siding will also be put through as soon as the gravel necessary for the work can be procured.

Home From Convention

Messrs. W. McIlroy, city passenger agent of the C. P. R., and Mr. B. A. Rose, city passenger agent of the G. T. R., have returned from Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., where they have been in attendance at the convention of the Canadian Passenger and Ticket Agents' Association. They report a most enjoyable and profitable session. As will be seen from the new title of the Association (it was formerly known as the Canadian Ticket Agents Association) the sphere of the body has been widened so as to include the Assistant General Passenger Agents, etc., as well as the ticket agents. The people of Sault Ste. Marie entertained the railway men royally. They were taken on a visit of inspection through the immense steel works at the Soo and for a trip up the river, and through the great locks, with lunch served on board. An enjoyable smoker on the first night was followed by a successful dance on the second, and everything possible was done for the entertainment of the visitors who numbered one hundred and fifty. Mr. McIlroy was again elected to the executive of the Association. The next place of meeting will be decided by the executive.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"SUCCESS," says the epigram-maker, "spoils more men than failure ever does."

Now, someone has defined an epigram as something which foolish people accept as true, simply because it is easy to remember, so I suppose I class myself with the foolish, when I hardly endorse that first epigram as very true.

Incidentally, I want to add that I think the definition of an epigram is itself an epigram, and fulfills its own definition remarkably well.

To return to terra firma after that somewhat dizzying convolution, the older I grow the more I am impressed with the dangers of success.

I do not think there is anyone who cannot call to mind at least half a dozen acquaintances who have been spoiled by success.

"I never dare look back over what I have done," says a man who has risen in about twenty years from poverty to the junior partnership in a business which brings in two hundred thousand dollars a year, "for fear I shall be contented."

That is one of the dangers of success, and a pitfall moreover into which ten thousand men fall where one wise as this one avoids it.

Another danger of success a young girl whom I know illustrates with painful perfection.

During several years of humdrum, unprofitable labour, this girl was a modest, livable, likeable young person. "A quick turn of the wheel of fortune whirled her into financial and artistic success, and incidentally, made her conceited, overbearing and self-centered.

She is losing friends to-day as fast as she once made them. She does not care just now, because she is too busy and too triumphant, to feel the need of them. But there will come a time to her—and to thousands like her—when life shall have become less crowded and active, and they will realise that success can bring loss as well as gain.

How many men and women who can drink of the bitters of failure and be the better for the hard draught lose their heads at the first sip of the champagne of success!

Oh, yes, success is what we all want, and I do wish it for you, my good friends, and for myself, but I also wish that it may not come so fast as to be dangerous and that both of us may keep ever in mind old Horace's sage advice:

"If hindrances obstruct thy way
Thy magnanimity display.
And let thy strength be seen;
But, oh, if fortune fill thy sail
With more than a propitious gale
Take half thy canvas in."

—Horace.

SPLENDID ADDRESS BY ARCHDEACON RENISON

Missionary From Moose Factory Tells People of St. John's of the Conditions in the North Country---His Message Was Followed With Close Attention by Large Audience ---Reception Was Tendered the Speaker.

It is not often that a Peterborough audience has the pleasure of listening to such an interesting and edifying address as that rendered last evening in the St. John's School room by Archdeacon Renison.

The reverend gentleman has done much for the mission work in the Hudson Bay district, and his address took the form of a discourse on the Indians and their customs. He leaves by the midnight train to-night for the Maritime Provinces, and after a stay of two months will return to his work in the Hudson Bay district. In the Porcupine fire his diocese lost three new churches.

The Rev. Canon Davidson opened the meeting with prayers and after a few remarks the speaker proceeded. It is quite impossible to give a full report of the address so much of interest was said, but the following is a synopsis.

"When I left my train to-night and got a view of your noble parish church, I scarcely thought I was in Canada. I thought we were too commercial to have such an old piece of architecture.

There was a time when missionary work was looked upon as strange, but it has since been realized that every churchman ought to be a missionary. "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." The person who only knows Ontario doesn't know much of Canada. It is said that Ontario is the garden of Canada. So it is; but Canada is a very large country. In such a country there is naturally much diversity. There is the sub-Arctic zone, where such men as Peck, Greenshields, Broughton and Fleming did such heroic work, living in snow houses for six months in the year, without a fire, save a seal oil lamp. Then there is the Indian zone, around the shores of the Hudson Bay. We owe a debt of gratitude to Peterborough for its canoes, which are of the same construction as the old Indian birch bark canoes, and are used in that vicinity."

Here the speaker engaged in a description of the Indians' and their customs, in which he said:

"A missionary has to be the Indians' doctor, teacher, preacher, guide and friend. I will give an instance of the extent of the Indian's religion. I was paddling down the river with five Indians one Sunday when a fine Moose jumped into the river and swam across in front of us, and not one of my companions would even look at it on account of the day being Sunday. Here I might inform you of the origin of missionary work in the North. In 1855 the call of God came to a young Englishman, by name, John Horden, and a church Missionary Society sent him to Hudson Bay. He landed there with his young wife, built a house with his own hands, and taught himself the language of the natives. In a year's time he could speak to them fluently. For twenty years no one heard of John Horden. However, he went to England and was consecrated Bishop. He died in 1892, leaving ninety-five per cent. of the population of the north country not only Christians but baptized members of the Church of England.

Now, in conclusion, I hope you will love them more. I believe we owe a great deal to the North American Indians. They have been driven backward and backward to the Arctic Circle to give place to the white man. I believe God will deal with Canada as Canada deals with the Indians.

At the conclusion of his splendid discourse a few questions were put to and answered by the speaker, after which the meeting closed with a hymn and a prayer.

Refreshments were served by the ladies of the Auxiliary.

Peterborough's Rate Of Increase 63 Per Cent. Tenth In The Province

TORONTO, OCT. 18.—In percentage increases of Ontario cities and towns, Cobalt makes the best showing in the census figures published to-day for the reason that in 1901 Cobalt was not on the map.

Of the others, Port Arthur and Fort William show the most rapid percentage growth, the former with 245 per cent. increase bringing it to 11,216 and the latter with a 354 per cent. increase, bringing it to 16,498.

Following close are North Bay with 205 per cent., North Toronto with 190 per cent., and Welland with 185 per cent.

Peterborough is well up with an increase of 63 per cent.

The percentage increases follow in order of merit:

New Security On Market

A new security, being put out by Messrs. Aemilius Jarvis & Company, bond dealers, Toronto, is a $55,000 issue of six per cent. first mortgage bonds of the Mathews Steamship Company, Limited. The issue is limited to $55,000, and is secured by a first mortgage on the steamer "Yorkton," which is valued at $130,000, and is insured for $115,000.

The "Yorkton" was built this year at Sunderland, England, and is designed to have the greatest carrying capacity of any steamer navigating the Canal system of the St. Lawrence River. She is capable of carrying 100,000 bushels on the Upper Lakes. The steamer is rated A1 (the highest rating) at Lloyd's for 20 years. The bonds, however, mature at the end of 10 years. The insurance policies on the boat are held in trust for the protection of the investors in the bonds.

The Mathews Steamship Company averaged annual net earnings of $25,-988.50 from 1908 to 1910, with two boats, the "Edmonton" and "Haddington." This year, with the same two boats and the "Yorkton" operating only part of the season, they estimate net earnings of over $39,000. The Company's assets total over $400,000.

Steamship bonds are more or less of a novelty to investors in Canada, but have for quite a long time been a legal investment for State Savings Banks in several of the United States.

NOTHING LIKE IT FOR COLDS

Mrs. Holland Ferguson, Sheffield, N.B., writes: "Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine has cured my children and myself of severe colds. We are never without it in the house. There is nothing like it for colds and throat trouble, and it is so soothing and pleasant to take, my children would drink a whole bottle if they were permitted."

Mr. J. Irwin's Sad Mission

Mr. J. Irwin, formerly G.T.R. trainmaster, Lindsay, and now Superintendent of the Dauphin Division of the Canadian Northern Railway, was in Lindsay yesterday.

Mr. Irwin was on a sad mission to Ontario, having been called here on account of the untimely death of his son, Maurice Irwin, who met a shocking death at Guelph last Friday, and whose remains were interred at Hespeler on Tuesday.

Mr. Irwin left last evening for Ottawa and from that point will leave for Dauphin. He will be accompanied by his son Schafield, who has been working in Hamilton and who will reside in Dauphin.

During his stay in Lindsay Mr. Irwin received many expressions of sympathy from his friends in his sad loss.

An inquest was held at Guelph in connection with the sad affair and the verdict rendered was to the effect that the young man's death was the result of an accident and no blame was attached to anyone.

Mr. Irwin was a popular figure among G.T.R. railway men and was well known by local Grand Trunk employees, who will regret to learn of his bereavement.

Hay Will Be Scarce

In conversation with a North Monaghan farmer this morning, an Examiner reporter was informed that the prospective price of hay this winter will be very high. He explained that the hay was 'winter killed.' The low ground, where the snow and water lay late in the spring, turned out pretty well, but on the high levels and on hills there was little or no hay at all. The hay seemed to have been killed out, and in its place tremendous growths of thistles and weeds sprang up, and made acres of hay not worth the cutting. The farmer stated that in the section of North Monaghan where he came from, there were two or three farmers who had told him that they had from twenty to thirty loads fewer this year than last. Hay is at present selling at $14 a ton, and will not come below that figure, according to the information gathered by the reporter. It is not only scarce, but it is only third class feed. The extreme dry weather in the early part of the season spoiled the entire yield. It is almost devoid of the usual sappy nature of first-class hay and the latter is scarcely procurable.

The same can be said of grains. This farmer stated that the oats in his section of the country were the poorest crop for many years. The straw is short, but good for feeding purposes, but the heads are simply empty hulls. All other grains are the same, the failure being attributed to the dry season at the beginning of the year.

Mr. R. Denne informed the reporter that the price of grains had taken a sudden advance this week and were on the upward track. He did not wish to give any present quotations, as the price was not stationary enough. He predicted a very high price for all sorts of grains, as the yield this season was somewhat light. Cheap grains will be absolutely absent from the market this year, according to the general report.

"THE MUMMY AND THE HUMMING BIRD"

Mr. Paul Gilmore will appear here soon in a big revival of the play that made him a star.

Criticism from the St. Paul Pioneer Press:

Paul Gilmore is at the Metropolitan in another of those plays, the fantastic ambiguity of whose title gives no hint of its general character. "The Mummy and the Humming Bird," is a comedy drama inclining to sensational lines in its depiction of a well known society problem. In this particular case the Mummy is a married man, too deeply absorbed in his hobby, some form of scientific research, to pay much attention to his young and attractive wife, who naturally misunderstands his attitude. The Humming Bird is a wily Italian Count who would surround the lady with that wealth of affection she fails to receive at her husband's hands, and although the plot is old as time itself, in its application, it is forever new and is here skillfully worked into a very interesting, not to say thrilling, romance.

The play is distinctly on the problem order and shows broadly what coolness and a level head can accomplish in cases where the average mind, in the heat of provocation, would irrevocably overreach itself. The Mummy was long in awakening to the situation, but when he did at last appreciate it in its full significance, he quietly and unobtrusively rose to the occasion and by his keen wit and complete mastery of himself, saved the glory of a day fast fading into abysmal darkness.

The play is more than half tragic in character, but there is a strong vein of comedy offsetting the gloom. The lines are exceedingly clever and the humour is of the kind readily appreciated. A scene in the first act between the Mummy and an organ grinder whom he has invited to dine with him, apparently borders on the burlesque for a time, but in reality leads up to a very clever bit of character study work culminating in the pivotal climax of the play. The second act sees much action and the excitement is strained to the breaking point when the curtain falls.

Paul Gilmore gives a very even and consistent reading of his role, as the Mummy. Never a demonstrative man, though deeply in love with his wife, his reconciliation scene with her, his taking her in his arms, his forced and explosive "darling" is all given with that same carefully studied repression which marks his portrayal of the character throughout, and gives to it the interest of a peculiarly attractive individuality. He has a deep, rich voice which he uses with good effect, and his still acting is carefully thought out. Mr. Gilmore has in this play one that he can play as long as Joseph Jefferson played Rip Van Winkle.

"The Mummy and the Humming Bird" comes to the Grand on Monday next. This is a guaranteed attraction. Mr. Gilmore has spared no pains in making a revival of the play that has made him both rich and famous.

Danderine

Stops Falling Hair and Destroys Dandruff

Makes the Hair Grow Long, Heavy and Luxuriant and We Can Quickly Prove It

If You Wish to Double the Beauty of Your Hair at Once, Just Get a 25 Cent Bottle and Try This

Surely try a Danderine Hair Cleanse if you wish to immediately double the beauty of your hair with little trouble and at a cost not worth mentioning—just moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and draw it carefully through your hair, taking one small strand at a time, this will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt or any excessive oil—In a few moments you will be amazed. Your hair will be wonderfully fluffy and abundant and possess an incomparable softness, lustre and luxuriance, the beautiful shimmer of true hair health.

Besides beautifying the hair, one application of Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff, cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, and forever stopping itching and falling hair.

Danderine is to the hair what fresh showers of rain and sunshine are to vegetation. It goes right to the roots, invigorates and strengthens them. It's exhilarating, stimulating and life-producing properties cause the hair to grow abundantly long, strong and beautiful. It at once imparts a sparkling brilliancy and velvety softness to the hair, and a few weeks' use will cause new hair to sprout all over the scalp. Use it every day for a short time, after which two or three times a week will be sufficient to complete whatever growth you desire.

You can surely have pretty, soft, lustrous hair, and lots of it, if you will just get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter and try it as directed.

Must Remove The Earth

At the meeting of the City Fathers last night the following were present: Mayor Morrow, chairman; Aldermen Graham, Kerneghan, Morgan, Metheral, Anderson, Buller, Edgar, and Duncan.

Mr. Palmer, a south-end citizen, complained that the Chicle Co. had neglected to remove a pile of earth, which had been excavated from their cellar and placed in front of his lot, where it dammed the water and flooded his premises. The matter was referred to the Engineer.

A communication was read from T. Kinnear & Co., requesting that the C. P. Railway Co. be allowed to put a siding into the Company's Wholesale warehouse, across Dalhousie street.

The request was granted on motion of Ald. Metheral, seconded by Ald. Kerneghan, subject to the usual terms. A clause was also added to the effect that the Company would remove the siding when required to do so by the city.

Doctor Was Fooled by His Own Case for a Time.

It's easy to understand how ordinary people get fooled by tea and coffee when doctors themselves sometimes forget the facts.

A physician speaks of his own experience:

"I had used tea and coffee for years and really did not exactly believe it was injuring me, although I had palpitation of the heart every day.

"Finally, one day, a severe and almost fatal attack of heart trouble frightened me and I gave up both tea and coffee, using Postum instead, and since that time I have had absolutely no heart palpitation except on one or two occasions when I tried coffee, which caused severe irritation and proved to me that I must let it alone.

"When we began using Postum it seemed weak—that was because we did not make it according to directions—but now we put a little bit of butter in the pot when boiling and allow the Postum to boil full 15 minutes, which gives it the proper rich flavour and the deep brown colour.

"I have advised a great many of my friends and patients to leave off tea and coffee and drink Postum, in fact I daily give this advice." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ont.

Many thousands of physicians use Postum in place of tea and coffee in their own homes and prescribe it to patients. "There's a reason."

PROF. FERNOW'S REPORT ON REFORESTRATION OF THE NORTH COUNTRY

Prof. Fernon, who made a tour of the northern part of Peterborough and Victoria and Haliburton Counties last week, has prepared the following report in reference to the conditions:

The first impression that would strike any observant person in traveling over this country is the utter lack of rational management of the original timberlands which has given rise to these waste areas. For, the creation of these wastes, produced entirely by the inconsiderate use of the axe and carelessness in permitting fires repeatedly to run over the slashed areas, could have been avoided without foregoing any of the advantages which have been derived from the timber by lumbermen or government from their exploitation. I mean, all the timber could have been cut and yet the producing power of the land not be reduced. Where there are now hundreds of square miles of valueless brushlands and naked rock desert there could have been left a valuable forest, by this time nearly ready again for a new harvest, the basis of a thriving lumber industry.

Harvey and Galway Townships.

This part of the country, the townships of Harvey and Galway, is located on Laurentian rock. This statement is significant for it pictures at once to the initiated the soil conditions, which are typical not only for your county but for a large part of Northern Ontario and Quebec, so that the problems in Peterborough county are also the problems for thousands of square miles, East, North and West of you. It means a meagre and thin soil overlying the rock, with only here and there pockets of larger and better soil accumulations where farming is practicable. If there is such a thing as "absolute forest soils," this is the place to look for them. Practically, at least 75 per cent. of the country under consideration is fit solely for timber growing. Abandoned farms and others that ought to be abandoned, testify to the correctness of the diagnosis that this is for the most part not farming country. Trees can grow in fissures between the rocks, where tillage is precluded and grasslands are apt to dry out.

Area Robbed of Its Value.

This was originally a forest country, all over more or less of the same type, a mixed forest of hardwoods with pine, hemlock and spruce; the hardwoods prevailing on the better, loamier soils, the conifers on the poorer, sandier soils. Practically the whole area is robbed of its values, fires have repeatedly swept over the slash denuding the soil of its vegetable mould, and rainwaters have washed away the unprotected soil, in many places creating real rock deserts. A growth of almost useless aspen and birch has established itself where the fire has not run through for a number of years, and a small crop of pine or spruce or other conifers has come in by natural seeding, wherever the cutting of old timber of the kind had not been too close and seed trees had been left—not by design, but by accident. There is still the possibility of reclaiming most of this area, but the story of the Sibylline books may repeat itself: each year's delay means a decrease of the chance of recovery.

The problem is what to do with these vast unproductive areas, which left to themselves and to nature will not in generations produce values, and are apt to deteriorate further.

The first fact to be recognized is that no private interest can be expected to attend to the recuperation of these areas, for it will take more than a generation to bring them into productive condition. It is therefore, only the municipality, county, Province or Dominion that can be expected to occupy itself with the solution of the problem.

Financial considerations will probably deter municipalities and county to undertake the recovery of these lands. The province has already recognized its duty with regard to waste lands in the agricultural part of the province, and has in a small, I may say half-hearted way began to plant up abandoned farm areas; but as thousands of square miles of similar country are the property of the Province, the progress of their recovery will no doubt remain slow.

Dominion Should Act.

The particular area, under consideration, however, offers special reasons for interest by the Dominion; for, the Dominion has already spent some 7 or 8 million dollars in conserving and developing the remarkable water resources of this section by a series of well located and excellently constructed dams at the outflow of the many large lakes characteristic of this region. This undertaking of water conservation is one of prime importance and begun with unusual efficiency. While originally this development of water storage was designed to furnish feeders for the Trent Canal, with the development of power transmission by electric current—and before the completion of the canal which alone will give it any permanent value as a means of transportation,—the influence of this water storage on the development of water powers is by all odds the present most important function of the same.

Will Conserve Water.

Now, it is evident that anything which affects the efficiency and permanence of this work on which such large outlays have been made, should be under the control of the Dominion. The surface conditions of these practically abandoned areas which form the watersheds of the lakes that have been turned into storage basins are unquestionably of the greatest importance in the maintenance of the water supply, for, whatever may be said of the influence of forests on other climatic phenomena, the influence of surface cover, especially on the waterflow under the conditions of soil and rock of these watersheds, is undeniable.

For this reason, all water companies in the United States try to control their watersheds and in some cases which I could cite, spend even money on reforestation.

Moreover, besides this most cogent reason for Dominion interest in these problems, a demonstration of the possibilities of recovery and management of such waste land would furnish an excellent example to the provinces to engage in similar work of conservation.

It would be futile at this stage for me to go into detail as to the methods of recovery, or to expand on generalities.

Such matters cannot be discussed to advantage in general terms. Details are needed to discover what use may be made of a property, and how it could be managed most profitably.

It is, therefore, proper before advising as to details of procedure to ascertain the details of condition.

The areas involved should be looked over by expert foresters and described, the description laid down on maps—a forest reconnaissance similar, but in greater detail, to that which I have made for the Province of Nova Scotia.

Some Portions Beyond Recovery.

It will then be found, that some of these areas are absolute wastes which are beyond recovery, others which may be left to future consideration, others again which by the judicious use of the axe may be brought into better condition at once; some of them now contain material that could be made useful if by smart management a market may be found, and would assist in maintenance account; others again may be planted, or else merely protected against fire. In other words, by careful management, utilizing every means, including fishing and hunting privileges, summer tourist traffic, etc., as well as forestry products, from the start the expense of this reclamation work may be kept to a minimum.

If our Conservation Commission, of which I have the honor to be a member, is to do more than collate existing information, here would be an opportunity for effective, original, investigating and educational work, by directing such a forest reconnaissance perhaps in co-operation with the Dominion Forestry Branch.

Y. W. C. A. NOTES

The Y.W.C.A. girls of last season's classes are At Home this evening from 8 to 10, to the new members who have been received during the past month.

A most enjoyable evening has been arranged for, and all members of the Association will be cordially welcomed.

Dr. McCulloch's class will meet at 7.45, also Miss Nichols' class.

It is advisable to place orders EARLY, so that we can devote more time to their execution, and have the garments ready when desired.

Ald. Brown Is Back From Enjoyable Trip To The North-West

Ald. Brown and Mr. Joseph Ingram returned last night from an eleven-weeks' trip to the Western Provinces, and report having a splendid trip. Ald. Brown is very busy attending to private business on his return, and so was not able to spare the time to give the Examiner a detailed report of the numerous places he visited and the conditions prevailing. However, in a five-minute conversation with him, the reporter was informed that he (Ald. Brown) and Mr. Ingram had spent ten weeks in Regina, where they erected a house They were very much impressed with Regina, and report favourably of the conditions prevailing there, as in all the cities. Besides Regina, they visited Souris, Hartney, and Switzer.

Ald. Brown said that he felt quite at home in Regina, as he met hundreds of people from this city and vicinity, whom he knew. He said every one was prosperous, and in all the cities was evidenced the go-ahead ambitions, characteristic of the great West.

Regarding the crops, Ald. Brown said that this was an off year in the West, the crop being below the average. However, Nos. 1 and 2 wheat was a fair crop, and there was a fair yield of No. 3.

"There are unparalleled possibilities for young men out there," said Ald. Brown. "People here can have no conception of the vast areas yet to be broken up and settled. There is not more than one-fifth of the country yet settled."

He also thought that while the crops were not just what was expected, there would be an infush of settlers just the same. He admitted that the expenses out there were high, but the wages are comparatively high.

Ald. Brown told the reporter that he was not at present considering moving out. He said he had benefitted wonderfully by the trip in many ways, but he was very glad to get back to the old city.

A WORD OF GRATITUDE

"In justice to humanity I want to tell you that I was a great sufferer from itching piles and have found Dr. Chase's Ointment the best treatment obtainable," writes Mr. Fred Hins, Brodhagen, Ont. "It gives instant relief and I can recommend it to any sufferer from this dreadful disease."

A Veteran Of Civil War

Death of Mr. Jos. Glass, a Well Known Resident, To-day

After a painful illness extending over a period of nine months, Mr. Joseph Glass of 487 Parnell street, passed away at three o'clock this morning.

The deceased, who was sixty-nine years of age was born in the United States and fought in the civil war for the North against the South.

After living for some time in Brantford and Oshawa respectively, he came to Peterborough twenty-five years ago. He worked for some time at the moulding trade, after which he was employed at the Carpet Factory. Mr. Glass was possessed of a jovial disposition, which endeared him to a large circle of friends, who extend to the relatives their sincere sympathy.

He is survived by a sorrowing wife, four daughters, Mrs. Doughty of Rochester, N.Y., Mrs. Wharton of Toronto, Mrs. Smart of Toronto, and Mrs. Lowes of Peterborough, and three sons, John of Erie, George of Dakota, and Joseph of Peterborough.

The funeral will take place at 2.30 o'clock on Saturday afternoon at the Little Lake cemetery.

OBITUARY

JOSHUA BAILEY.

On Friday morning, about three o'clock the death occurred of Mr. Joshua Bailey, who lives about five miles south of Uphill. Deceased was in his 57th year and spent his entire life in the neighbourhood of Lindsay. He had been in poor health for some years and for the past year had been confined to the house with a form of paralysis. Although ill and suffering death came unexpectedly at the last. He took a turn for the worse on Monday and he lost consciousness a day or two later and in that state passed peacefully away. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. Edward, Peterborough, and one son, Edward, to mourn his loss. The son is up north in the lumber camps and although repeated efforts were made to locate him, he could not be found as he had been moving from one place to another.

The funeral on Sunday afternoon, was largely attended, Rev. Mr. Hie, of Victoria Road, conducted the services at the house and grave. Over fifty rigs followed the hearse to the family burial ground at Head Lake, where the Orangemen conducted services at the grave also.

MRS. MABEL H. ROBERTSON.

At the residence of her father, Mr. J. J. Herron, of Cavan, Mabel, relict of the late Mr. W. H. Robertson, of South Monaghan, passed away last evning, after an illness extending over the period of one year.

The deceased who was thirty-four years of age, was born in Centreville, South Monaghan. About ten years ago she was married to Mr. W. H. Robertson who pre-deceased her some four years since.

She leaves to mourn her loss two little daughters, nine and seven, respectively. They are Sybil Ruth, and Margaret Myrtle. Her parents also survive her as well as two brothers, Bruce Herron, of Frobisher, Sask., and Lloyd, at home, and one sister, Mrs. Lindsay Vance of Frobisher, Sask.

The funeral will take place from the residence of her father, Mr. J. J. Herron, one mile west of Springville, to the Centreville Presbyterian cemetery, South Monaghan, to-morrow, at 2.30 o'clock.

WEDDING BELLS

HAMILTON—REID.

At seven o'clock last evening Mount Pleasant Methodist Church, Vancouver, B.C., was the scene of a very pretty wedding, when Miss Ada Winnifred, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Reid, Vancouver, B. C., and formerly of Peterborough, was united in the holy bonds of matrimony to Mr. Charles D. Hamilton, B.A. Sc.

At ten o'clock last night, the hour corresponding with seven o'clock in Vancouver time, the chimes in St. John's Chuch were rung by Mr. F. J. Devey, in honour of the bride, whose grandparents, the late Mr. and Mrs. William Reid, were the first couple married in St. John's church.

Peterborough friends will be pleased to hear of the interesting event. The bride has many friends in this city who will join in extending best wishes.

IMPRESSED WITH GROWTH OF THIS CITY

Mr. C. R. Wright, who is connected with the office of the Canadian General at Vancouver, B.C., was in the city to-day, a guest at the Oriental.

Mr. Wright has been connected with the company's Vancouver office for the last two years, previous to which he spent several years in the local office. He came to the city last night on business in connection with the works, and when seen by the Examiner at noon contemplated returning west on the C.P.R., 4.28. Mr. Wright was very favourably impressed with the rapid strides the city had made in the last two years, and was not surprised at the population, when he noted the growth of the city in the real estate line.

Mr. Wright was not originally a resident of the city, but during his long connection with the C.G.E. here made several acquaintances and knew the city almost as well as its oldest resident. He spoke of the several new buildings that had been erected during his absence, and was pleased to note that the city was going ahead, almost as fast as some of the older Western cities. In speaking of the West, particularly the section from which he came, he had the most favourable reports. He said that building operations were going on at a marvellous rate, and prospects were of the brightest. He also said that he had seen a number of people from this district out there. Mr. Wright's many friends here were pleased to see him back in the city again, and wish him the greatest success in the West, where he apparently intends making His permanent home.

LEADING LIBERALS HOLD CAUCUS IN TORONTO

Statement Charges the Whitney Government With Neglect of the Possibilities of Ontario---Claim the Conservatives Have Been Negligent in Many Respects.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—The leading Liberals of the province, to the number of about thirty, assembled yesterday afternoon in the reform headquarters here to discuss the provincial situation and size up their chances. They also discussed the Hon. A. G. MacKay, and just before adjournment the caucus unanimously passed a resolution of confidence in his leadership.

The caucus was attended by all the Liberal members of the Legislature and by the Liberal candidates who have already been nominated for the coming election. Mr. MacKay was also there. From what could be gathered later the meeting was fairly harmonious.

A statement was officially handed out in the evening by C. M. Smith of Sault Ste. Marie and was as follows: "The unanimous conviction was expressed that the Whitney Government had failed to live up to the expectations of the people of Ontario. The census returns just published, coupled with the conspicuous inability of the administration to take advantage of its great opportunities in the north country were cited as evidences of the necessity for a change of Government at Toronto."

"It was felt that the agricultural policy of the Whitney Government so far as old Ontario is concerned and the colonization policy for the agricultural lands in New Ontario is entirely inadequate. The census returns show that the Whitney police has not only not retained the natural increase in the rural population of old Ontario, but has absolutely failed to secure any part of the large immigration for either new or old Ontario. So much so that the rural population of the whole province has actually decreased during the regime of the present Government.

"Before adjournment on motion of Mr. Daniel Reed, M.P.P., for Wentworth, and Mr. J. D. Elliott, M.P.P., for West Middlesex, the caucus passed an unanimous resolution of confidence in the leadership of the Hon. Mr. MacKay."

FIREBUG AT WORK?

Incendiary May Be Responsible For Toronto Blaze.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—What looks very like a fire set to cover the entry and looting of the safe in the Taylor Printing Co.'s office in the basement of the Toronto Paper Co.'s new building on the north side of King, west of Bathurst street, was discovered by L. Spence of 189 Jameson avenue, as he was running his motor car in West King street at 10.55 last night. He turned in an alarm, and when the firemen, with Deputy Chief Noble, entered, they found that an entry had already been forced by a man who was seen walking to the north end of the basement. This man helped the men in with first lay of hose and they hurried back to the hoist shaft, where the fire was running to the upper floors. A stream was shot up this and another carried up the rear fire escape and the fire was soon subdued.

The damage to the box company was $2,500, fully covered by insurance, and that to the printing company was less than $500.

After the fire had been extinguished it was found that a little office of the printing company in the basement under the stairs had been entered, the glass door being forced and a small safe inside was opened by someone who knew or was able to manipulate the combination. Whatever was in it had been taken save a receipt for an insurance of $1,000 in the Home Insurance Co. The empty cashbox lay on the floor in front of the safe.

The fire bears every appearance of having been set. It started at the foot of the hoist shaft where it would gain the most rapid headway and where nothing appeared as a natural explanation of its origin. The firemen are quite sure that there was a man inside when they arrived.

Montreal's Population.

Montreal, Oct. 20.—Judging from the inquiries received and the complaints made at the assessment department, the present Dominion census of the city of Montreal is about 26,000 short of its actual population, at a conservative estimate. This statement was made yesterday by P. W. Collins of the muncipal assessment department, in discussing the returns from Ottawa. Mr. Collins also said that the best method of taking census in cities was through the assessors. The assessment department had a complete list of the houses in town, and the assessors would prepare cards for each house for filling out. This was a scientific plan, and omissions could be readily detected.

"If the census enumerators had even come to us after they took the returns we could have checked the figures and told them of omissions."

Mr. William Robb, the city treasurer, said that the assessment commissioners were going to recommend to the Board of Control that they should be instructed to take an annual census of the city.

Dr. Louis Laberge, medical health officer, said that according to his estimate, the enumerators were at least 4,000 short in their count.

On Eve of Marriage.

Montreal, Oct. 20.—While working overtime in order to earn more money, as he was to be married in a few weeks, Robert Wills, an employe of the Canadian Rubber Co., was electrocuted here yesterday morning while installing new wires.

Wills, who was employed in the electrical department, worked all day Wednesday, but hearing that work was to be continued through the night, asked to be allowed to work overtime, saying he was about to be married. His foreman, Robert Tees, gave his permission, and he and another electrician, J. Bastian, went upstairs to connect some wires. In the early morning Wills inadvertently touched a live wire and was killed.

Surface Cars Must Go.

Boston, Oct. 20.—"The time is rapidly approaching when surface street railway cars in all the large cities will be replaced by subways." So says Chief Engineer Davis of the Boston Transit Commission, and Chief Engineer Kimball of the Boston Elevated, operating all the Boston lines.

BODY OF MISSING GIRL IS FOUND IN THE RIVER

Friends Scout the Idea of Suicide and Are Convinced That She Has Been the Victim of Foul Play---Family Prostrated With Grief.

Parry Sound, Oct. 20.—Word has been received here that the body of Violet Smith, the school teacher who has been missing for ten days, and for whom the whole countryside was being searched, has been found floating in the River Shebashekong, about a quarter of a mile from the house of Peter Ramsay, with whom she was boarding.

Captain Brock Batten of Port Arthur, Miss Smith's brother-in-law, and Wm. Beatty recovered the body, which was allowed to remain in the water attached to a small boat, pending the arrival of Coroner Davis.

Miss Violet Smith, who came from Collingwood, had many friends in Toronto, she having lived at 54 McGill street while studying at the Normal School, and all who knew her, speak of her in the highest terms. She is described as extremely retiring and diffident, and her failure to pass her final examination last summer is attributed to lack of self-confidence, as she appeared to be clever and painstaking. The cost of her studies was defrayed by a brother, Joseph, to whom she was deeply attached.

Being anxious to undertake the teaching profession, she accepted the opening at Dillon Port in September last.

Miss Smith's mother passed away on Nov. 14 of last year.

Prostrated with grief and on the verge of collapse through nervousness and excitement, the dead girl's two sisters, Evelyn and Birdie, are staying for the time being at Herman's restaurant on Yonge street, and are both under the doctor's care. They scout the idea of suicide and maintain that their sister must have been murdered.

There is no knowledge among her friends and relatives here in Toronto of any love affair, or jealousy which might have led to the tragedy. In writing to her sisters, Violet remarked that the reports she had heard before coming to Dillon Port that it was a "rough" place, were true, and the longer she stayed the more she realized how rough it was.

Miss Smith had commenced to teach school there at the opening of the fall term, and had intended to stay till the Christmas holidays, anyhow. She had only been in Dillon Port five or six weeks before her mysterious disappearance.

Mr. Herman, who was well acquainted with Miss Smith, says she never was melancholy, but always quiet and reserved. Her hair was dark in color and she was small and slender in physique. She was 19 years old, and quite clever, having passed her matriculation when she was 15. In languages she was particularly proficient.

Her two sisters are anxiously awaiting particulars of the tragedy, which are expected to-day. If it is found that Violet has been done away with, not a stone will be left unturned to bring the culprit to justice.

Important developments in the case are expected by the dead girl's friends in Toronto.

NO STATEMENT YET.

Hon. Mackenzie King Indicates That He Will Keep to Politics.

Berlin, Oct. 20.—At the dinner tendered to Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King here last night, some very caustic remarks were made by Thomas Hilliard as to the ignorance of the electors at large. The majority of voters did not vote against reciprocity, but against annexation, the navy, the ne temere decree, he said. He was perplexed because of there being a different policy in every province and concession.

Mr. King, who rose to speak shortly before midnight, and continued to the "wee sma' hours o' the morning," said that he was amazed at the results that had been attained with the difficulties that had to be contended with.

"It was useless for me," declared Mr. King, "as a Cabinet Minister to state that the Government would not go any further than the agreement stated, because the Conservatives had used every argument to generate fear in the hearts of the people. I admit that the manner in which the pact was presented was not the best form possible. But when we come to realize the great task of trying to fight against ignorance, passion, prejudice we in North Waterloo cannot but feel somewhat elated over the results."

Mr. King made no definite statements as to his future. He denied the rumor that he was going into the United States. He said: "I have purposely refrained from making any definite statement as to what the future has in store for me." Already Liberals in Ontario (federals) have offered me their seats, but public life has demonstrated to me the necessity of mastering the important questions that affect the lives of the laboring classes, whom I have learned to love, and with this in mind it will take some months to decide as to what action I will take.

"I hope to remain in Canadian politics for a long time to come, because Canada is one of the most important assets in the British Empire, which is the greatest agent of peace and justice on this earth at the present time."

G. T. R. Outside Party Politics.

London, Oct. 20.—(C. A. P. Cable.)—At the Standard Oil Co. of Canada meeting yesterday, the chairman said that while the balance sheet was not as satisfactory as he would like he very shortly hoped to be able to report a more prosperous state of things.

Chairman Smithers, interviewed anent the effect of the change of Government in Canada on the G. T. P., says that the G. T. R. has nothing to do with the Government's railway policy, and is outside the arena of party politics. Regarding trans-Pacific ocean steamships, it was altogether premature to make any statement. He derided the notion that Canada is likely to receive any setback.

Chinese Liberal With Cash.

San Francisco, Cal., Oct. 20.—A Chinese laborer, Lee King Hon, yesterday, laid a sack containing $1,000 gold, his life's savings on the counter of the revolutionary office. He was given $2,000 in the paper currency of the republic. This currency will be redeemed in gold if the revolt is successful.

Tong King Chong, editor of a Chinese paper, reports the receipt of a check for $600 from Toronto, Ont.

The Chinese Freemasons of Victoria, B.C., recently sold their building for $50,000, and turned the money over to the revolution.

An Educational Crisis.

Winnipeg, Oct. 20.—At a meeting of the Manitoba College board last night the action of the Manitoba College senate, when it was decided to discontinue relations with Wesley College in the teaching of moderns, was reviewed.

Several influential Presbyterian ministers are said favor Manitoba College giving up the teaching of arts, and allowing the University College to teach all subjects except theology.

Balloon Blown Out to Sea.

Dieppe, France, Oct. 20—A balloon left St. Cloud Wednesday night and was blown out to sea. It eventually dropped into the water and the three passengers were rescued by a trawler after clinging to the car for more than two hours.

SHIPS AT HANKOW

Foreign Cruisers Will Safeguard White Men There

MUTINY ON WARSHIPS

Pekin, Oct. 20.—The foreign legations in Pekin have received no despatches from Hankow since 6 o'clock Wednesday evening. The last message from the American consul-general, Roger S. Greene, stated only that the fighting had begun. It is believed, however, that the concessions in Hankow are safe, as ten or twelve foreign cruisers and gunboats in the harbor are ample protection, even from the joint Chinese army and navy.

But it will be impossible to prevent stray shells from threatening the foreigners, conflagrations and looting by the rabble. It would be difficult to cordon the concessions, because they are not surrounded by a wall. Only narrow streets cut them off from the densely packed Chinese city.

It is hoped that all the women and children have already been safely removed from Hankow, as it is feared that the defeat of the revolutionaries might be followed by excesses on the part of the mob, careful enquiries indicating that the people have more fear of the revolutionaries than sympathy for them.

The German legation at Pekin has made denial of the report that German troops had been engaged in the fighting in the streets of Hankow.

The Board of Communication early Wednesday evening received two despatches. One mentioned Siaokan, in Hupeh province, as having been captured by the rebels; the other was interrupted while being transmitted.

A report has reached here that imperialist troops have refused to detrain at Hankow. Other reports state that the Chinese gunboats took little part in Wednesday's fighting. Their inactivity is explained by the fact that a direct fire would have endangered their troops, while a flank fire would have involved a bombardment over foreign concessions.

Signs of discontent at Hankow are subsiding after Wednesday's fight. The rebels who retreated because of shortage of ammunition and the arrival of Government reinforcements, retired in a southerly direction. Some of them re-entered the native city of Hankow, while others made their way towards Wuchang. The loyal troops were not sufficiently strong to press home any advantage they had gained.

The American attache, Lt.-Col. Wm. D. Beach, and Capt. J. H. Reeves, returned to Pekin Wednesday night because they were not permitted to accompany the troops to Hankow. They say that the orderliness and precision with which the troop trains are being sent southward is admirable. The food supply seemed to be abundant and the troops were in good spirits. The rapidity with which 20,000 men have been despatched to the south has surprised the military attaches.

Capt. Reeves gave it as his opinion that the Imperials have made a great mistake in taking the field, instead of the mountain guns, as the lack of roads makes mule-carried cannon preferable.

An edict issued yesterday gives Yuan Shi Kai, as viceroy of the disaffected provinces, authority over the War Minister, Yin Tchang, who is now serving as a general in the field.

A strict censorship was established yesterday on all trans-provincial messages regarding military movements and also on all code messages, except consular and legation despatches. Even the legations are deprived of news by the interruption of the wires, and there is anxious suspense, as the last messages received described the continuance of desultory firing, with rebel reinforcements crossing the river.

According to a consular despatch, the rebels, after crossing from Hanyan, on the night of Oct. 17, evidently marched all night long in a northeasterly direction around the foreign concessions and attacked the Imperialists shortly after daylight at their camp near the railway. The station at which the encounter took place was not that immediately behind the concessions, but seven or eight miles to the eastward, on the Yangtse. The other station, which has frequently changed hands and at which the disarming and slaughtering of three Imperial soldiers took place, is evidently the main station, immediately behind the concessions.

Officials of the Chinese Foreign Board reiterate that the recapture of Wuchang is only a matter of days. The attitude of the Chinese here towards foreigners cannot be criticised and not the slightest danger is anticipated.

The Province of Szechuen continues to be isolated. There has been no news from that quarter in several days.

Did Warships Mutiny?

San Francisco, Oct. 20.—A despatch from Shanghai records a rumor that three Imperial warships have surrendered and raised the flag of the republic. It is also said that the rebels have captured Wangchow, Province of Hupeh, occupied the forts and telegraph office there and are advancing towards Sheungyang.

Other messages say the American consul at Nanking has asked the American legation at Pekin for warship protection, expecting serious trouble there.

Canada vs. Australia.

London, Oct. 20—(C. A. P. Cable.)—Commenting upon the Canadian census returns, The Daily News says that the proximity of the Dominion to the United States and Europe, combined with greater natural advantages than a generous emigration policy, explains how Canada has been outstripping Australia in the matter of population in the short space of twenty years.

A despatch from Sydney, N. S. W., says: "The Hon. Mr. Beeby, Minister of Lands, promises to throw open a million acres of land on leasehold tenure next year. Hon. Mr. Nelson, the ex-Minister, is attending the Chicago Irrigation Conference, to arrange for immigrants from the United States and to enquire if the appointment of commercial agents in America would be advisable.

Brakeman Loses Both Legs.

Guelph, Oct. 20.—Grand Trunk trainmen who are inclined to be superstitious approach Guelph Junction with grave misgivings. Three accidents have occurred, two of which have already proved fatal, and the third may cost James Patten, brakeman, running between Toronto Junction and London, and residing in the latter place, his life.

Patten was running along the top of his train Wednesday midnight, when there is said to have been a sudden jerking of the locomotive, which threw him. Both legs were severed.

Serious Obstacle Withdrawn.

London, Oct. 20.—It is officially announced that as a result of a final conference yesterday between Chancellor Lloyd-George and the representatives of the Friendly Societies, at which concessions were made by the societies, opposition to the Chancellor's national insurance bill, which has been a most serious obstacle, has been withdrawn and the support of the societies pledged. The bill will be taken up when Parliament reassembles on Oct. 24, and pushed through.

Might Have Been a Wreck.

Brockville, Oct. 20.—The keen observation of the engineer in charge of the International Limited to Montreal averted what might have proved a terrible wreck. After the train pulled into Brockville he made the usual inspection of the engine and was quick to detect a noticeable defect in the axle of the front driving wheel, which was badly cracked. The engine was promptly replaced by another and sent to the shops for repairs.

Germany Interferes.

Berlin, Oct. 20.—The Government has interfered in the case of a German reserve, Lt. Von Lochow, whom the Italian Consul has ordered to leave Tripoli because he is suspected of being a spy. Germany demands that Italy prove her case before expelling a citizen of Germany.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"Is this true?" he repeated, and even as he asked it he felt that whatever part she might be playing in that crowded drama he would in the end be compelled to stand by her.

"No," whispered the woman, white to her lips. "It is not true."

"Have you a husband?"

"No," she still answered in her low voice. The monosyllable was emotionless, yet he could see by her face that she was suffering.

Ganley laughed outright. It was not a pleasant laugh.

"And you never married a mangy, half-caste diamond-wearing Santo Domingan named De Perralta?" demanded the man on the berth edge.

"I married a man named Perralta," answered the woman slowly, her unwavering eyes on McKinnon as she spoke.

"Then it is true?" A note of involuntary bitterness rang through McKinnon's sharp query.

"Yes," she answered.

"But you have just said you had no husband!"

"He was dragged from the carriage half an hour after the ceremony."

"What ceremony?"

"After our marriage. I have not seen him since that day. Seven weeks later he died of yellow fever."

"And tell why he was dragged from that carriage," prompted Ganley, with his guttural and mirthless laugh, as he saw the woman's wide eyes watching him closely, almost challengingly.

"He had shot the wife of a government official named Gurmanito, in Bogota," she answered in her listless monotone. "That was only one of other things."

"Other things which made him almost worthy of the family he'd married into," interpolated the scoffing Ganley, in luxurious appreciation of her misery.

McKinnon could see that she was shaking ,that her whole body was quivering. When she spoke again, hurriedly, her voice was higher in pitch, as though the strain upon her was becoming a tension she could no longer control or endure.

"I have never spoken of these things," she said in her tremulous soprano, facing McKinnon, "but I want you to understand. It was three years ago, when I was little more than a schoolgirl. I was under a great debt of gratitude to this man who— to this man Perralta. I had been left in care of the American Consul at La Guayra; I had taken an English steamship to Venezuela, after two years in French school. I was to re-embark from La Guayra for Puerto Locombia, but quarantine was established on account of bubonic plague, before I could get away. I had to live at the consulate on short rations—the American Consul had refused the demand of the Venezuelan Government for a certificate that La Guayra was free of the plague. He and his family were taken off by a United States gunboat, the Paducah, and I would have been sent to the detention camps, had it not been for this man Perralta."

"Go on:" prompted the other, as she paused. "He seemed a gentleman then, and had money and influence. He played his part well. He leased a seagoing tug and had me and my companion, a young German woman, carried out of the infected district. After we had passed the necessary period of quarantine, for observation, in the English hospital at Georgetown, he was there, waiting for us. I was weak and ill—I think it was of coast-fever. He bribed or bought over the German woman, I don't know how. I was tricked into a ceremony I did not understand. I scarcely knew what to do when I found out. But it was decided for me—he was dragged from the carriage as he sat beside me. . . . . I tell you all this because—because I want you to understand."

"I do understand," answered McKinnon.

"And is that all?" asked Ganley, with his careless sneer.

"Yes; that is all," she answered. The insolence of the gross-limbed gun-runner was like a whip-lash to McKinnon.

"And is that all on your side?" he asked ,with a sudden movement of disgust.

"Not by a long shot!" retorted the fan in the raincoat, with unlooked-for energy. "I want later history than all this. I want to know just what this woman's got of mine."

"She has explained that she took this paper," replied the other, pointing to the littered cabin floor.

"What do I care what she said, or says, or is going to say. You've got to show me—I'm from Missouri!"

McKinnon pondered the situation. It was plain that Ganley had regained his self-control, that he could no longer be counted on to act with the unthinking directness of the outraged savage he had seefed.

"There's a very simple way to settle this problem," McKinnon suggested. "We'll lock this cabin, so nothing in it can be interfered with. The three of us will step into your cabin. You'll then go through your belongings, these documents and papers of yours, and I'll check them off as you do so, one by one. It will be easy enough to tell then if anything is missing."

The proposal aroused no enthusiasm in Ganley.

"This is not the hour o' night I care to go into the general-auditing business," was his reply.

"Nor altogether the hour of night for keeping a young lady out of her bed'"

Ganley peered at the speaker for several seconds before replying.

"I like to see you being nice and considerate," he said at last, with his mild and studied laugh. "And I imagine you enjoy being judge and jury in a case like this. And I also imagine, just because this woman's flashed her lamps at you a couple o' times, that you've got an idea that she's all right and I'm all wrong. You've both concluded that this little talk-fest has settled the whole case. But it hasn't. And I guess it's not going to."

He rose to his feet heavily and slowly and thoughtfully, and then turned to McKinnon.

"Remember, I'm not trying to hold you in any way. You're free. You can do what you like. But if anything unexpected should happen, just bear in mind I gave yo ua chance to stand in with me, and you wouldn't take it'"

"Is that a threat?" asked McKinnon.

"Threat? Why should I make threats? Talking's cheap, and there's been a good deal of it handed round here to-night. And, as you say, we've rather tired the lady."

There was no longer any trace of mockery in his voice as he drew himself up and spoke more directly to the younger man.

"And now I'm going to turn in. But don't you forget that I'm still trying to be a friend o' yours!"

"I know it!" said the younger man ,meeting his eyes without flinching.

"Then there's nothing we need to worry about," declared Ganley. And before the other quite realized it the man in the black raincoat, with a benevolent and all-forgiving armwave, crossed the room to the cabin door. No one spoke as he passed out through it and closed it after him.

It was the watching and motionless woman who finally emitted a little gasp in which anger seemed to override astonishment . Her companion was startled by the look of bewilderment, mounting almost to open distrust ,that crept slowly over her face. There seemel to be something akin to pitying contempt in her eyes as she slowly turned about and gazed at him.

"What does this mean?" she demanded .

"Does what mean " he parried, disturbed by the hostility of her gaze.

"The way you have played into Ganley's hand—the way you have sacrificed everything for your own safety'"

"But nothing has been sacrificed," persisted the unhappy McKinnon.

"I have been sacrificed—you have watched him humiliate me—you have helpe dhim to humiliate me!"

"It was hard to bear, I know. But it could not be helped. It's a part of the price we have to pay for our victory. It's a part I would have borne myself, a thousand times over, if I'd only been able."

"The price for what victory?" she demanded.

"The victory we wanted; the thing we've been working for, all along. It's settled—and he doesn't even understand it's settled!"

"Yes; it's settled," she echoed, unhappily.

"But this leaves us free!"

"You do not know this man as I do," was her answer.

"But it's over—we're through with him!"

"He is not through with us!"

"But what can he do, when once I've got in touch with the Princeton?"

She looked about the small cabin, from side to side, forlornly. It was the first time McKinnon had seen actual fear in her eyes. He even felt that she had been vaguely weighing the place's possibilities against assault.

"Are you afraid?" he asked, not comprehending the source of her distrust. She shook her head in negation.

"This is an American ship," was her answer.

"Then what is it?" he asked, oppressed by some new-born isolation of spirit that barred and walled him away from her.

Again that look of almost contemptuous pity crept into her eyes.

"I'm afraid of you," she replied "I'm afraid of the future, and how you will surely fail."

There was, no sign of tears in her eyes, though he had felt, from her voice, that an outburst was imminent. Yet he found it hard, cruelly hard, to meet her ope nand unwavering glance.

"Why have you treated me like this?" she asked him, almost without emotion. "Have you nothing tosay nothing to explain?"

McKinnon did not answer for a moment or two.

"I can't explain," he said, at last his face distorted ,nuder the strong side-light, with some unuttered misery of spirit.

CHAPTER XV.
THE LULL IN THE STORM

It was not until the Laminian was well down off the coast of San Salvador that she rode into settled weather. Then, in a night ,she seemed to emerge from a world of wind and unrest and tumult into a world of brooding quietness. As she crept on forging ever southward under the high-arching azure sky, this sense of quietness and completion grew deeper. The air became warm and soft. The sun streamed down on the patched awnings, on the worn deck that seemed bone-white in the flat, strong light of noonday. Through the ventilators, all day long, came the purposeful throb and beat of the engines ,muffled, like the throbbing of a great heart. There seemed soemthing inevitable and ordered in that unhurried and undeviating pulse, as though the ship and all she carried were for ever at peace with the world.

A passenger or two moved slowly about the level decks or sat listless in the dark shade of the canvas ,listening to the plaintive hiss of the ship's bow as it parted the turquoise sea into two widening simitars of curling foam. Cinders rained gently down on the slowly flapping awnings ,on the bone-white deck boards steaming with sea-water sprayed from a leaking hose in a foolish effort to keep their cracks from widening, on the eddying and milk-white trail behind the threshing screw. From somewhere forward the bells sounded out, lazily, sadly, ghost-like, as though recording time in a world where all things slept. The ship's brasswork flashed and burned in the hot light. From the silence of the bow, at times, came the sound of a calling voice, mournful and measured. Naked-shouldered stokers, blanched and wet with sweat, crept out to the mid-deck rail and let the draught that allevred along the companionways cool their moist skin. Now and then a flying-fish rose and circled away, off the bow, and fell shimmering back into the turquoise sea. Piloting the ship's cut-water, ever raced and dodged a band of porpoises. Now and then a creeping dorsal fin cut the surface of the water and slunk away again. It seemed to impart something ominous and sinister to the unrelieved brilliance of the arching sky. It left the oily and unruffled sea menacing and cadaverous-like in its calm.

The ship crept on, the centre of its circle of water overhung by its circle of sky. Along the flat fringe of this sky were ranged low tiers of cumulus clouds. They seemed as fixed and orderly as the clouds on a painted stage-drop; they stoo dlike floating flecks of cotton, making a circling amphitheatre of the lonely sea. And in the ever-shifting centre of this amphitheatre throbbed and pulsed the thing of flaflshing brasswork and bone-white decks, of sadly flapping awnings, of quiet men with watching and melancholy faces, of a world complete in itself. As the long afternoon waned and the sun dipped behind the orange-red sky-line and the light passed away, th eorderly and sentinel lamps were hung out. Along the pitted side-plates writhed blurred lines of phosphorus. The sea became a circle of inky blackness furrowed by two ghostly lines of foam. The sky melted into a maze of velvet and lonely lightpoints. Along the shadowy hatches sat and crooned vaguel youtlined groups of seamen and from somewhere below decks rose the sound of string-music, mournful, outlandish, touched with mystery, as the lonely ship and the huddled lives she sheltered drifted farther and farther southward.

The outward sense of peace that brooded over the Laminian was not share dby certain of her passengers. Alicia Boynton ,after a feverish night and a day in her berth, emerged from her cabin a little paler than before, with a soft hollow of anxiety under either cheek-bone. But otherwise she showed no sign of the ordeal through which she had passed, or of the chaos of uncertainty which still confronted her.

McKinnon's own nights, since Hatteras had been left behind, had been equally unsettled. His restless and broken sleep was disturbd by dreams wherein he thought he was engulfed in burning quicksands, and held fast there, when he ought to be at his key. The more he struggled firmly the engulfing quicksands seemed to hold him. Then troubled and raged to reach his instrument, just beyond his touch, the more visions of firing-squads and blindfolded prisoners of war would run through his brain, of dark-skinned little soldiers in ragged denim shouting "bravas" to a beautiful woman in navy blue, of imprisonment in a small and fetid quartel, or huge, red-handed conspirators and drunken and cursing ship-captains. In his waking hours he was oppressed by a continued sense of suspended action, like that ominous impression which creeps over a ship when her engines stop in mid-ocean.

The drama about him seemed at a standstill. But only too well he knew that this suspense was for the time being alone. It was not peace into which they were drifting. Things had gone too far for a long-continued armistice. And the longer a truce was maintained, McKinnon felt, the more decisive would be the final action. Events were merely framing themselves for that ultimate surprise which he was hopeless to forecast. He was oppressed by the feeling of vague conspiracies being enwoven about him. What these conspiracies were, he could not even guess.

His one escape from this wearing sense of arrested action lay in his key and recorder. At all times of the day he worked busily at his apparatus or brooded patiently over his typewriter or coherer. Morning, noon, and night he remained on the lookout for any word that might creep in to him. And all the while he kept calling, doggedly, hoping against hope to get in touch with the Princeton or at least to pick up some stray ship or station. He came to feel something forlorn, something poignant, in his repeated calls, fluttering out and dying away unanswered in those vague etheric wildernesses between a lonely sea and a lonely sky. They seemed to endow the wandering ship with a pathos like that of a lost one crying alone and unheard in the night.

Ganley's own attitude made this waiting game a still harder one. He sauntered about under the Laminian's gently flapping awnings, smoking his flat-bellied Hondurian cigars, as placid and unperturbed as a commodore pacing his own yacht deck. He accosted McKinnon ,from time to time, with the off-handed geniality of long-established comradeship. He appeared to have buried all memory of those scenes in which he had taken such a recent and such an active part. He divulged nothing of the plans which were fermenting behind the bulwark of his low and massive frontal bone. He said nothing of the doubts and uncertainties, if such he had, which were preying on his mind. But all the while McKinnon felt that he was being watched, just as all the while he himself was guardedly watching the other.

Once, as McKinnon stood alone at the ship's rail, Ganley sauntered over with his ponderous and deliberate strides, and joined him in his silent study of the star-strewn heavens. The operator waited ,feeling that at last his enigmatic enemy was about to speak. But the gun-runner's meditative eyes remained turned up to the stars, soft and warm and luminous against a sky of velvety blackness. He seemed utterly at peace with the world and his own soul, as McKinnon left him there, contemplating the intimidating vast dome of the tropical heavens.

Many Years an Invalid—Untold Agony From Headaches

Dizziness, Sinking Spells and Excessive Weakness Disappear With Use of

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nearly every woman will read with interest the letter of Mrs. Geo. Bradshaw, quoted below. It tells of years of great suffering from nervous Headache and other symptoms arising from weak, watery blood and a starved and exhausted condition of the nervous system.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Cosy Nook, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I am glad to state that I received benefits from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food which I failed to get any place else. I was troubled for many years, in fact from my early womanhood, with weak, watery blood, and given to dropsy. I suffered untold agonies from nervous sick headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, in fact was a semi-invalid for many years. I tried many kinds of patent medicines and got no help, and tried every new doctor that came along ,but all failed to help me. Doctors told me I had no blood, and that my heart and kidneys were diseased, and that I had so many complaints there was not much use in doctoring up one or two. Four years ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and was glad to see I felt better, and then got six more, and they have cured me of many of my complaints. When I began taking Nerve Food I weighed 110 pounds and to-day I weigh 139, and am 45 years old.

Light, Rapid Trains, Running at Frequent Intervals, May Replace Present System

In a very interesting lecture on railroads of the future at the Royal Geographical Society, Mr. C. R. Enock said the other day: "As to the railroad of the future, we may discover that the hurling of heavy masses of iron and timber through space, as practiced with our present type of rolling stock, is unscientific. In my mind, rather than heavy long trains, the new system takes the form of light, rapid, individual vehicles, running at frequent intervals, upon a light structure of uninterrupted line, under conditions where collision and derailment would be impossible. These vehicles will flash from city to city at double or treble the present speeds, and at a tithe of the present cost.

"It is possible that a system involving light elevated railroads is worthy of consideration and experiment. Not, however, of the ponderous and unsightly type of structure which defaces the side streets of New York, but a structure in which lightness, appearance and low cost are the elements for success. Such a line may be conceived as running across hills and valleys, consisting of little beyond light trussed steel beams carried on columns set in the ground at such a height as to clear ordinary obstacles of roads, hedges, etc., and of a character such as would leave the ground beneath it free for agricultural purposes. Single light vehicles would run upon this structure at high rates of speed, and their stability upon the line against lateral movement would be provided for, possibly by side wheels set horizontally above the centre of gravity revolving against side rails. Thus such vehicles could not run off the line.

"Following out this line of thought, and giving play to the imagination a little, experiments might be made upon the plan of a combination of rail and aeroplane—a semi-flying vehicle using both earth—or rather rail—and air as supporting and even propelling elements. Under such a system it is conceivable that the air-planes forming part of the vehicle would lift it very slightly off the rails, the driving-power then being derived from the side wheels, before mentioned, working against the side lines, which might take the form of thin bars or plates, so allowing for a small rise and fall of the vehicle. These and the other wheels would be rubber-tired. A similar rail overhead might be necessary to keep the vehicle down, and thus the carriage would become a species of enclosed flying machine. If such a scheme were found practicable, the problem of mountain railroads, among others, would be solved. The monorail and the gyroscope might have their adaptions in such a scheme."

THE NEWEST SUFFRAGETTE

Declines to Pay Taxes and is Sent to Prison

The first instance of a suffragist being committed to prison for non-payment of taxes as a protest against the disfranchisement of women, occurred when Miss Clemence Houseman, an authoress, and sister of Mr. Laurence Houseman, was taken to Holloway Gaol by the sheriff's officer. Similar protests have previously ended in distraint, but Miss Houseman had no distrainable goods, and was accordingly committed.

Miss Houseman, who belongs to the Women's Social and Political Union, and is on the committee of the Women's Tax Resistance League, refused to pay for the taxicab in which she was taken to prison, and the sheriff's officer paid the fare of $2.50, which, curiously enough, was the amount of the tax she originally declined to pay.

PASSING OF THE HORSE

The London Cabby is Being Replaced by the Chauffeur

In a calm and matter-of-fact statement the London General Omnibus Company has announced an impending event that marks an epoch in the history of London. At the end of the present month the last horse omnibus of the company's equipment will be withdrawn from the London streets and thenceforward the entire fleet will be motor-driven. After the close of October a few horse omnibuses, belonging to smaller proprietors, may continue to drag weary wheels along suburban by-routes, but not for long.

It is said the increase in Mme. Crespin's rentals is due to her lavish social expenditures.

Soothing Healing Pain-relieving MECCA OINTMENT

A Family Medicine

This honest, straightforward statement of Mr. J. J. Vahling of his wife's and his experiences, is convincing proof of the great merit of Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey.

"I very cheerfully recommend Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey to everyone. I was ailing for many years and had severe pains in my back and weakness; but since I used this medicine I am much stronger and the pains have entirely left me. My wife had nervous trouble and headache. Now she is much better, owing to this wonderful remedy. We are thankful to you for what Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey has done for us and will always have it in our medicine chest."—J. J. Vahling, 1862 Menard St., St. Louis, Mo.

Duffy's Pure Malt Whiskey

is one of the greatest strength builders and tonic stimulants known to medicine. It strengthens and fortifies the system and assists in building up the weakened tissues, in a gradual healthy manner. It is invaluable to bring restful sleep and for all throat, lung and stomach troubles.

All liquor dealers, or direct, $1.25 a large bottle. Be sure you get the genuine; substitutes and imitations are injurious. Medical booklet, containing rare, common-sense rules for health and testimonials, also doctor's advice, sent free to anyone who writes.

TO PREVENT THEFTS

An Apparatus to Guard Against a Repetition of the "Mona Lisa" Affair

The curator of Prince Leichtenstein's gallery at Vienna, the largest private gallery in the world, has given a demonstration of an apparatus he has invented to prevent such thefts as that of the "Mona Lisa." It consists of special electric contacts hidden in the wall behind the frame, and so arranged that the least touch on the frame or the picture makes a bell ring in a central office. Here there is a board with numbers like those in hotels, so that the guardian can see at once which picture has been disturbed and proceed there direct without loss of time.

STRIKE OF STUDENTS

Mayo Students Demanded the Abolition of the Cane

A strike of forty students has taken place at St. Murdoch's College, near Ballina, County Mayo, Ireland. They demand Wednesdays off and the abolition of the cane. They escaped out of the college and fled across the country towards the mountains. The professors were summoned and were soon in pursuit of the youths. The students, however, managed to elude their pursuers, and the next that was heard of them was in a telegram asking for an arbitration committee to be appointed to settle their grievances. The telegram gave the necessary clue to their whereabouts, and they were all captured by Professor Moran playing a game of handball at Foxford, five miles away. They were brought back by the mail train to Ballina.

SCARCITY OF DOMESTICS

The housewives of Berlin are in an unfortunate plight, and their dependant man folk are in a position not less enviable, owing to the remarkable dearth of domestics, chiefly attributed to Germany's industrial prosperity, which creates a great demand for female labor in all branches of commerce and manufacture.

TIPS ON OCEAN LINERS

Some of the Stewards Make Big Money from Passengers

To tip or not to tip? That is the question which is agitating the minds at the prest time of tourists between Europe and America. And it would certainly seem that travellers have just cause for complaint, judging by the tips which are expected of them. Upon an Atlantic liner one pays at least $10 in tips after a seven days' journey. This is made up as follows: Bedroom steward, $3.50; table steward, $3.50; deck steward, $1.25; boots, $1.25; library steward, $1.25; smoking-room steward, $1.25. That is the average man's scale. Passengers occupying expensive suites of rooms often give five times as much.

Indeed, there is no limit to the amount of money which a steward who has a knack of making himself useful to passengers can amass. Two hundred or three hundred dollars a voyage is often made by first-class stewards, and one of them did so well that he not only purchased a big house out of his savings, but sent his sons to one of the leading colleges.

There was a story told in a Liverpool court some time ago fo an American passenger on one of the liners who distributed over $35 in tips, and then took it back because he said he was badgered for more. There is certainly no compulsion to tip, and the rule with most companies is that the steward who solicits fees renders himself liable to instant dismissal. A judicious tip, however, adds much to the pleasure of a voyage, and the bedroom stewards are usually very lucky. Each has about twelve passengers to loo kafter, most of whom tip with sums ranging from $3 to $6.

BETTER BE SINCERE

Strength Lies in Character; Deceit in Weakness

Nothing adds so much to one's personal power as the knowledge that one is absolutely sincere.

If your life is a perpetual sham and deceit, if you know that you are not what you pretend to be, you cannot be strong or exercise any real influence. Others will find you out.

If there is a mote in your eye, set about trying to remove it. Don't fence with it, and try to deceive yourself that it is not there. Other people see it, if you don't.

If there is a continual struggle going on inside you as to whether you are really honest with yourself or not, be sure that there is something wrong. Endeavor to eradicate this.

If you do not trust yourself, you will be unable to look the world in the face. You will "shuffle" out of things, and in time will become so sly that your whole moral being will be besmirched.

Strength lies in character. Deceit is weakness; sham and pretence are enfeebling. Only the genuine and sincere are worth while. Be true to yourself always; then there will be no looking back or turning away to avoid the searching glance of those who are really true.—Home Companion.

PERJURY SYNDICATE

Men Who Manufactured Evidence for Use in Constantinople

A "perjury syndicate," which did a flourishing business in manufactured evidence supplied to litigants at the law-courts in Constantinople, has just come to an end through internal disagreement, and details of its peculiar methods are published. The personnel of the syndicate was composed of pensioned ushers and other petty officials attached to the courts. This organization devotes itself to providing, at reasonable charges, witnesses for the services of litigants who arrive at court insufficiently provided with testimony. The society's agents are to be found outside the doors of all branches of the judicature, including those dealing with divorce and chancery cases, and by reason of the extensive experience of its members, gained by long service in official posts of trust, it is able to supply any class of evidence desired, not as unintelligent perjury, but in a form appropriate to the usual preference of the particular judge detailed to try the case. The success of the society has so widened its sphere of operations that its terms are now on a low cash basis. The charges for even the highest class of testimony supplied—that in divorce proceedings—are so reasonable, that for two medjidiehs ($1.60) a head the society will provide a petitioning wife with eye-witnesses, of straightforward and convincing simplicity of bearing, of the actual ill-treatment on the part of the respondent required to secure the desired separation.

The collapse of this organization is due to internal dissension among its members as to whether the basis of the division of profits should take account of the additional strain and conscience and religious conviction entailed by the more complicated cases submitted to the society, or whether regard should be had only to time spent in attendance at court. This dispute led to a brawl, which attracted the attention of the police. Without a single exception, all the members of the society have offered to give evidence for the Crown, and so high an appreciation of each other's abilities is shown by the late associates of the disbanded enterprise that the most intricate and harrowing revelations have been promised to the authorities by ex-members eager to obtain the benefits of service in the witness-box. It is stated that with the dissolution of this association the main supplementary source of livelihood far a large number of meagerly pensioned court officials in Constantinople has been removed.

CAPTURE of A FIFTY EIGHT FOOT BOA CONSTRICTOR

EXPERIENCES of a Traveller in the Brazilian Jungle Where He Was Fascinated by the Huge, Coiled Monster Until a Fusillade of Bullets Drove It Off to Die

MR. ALGOT LANGE'S experiences in the Amazon region of South America has been marked by dramatic episodes, and some of his adventures have already been made public. The following jungle story has been transmitted to the United States from Floresta, Itecoahy River, Amazonas. Mr. Lange predicts people in the United States will doubt that the snake killed measured more than fifty-eight feet. In this connection, the following, written to him by Mr. William T. Hornaday, director of the New York Zoological Park, is of interest:—

"Thus far I have not been able to obtain a definite record for either anaconda or python, measured by careful and competent hands, that exceeded twenty-five feet. I am inclined to believe that the anaconda attains a considerably greater length than even the reticulated python of the East Indies, and I have no doubt that, occasionally, the anaconda attains thirty feet in length."

BY ALGOT LANGE.

(Copyright, 1911, by the New York Herald Co. All rights reserved.)

I HAVE been asked many times about the frequency of snakes in the swampy forest regions of the Amazon, but have not had an occasion to relate my personal experience with these, partly because I have been awaiting the arrival of the skin of the snake that I am going to make the subject of this article, and partly because there is always some scepticism displayed in the acceptance of snake stories, if these have not been analysed and discussed by men "who know."

During my one year stay in the wilderness of the Amazon I met a man who was a Brazilian and who had managed to live for thirty-eight years in the Amazon region. He had seen more of the animal life in the forests than most men ever succeed in seeing, but declared that he had never seen a large boa constrictor. He did by no means dispute their existence, even in the very neighborhood where he then lived, besides he had no particular interest in looking for animals, which is easily understood.

It took me seven months' search, spent in the middle of the jungles, to reach this goal of my hopes and anticipations, and then my dreams were so fully realised that for months afterward I retained the effects of the dreadful event, enacted so far away from human beings, in the silence of the humid, fever-laden night.

It has often been asserted that a snake will charm its victim at the moment of encounter. It sounded to me like a nursery tale, but when I came to live among these sons of the forest, learned their manner of thinking and living, I respected their words and never had an occasion to mistrust their statements, which seemed incredible at first, but later experiences would always corroborate their truth.

I will therefore relate an experience which will lead up to a fuller comprehension of my personal encounter with one of these much disputed and dreaded giant snakes. I was then living at a large rubber estate called Floresta, on the upper Itecoahy River in northwest Brazil, about twenty-eight hundred miles from the mouth of the great Amazon River. The forests were practically virgin, interspersed with pathways for the use of the rubber workers, who would frequently meet tapirs and jaguars only a few yards outside their huts, and therefore never ventured out without their .44 Winchesters; neither would they on Saturday nights leave their huts by canoe to go to the headquarters, some distance away on the Itecoahy River, without being well prepared for eventual meetings with the animals of the surrounding forests.

José Perreira, a rubber worker, had left headquarters after having given his weekly report on the extracted rubber, and was now paddling his canoe at a good rate down the stream, expecting to reach his hut before midnight. Reaching a recess in the banks, formed by the confluence of a small creek called "Igarape do Inferno," or the "Creek of Hell," he thought that he had heard the noise of some game, probably a deer or a tapir, drinking the water, and he silently took his canoe to the bank, where he fastened it to a branch, at the same time holding his rifle in readiness. However, as he did not see anything, he returned to the canoe and continued on his way down the stream.

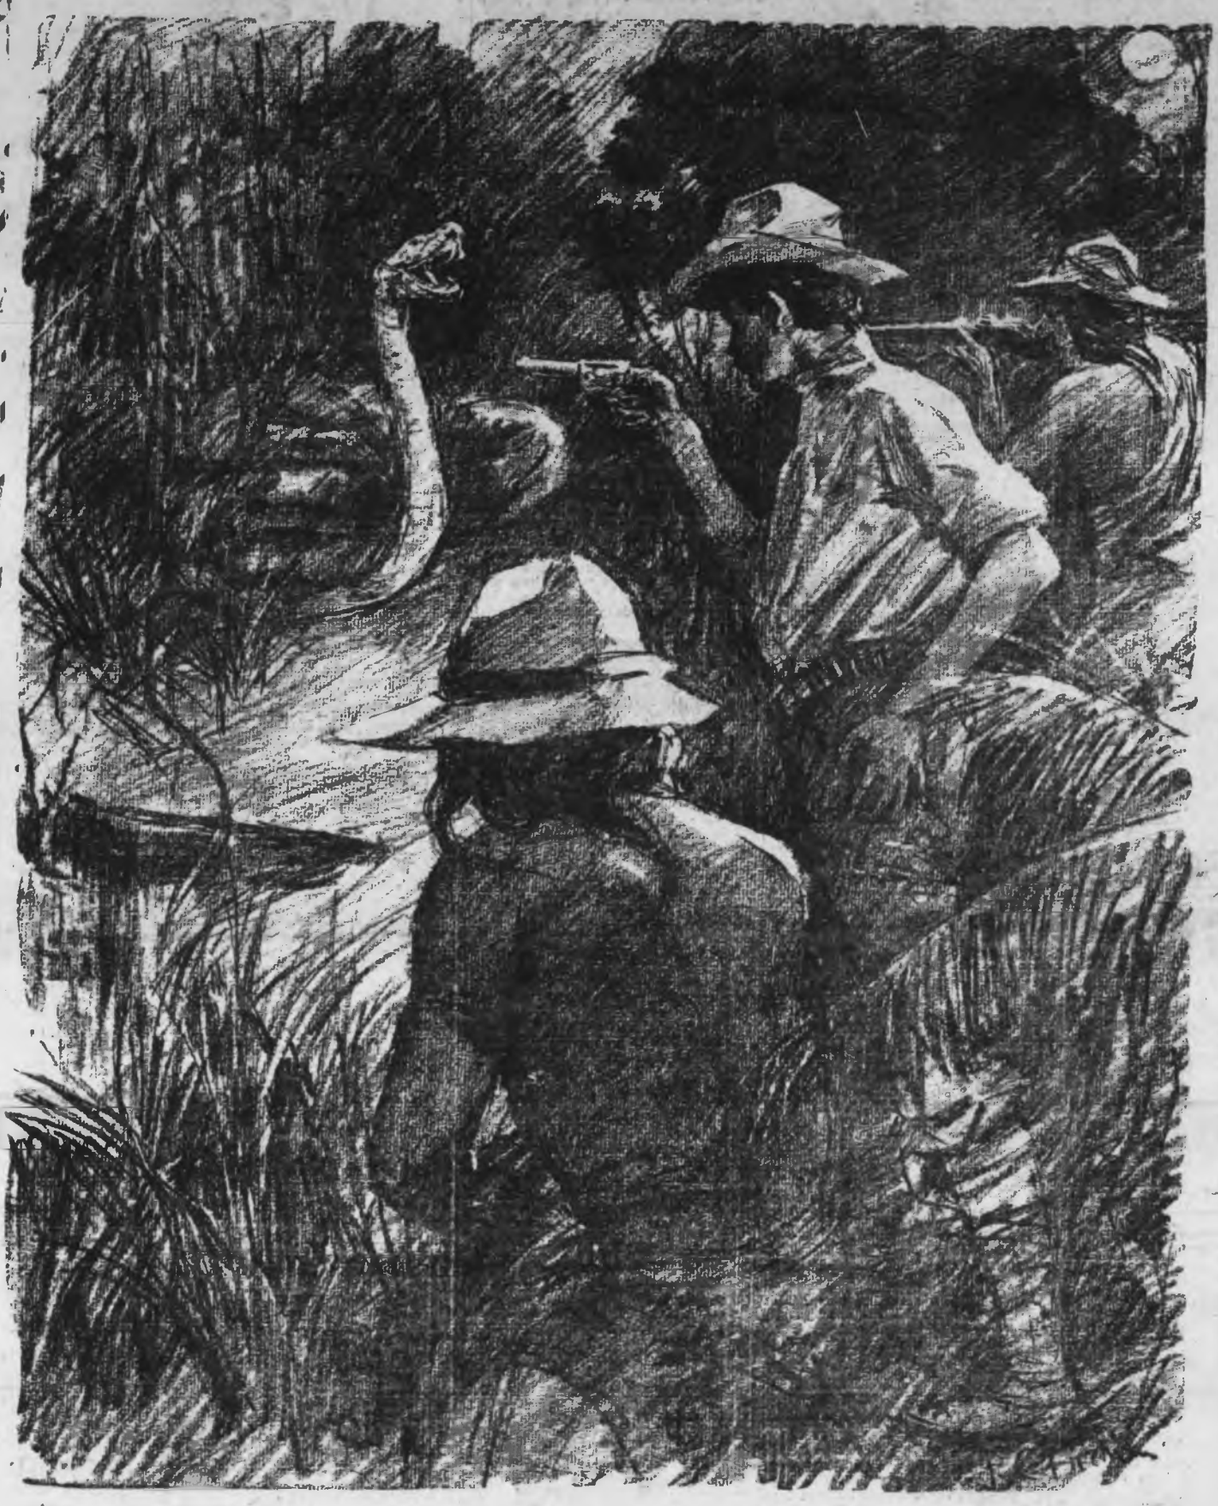
Hardly more than ten yards away from this spot he stopped and listened. He could hear nothing but the distant roar of a howling monkey—this he was used to hearing on his nightly trips—no! it was something that he was not used to, he could not call it a sound, it was something that called him to the spot on the bank that he had left but a few minutes ago. He fastened his canoe again to the same branch and crept up to the same place, feeling very uneasy and uncomfortable, but he saw nothing that could alarm him, nothing that he could draw the bead of his rifle on, but yet there was something. For the second time did he leave this spot without being able to account for the mysterious force that dragged him to this gloomy, moonlit place on the dark, treacherous bank.

Mysteriously Drawn Back.

In setting out in the stream again he decided to fight off the uncanny, unexplainable feeling that had called him back, but scarcely at a stone's throw from the bank he felt the same desire to return to the place—a desire that he had never before experienced—but he returned and looked and meditated over the Thing that he did not understand.

He had not drunk cachasa that day and was consequently quite sober; he had not had fever for two weeks and was in the best of health, physically as well as mentally; he had never indulged so much in the dissipations of civilisation that his nerves had been affected; he had lived all his life in these surroundings and knew not fear from man or beast. And now this splendid type of manhood, free and unbound in his thoughts and unprejudiced by superstitions, broke down completely and hid his face in his hands, sobbing like a child afraid of ghosts in a dark room. He had been called to this spot three times without knowing the cause—and now as the mysterious force had attracted him like the magnet a piece of iron—now he was unable to move and as helpless as a child.

Luckily three rubber workers from headquarters were passing on their way to their hut a little above the "Creek of Hell" when they heard sobbing from the bank and called out loud. The hypnotised seringueiro managed to answer that he had been forced to the same spot three times and was unable to get away and that he was deadly frightened of something. The three rubber workers approached in their canoe, rifles cocked and fully prepared to meet a jaguar as they thought at first, but only a few yards from their imprisoned comrade they stopped and saw that directly under the root where the man was sitting was the head of a monstrous boa constrictor, its eyes fixed on the man. It was only a few feet away from him, but he had never been able to see it.



In This Mannet I Was Less Under the Control of the Mesmerism of the Snake.

The men took good aim and fired, crushing the head of the snake, and this broke the spell of the man, but he was completely played out and had to lie down in the bottom of the canoe shivering like a man with the ague.

The men took pains in measuring the length of this snake before leaving. It measured 79 palmas, or 52 feet 8 inches. In circumference it measured 11 palmas, corresponding to a diameter of 28 inches. Its mouth they said was 2 palmas, or 16 inches, but how this was to be understood I do not know.

This happened while I lived at the headquarters and I had a long talk with Perreira and could not shake the statement of this man nor the three other men, but yet I remained a sceptic as to the alleged charming or mesmeric powers of the snake, at least as far as concerns man.

We were awaiting the monthly arrival of the launch from the town of Remate de Males, three hundred miles down the river, and had spent the day weighing the rubber at the camp of one of the employes half a day's journey from headquarters, and had now loaded the rubber pellets into our large canoe to take this up to headquarters, where the shipment would take place.

We had spent the evening drinking our black coffee and eating some large, sweet pineapples, whereafter we took a nap lasting until midnight, when we all got up to start in on our nightly trip. It had been considered best to travel at night, when it was nice and cool and none of the pestering insects would torture us, and we were now all paddling the heavy canoe at a merry rate, smoking our pipes and singing in the still, dark night.

Soon we rounded a point where the mighty trees, covered with orchids and other parasite plants, sent their branches down to the very water that in its depths was hiding the dreaded water snakes—the only sound we heard was the weird calling of the night owl, "the mother of the moon," as the Indians call it. Besides this and the lapping sound of the water as we sped along nothing disturbed the immensity of the night.

I was in the act of lighting another pipeful when one of the men cried out:—

"What is this?"

We all stopped paddling and looked ahead at a dark object on the moonlit sandbar not far from us. The only response was "Sucurnju."

Few people can comprehend the feeling that creeps up into one's heart when that word is pronounced under these circumstances, here in the far off forests in the middle of the night. The word meant boa constrictor, but meant a lot more at this moment. An indescribable feeling of awe seized me. I knew now that I was to face the master of the swamps, the great silent monster of the river and of which so much has been said and which so few have ever met in its home.

The canoe ran ashore and we advanced in single file. I had now a chance to inspect the object in question. On the soft muddy sandbar, half hidden by dead branches, was a cone shaped tower of about seven feet in height. From the base of this tower I saw the neck and head of a snake flat on the ground with its beady eyes staring at us as we slowly advanced and stopped. The snake was coiled up, forming this enormous mass of round, scaly monstrosity large enough to crush us all to death at once. We stopped at a distance of about fifteen feet and looked at each other and, strange to say, I felt as if I was spellbound, unable to move any further or even to think or act on my own initiative.

The snake made no move, but in the clear moonlight I could see its body expand and contract in breathing; its yellow eyes seemed to radiate a phosphorescent light. I felt no fear, nor inclination to retreat. I was here facing a sight that few men have succeeded in seeing. Should I now retreat as a coward and afterward let these Indians ridicule the force of my proud statements of not acknowledging the force of the "sucuruju's" eyes. Thus we were standing looking at each other, scarcely moving an eyelid, while the snake looked at us all as if saying, "I've got you all, no matter what you are going to do."

I slid the right hand down to the holster where I kept my automatic Luger pistol and slowly I removed the safety lock, at the same time staring the men in their faces. In this manner I was less under the control of the mesmerism of the snake and could to some extent think and act. I wheeled around while I still had control of my facilities and, perceiving a slight movement of the coiled up snake head, I fired point blank at the head of the snake and let go the entire chamber of soft-nose bullets. Instantly the men woke up from their trance and they in their turn fired, emptying their .44 Winchesters into the head of the snake, which by this time had raised its head to a height above our heads, loudly hissing in its agony. Our yellings echoed through the deep forest. As the snake was uncoiling itself and writhing with pain it made for the water front.

By this time we were all relieved of the terrible suspense and danced around at a respectful distance from the struggling of the snake and the powerful lashes of its tail, which would have killed its man with one blow.

After half an hour the struggles of the snake seemed to subside, but we were yet hesitating to approach it, although it seemed very quiet and had its head and a portion of its body submerged in the water. We decided to stay here throughout the night and wait till the next day, as I was very anxious to skin the snake and take the trophy home to the States as a souvenir of a night's adventures in these remote forests.

We went up in the bushes and lit a fire, suspending our hammocks to some tree trunks, and slept soundly not more than ten yards away from the dying snake.

We all got up before sunrise at six o'clock, had our coffee in haste and ran down to see the snake. It was dead, its head practically shot to pieces. We set to work stretching the huge body out on the sand bar and by eight o'clock we had the entire snake flat on the ground ready to measure and skin.

It was a most remarkable sight. Here was a snake stretched out on the ground and around it were six Indians and one New York man, here in the woods as far away from civilization as it is possible to get without actually going to Hades.

A Boa Fifty-Eight Feet Long.

I proceeded to take my measurements and used the span between my thumb and my little finger as a unit, knowing that this was exactly eight inches. Beginning at the mouth of the snake I continued to the end of the tail and found that this measure was contained eighty-seven and a half times in the length of the body. This gives a total length of fifty-eight feet four inches. The cartridge belt that I carried around my waist would not encircle the body, but it required one span of my hand to complete the belt around the cadaver. When stretched out this measured five feet eight and a half inches.

These measurements are the results of very careful work. I took this measure from the tail to the nose over again, so as to eliminate any errors, whereupon I asked the men who were with me to take the measurements in their manner, only confirming the above mentioned figures.

We proceeded to skin the snake, which was no easy task in the burning sun that was now baking our backs. Besides, great flocks of "urubus," or vultures, had smelled the carcass and were circling above our heads waiting for their share of the spoils. Each man had his section of the snake to work on, using a wooden club and his machete. The men had the snake on its belly and split it open, following the spinal column throughout its length. It was out of the question to skin it from the belly, as the ventrals were far too strong for the knifeblade. About two o'clock in the afternoon we had the snake skinned and the carcass thrown in the river, where it was instantly devoured by the piranias and alligators.

While standing in front of this immense skin I could not withhold an expression to the chief that was with me.

"Gentlemen," I said, "here I am standing on this the 29th day of June, 1911, and have in front of me a snake the size of which is absolutely staggering. When I return to my people in the United States and try to tell these my friends that I have seen and perhaps killed a boa constrictor of nearly twenty yards length, why, then they will laugh at me and call me a man with a bad tongue."

Whereupon my friend the chief rose in his full height and exclaimed in an insulted tone:—"Mister, you say that your people in the North will not believe that we have snakes even larger than this one. That is an insult to us Brazilians. You tell us that in your town New York there is barracoes (huts or houses) that have thirty-five or forty stories on top of each other. How do you expect us to believe such tales?"

I was here in a sad plight, between two realities which existed but were or would be disbelieved in localities so far away from each other.

We brought the skin to headquarters, where I prepared the skin with arsenical soap and boxed it for later shipment to New York. The skin measured, when packed and fully dried, 59 feet 1½ inches in length and 5 feet 1½ inches in width.

The Great Snake.

ECZEMA 20 YEARS!

4 Doctors Failed. Morriscy's No. 4 Cured in 60 Days.

Mr. A. J. Kierstead, Mexico, Maine, tells in a series of letters how he was relieved.

"I am terribly afflicted with Eczema and can find no cure. I have been advised to write you, because Father Morriscy's cures are known in all parts. If you can help me, for God's sake do so. Please reply quick."

Second letter: "Thanks for your quick reply. I have been troubled with Eczema for 20 years—it is on my face, neck, arms and hands, and right now it is one solid sore. I can't seem to get any cure."

10 days later: "As you requested me to let you know how your salve worked, can say it did more good than the four doctors here who treated me. My face and neck—also my arms and hands are almost well—but I need another box of Salve."

July 10th, 1911: "I am delighted to tell you that I am entirely cured of Eczema, and am more than thankful for your Ointment. It did for me what 4 doctors here could not do, and I cannot possibly find fitting words of praise for my relief and cure."

A. J. Kierstead.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morriscy prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

CROWN PRINCESS LOUISE OF SAXONY

Now known as Mme. Toselli, whose publication of the intimate secrets of European Court life in her memoirs has cost her an allowance of $8,000 per year, provided for her maintenance by the King of Saxony, once her husband. The book, which is now on the market, is expected to net the Princess $50,000, but the cutting off of her pension leaves her dependent upon the charity of her friends and what money her publishers choose to advance for maintenance.

BIG GUN TRIALS

The Orion the First Warship in the World to Have The New Type

Gunnery experts from the Excellent and Admiralty officials from the Constructive Department have been taking part in the gun trials of the new battleship Orion off Owers Lightship. They are quite satisfied with the result, both as to the behavior of the weapons and the resistance to severe shocks which was offered by the structure of the vessel. The gun mountings also stood the test quite satisfactorily. The powerful 13.5 in. guns, of which the Orion possesses ten (being the first warship in the world to be armed with these weapons), underwent an extensive initial test, which included broadside firing, although all ten of the guns were not fired at once. Such an experiment has never been tried on any Dreadnought, experts holding that the tremendous shock which would ensue could not be sustained by any vessel built or likely to be built. The guns, which are so mounted that they are capable of being trained in any direction, were fired singly, in pairs, and in fours, with brief intervals between the discharges, so as to lessen the shock. The trials of the 4 in. guns, constituting the Orion's anti-torpedo armament, were were also satisfactory.

The crew were protected from the nerve-racking concussion caused by the discharge of the guns by wool-lined leather ear-pads, but even then, the shock from the blast, as the 1,250-lb. missiles left the muzzles, is said to have been terrific. The roar of the guns was distinctly heard at Portsmouth, fourteen miles away. A man who was inside one of the barbettes when the guns were fired, says that the six-foot recoil of the gun, was the only indication that the weapon had been discharged. On deck the concussion produced a sensation of numbness.

Incalculable damage would be caused to the hull of a battleship if a complete broadside were fired simultaneously, and such a step would never be contemplated. The energy of each of the 15.5 in. guns is about 70,000 foot-tons, a total broadside being capable of lifting a weight equivalent of thirty Dreadnoughts a foot into the air.

SLEEPER'S LONG WALK

Girl's Tramp Over Rough Country On a Cold Night

An extraordinary instance of a girl walking a long distance on a bitter cold night, while fast asleep, is reported from Monmouth. The girl's name is Annie Mary Smith, and she is a domestic servant in the employ of the Rev. L. M. Abbot.

The girl went to bed as usual. Early next morning Mr. Abbot was awakened by a knocking at his front door. As the knocking was not answered by the servant girl, he called her, and, getting no response, he went to her room. The bed had been slept in, but the girl had gone. And, to add to the puzzle, her clothing was in the room.

He went downstairs, and at the door a messenger told him that the girl during the night had reached her home cold and ill, and clad only in her night apparel. From her bedroom the girl had walked downstairs, unlocked two doors, and made her way across some coal and wood and out of the front of the house up a side path. She had walked over some rough stones before reaching a gate which leads on to the Hereford Road. On the steep hill leading to Staunton she woke. She knew the district, and decided to call up some friends at Staunton, but then she realised that to arouse them would only give them a fright, and she continued her journey to her mother's cottage, crossing several fields.

WAR IS COSTLY

Enormous Expenditure a Struggle Between Two European Powers Would Entail

The enormous expenditure that a war between two great European powers would entail can be seen from the following details of the cost of the Franco-German War of 1870, which appears in the current issue of the "Army and Navy Gazette":—

"The cost from July 17, 1870, to the 16th of the following May, on which day the treaty of Frankfort was ratified, was 1,912,000,000 francs—or about $385,000,000—this being for war charges, properly so called. This sum works out at something like $1,560,000 per day."

But if the charges for the provisioning of Paris, the support of the families of soldiers, the maintenance of the invading armies, contributions imposed by the enemy, loans, succor for the victims of the war, repair of damage done, or other indirect charges, and the vast indemnity of five milliards with its interest be added, the total cost of the war is brought up to the colossal figure of $1,973,000,000 and to a rate of some $8,100,000 per day.

"The cost of the war to Germany is estimated, with contingent charges and the reorganization of the army but not the ordinary military budget, to have been $675,000,000.

"In modern conditions, a year of war would cost France $2,200,000,000 while for Germany the outlay would be something approaching the vast sum of $5,500,000,000."

DANGEROUS EXPLOSIVES

The Great Precautions that Have to be Taken by Workmen

On the outside of the wrapping of frozen dynamite feathery crystals gather. These crystals are called "whiskers," and they are more "irritable" than dynamite itself. So touchy are they that anybody treading heavily near them is sufficient to set them off by concussion.

Cordite is another dangerous explosive, more so during its manufacture than after. Easy as it is to handle in its final form it is a favorite explosive with anarchists and bomb-throwers. It is made from a mixture of nitro-glycerine, gun-cotton, and vaseline.

The nitro-glycerine store is a most extraordinary building, buried literally under a mound and reached by a brick-lined passage through the earth.

Nitro-glycerine itself is an almost colorless liquid, and so careful are the men who handle it, that if a single drops falls on the leaden floor it is at once wiped up with a damp rag. All the water that comes from this underground building is carefully drained into a neighboring pond, and every week this is blown up by dynamite on account of the dangerous explosive matter contained in it.

Even in the manufacture of such a comparatively "harmless" explosive as gunpowder the greatest precautions have to be taken. On entreing the building where the powder is being turned out, all matches, pipes, and any steel instruments have to be given up, and special boots have to be put on to prevent any grit reaching the soft leather floor of the buildings.

FORTUNES CAME WITH THE IDEAS

Inventions That Have Been Worth Millions to the Men Who Owned Them

The report that an invention for making salt has recently been sold to an American syndicate for no less than $5,000,000 once again illustrates the remarkable value of good ideas in these days of keen competition in the commercial world. We cannot, of course, all think out time and labor-saving devices which are going to bring us in a cool million, but we can keep our eyes open for useful inventions which, although they may not at the moment seem very profitable, may prove little gold-mines; for the fact should not be overlooked that some enormous fortunes have been made from little things.

Simple toys, puzzles, and games, have often proved such a success as to put thousands of dollars into the pockets of their inventors. The man who invented the tin rattle for babies retired with a quarter of a million of money, while the man who thought out the idea of the returning ball, which consisted of an ordinary rubber or wooden ball to which was attached a long elastic cord, profited to the extent of $50,000 per annum. The flying top had a rush of popularity which enabled its inventor to live in the lap of luxury for the remainder of his life, while the once popular toy known as "Dancing Jim Crow" is said to have yielded its patentee an annual income of upwards of $75,000.

Inventor of Roller Skates

It is not so many years ago that everyone laboriously laced his own boots from the lowest hole to the top. There was none of that lightning crossing of the laces into the neat little hooks with which the modern lace-boot is provided. The inventor of the boot-hook, H. A. Snipp, sold his patent outright for the sum of $250, and the purchasers are said to have made $1,250,000 out of the idea.

When Harvey Kennedy introduced the shoe-lace he made $2,500,000, and Mr. Plimpton, the inventor of the roller-skate, made a similar fortune out of his idea. Probably our readers will remember a legal action which took place some years ago, when in the course of the evidence itt ranspired that the inventor of the metal plates used for protecting the soles and heels of shoes from wear sold 12,000,000 plates in 1879, and in 1887 the number reached a total of 143,000,000, which realised profits of $1,150,000 for the year.

Badly Rewarded

But the inventor does not always reap such magnificent rewards for his genius. Take the case of Mr. J. Longridge, the famous engineer who invented the wire-wound gun, for instance. Longridge invented the gun in 1854, and did all in his power to place it before the authorities, but they would have nothing to do with it. Thirt yyears afterwards, however, the Ordnance Department at Woolwich, subjected one of the guns to exhaustive tests, and so satisfactory were the results that they declared that nothing could equal it for heavy ordnance. Unfortunately, the inventor died from a broken heart before this end was attained.

In all the world's history, however, there is no more startling instance of ingratitude and forgetfulness than the history of Henry Cort, a native of Gosport. He expended the whole of his private fortune of $100,000 in perfecting his inventions for puddling iron and rolling it into bars and plates. Then he was robbed of the fruits of his toil by the villainy of certain Government officials, and in the end left to starve. This was in 1784. Since that day Cort's inventions have conferred upon Great Britain an amount of wealth equivalent to $3,500,000,000, and given constant employment to about 600,000 workmen for the past four generations.

A CAT'S LONG WALK

Tatters Covered 133 Miles in Returning to Its Old Home

Tatters, a half-Persian cat, has just finished a walk of 133 miles from Kingston-on-Thames to its old home at Glastonbury. The cat, which is an abnormally large one, was sent by its mistress, Miss Pearce, to a home at Kingston last April, but it disappeared a day or two later. Nothing was seen of it for several months until it arrived at its old home. The cat was not recognized at first, and was refused admission, but later got inside. It jumped on its old chair, and its mistress exclaimed: "Why, it's Tatters come back!"

CROWN JEWELLERS

Interesting Purchases of Centuries Ago Revealed in an Old Ledger

Messrs. Garrard & Co., the Crown jewellers, whose business was started in the days when snipe shooting could be indulged in near Hyde Park corner, have opened at their new premises in Albermarle Street, West. Priceless gold and silver plate and enormous quantities of jewellery have been conveyed to their new home from the shop in the Haymarket, at which business has been done for nearly 200 years. The time-worn ledgers in the firm's strong rooms are full of famous names of bygone generations. An entry made as early as 1737 shows that the Princess and Prince of Wales ordered a service of plate, which cost $15,000. In 1776, "divers teapots," belonging to Sir Joshua Reynolds, were mended. Speaker Onslow about this time ordered a silver cistern, which weighed 3,000 ounces and cost $2,800. The Duke of Kingston, husband of the "Amazing Duchess," bought twenty-six silver coat buttons for $15. In 1788 Queen Charlotte was a frequent customer at Garrard's, and purchased, among other things, two gold toothpicks.

It was in 1721 that one, George Wickes, started as a jeweller at "The Sign of the King's Arms" in the Haymarket, and founded what is now one of London's oldest firms. The business became the property of William Garrard in 1781.

Appraising human beings under one classification or another is a favorite pastime of many investigators. The Popular Mechanics Magazine contains a picture of a machine which an Englishman uses to read character. Color affords the test, and the result shows the subject's degree of "perseveration," on which his status depends.

CROWN PRINCESS LOUISE OF SAXONY

Now known as Mme. Toselli, whose publication of the intimate secrets of European Court life in her memoirs has cost her an allowance of $8,000 per year, provided for her maintenance by the King of Saxony, once her husband. The book, which is now on the market, is expected to net the Princess $50,000, but the cutting off of her pension leaves her dependent upon the charity of her friends and what money her publishers choose to advance for maintenance.

BIG GUN TRIALS

The Orion the First Warship in the World to Have The New Type

Gunnery experts from the Excellent and Admiralty officials from the Constructive Department have been taking part in the gun trials of the new battleship Orion off Owers Lightship. They are quite satisfied with the result, both as to the behavior of the weapons and the resistance to severe shocks which was offered by the structure of the vessel. The gun mountings also stood the test quite satisfactorily. The powerful 13.5 in. guns, of which the Orion possesses ten (being the first warship in the world to be armed with these weapons), underwent an extensive initial test, which included broadside firing, although all ten of the guns were not fired at once. Such an experiment has never been tried on any Dreadnought, experts holding that the tremendous shock which would ensue could not be sustained by any vessel built or likely to be built. The guns, which are so mounted that they are capable of being trained in any direction, were fired singly, in pairs, and in fours, with brief intervals between the discharges, so as to lessen the shock. The trials of the 4 in. guns, constituting the Orion's anti-torpedo armament, were were also satisfactory.

The crew were protected from the nerve-racking concussion caused by the discharge of the guns by wool-lined leather ear-pads, but even then, the shock from the blast, as the 1,250-lb. missiles left the muzzles, is said to have been terrific. The roar of the guns was distinctly heard at Portsmouth, fourteen miles away. A man who was inside one of the barbettes when the guns were fired, says that the six-foot recoil of the gun, was the only indication that the weapon had been discharged. On deck the concussion produced a sensation of numbness.

Incalculable damage would be caused to the hull of a battleship if a complete broadside were fired simultaneously, and such a step would never be contemplated. The energy of each of the 15.5 in. guns is about 70,000 foot-tons, a total broadside being capable of lifting a weight equivalent of thirty Dreadnoughts a foot into the air.

SLEEPER'S LONG WALK

Girl's Tramp Over Rough Country On a Cold Night

An extraordinary instance of a girl walking a long distance on a bitter cold night, while fast asleep, is reported from Monmouth. The girl's name is Annie Mary Smith, and she is a domestic servant in the employ of the Rev. L. M. Abbot.

The girl went to bed as usual. Early next morning Mr. Abbot was awakened by a knocking at his front door. As the knocking was not answered by the servant girl, he called her, and, getting no response, he went to her room. The bed had been slept in, but the girl had gone, and, to add to the puzzle, her clothing was in the room.

He went downstairs, and at the door a messenger told him that the girl during the night had reached her home cold and ill, and clad only in her night apparel. From her bedroom the girl had walked downstairs, unlocked two doors, and made her way across some coal and wood and out of the front of the house up a side path. She had walked over some rough stones before reaching a gate which leads on to the Hereford Road. On the steep hill leading to Staunton she woke. She knew the district, and decided to call up some friends at Staunton, but then she realised that to arouse them would only give them a fright, and she continued her journey to her mother's cottage, crossing several fields.

WAR IS COSTLY

Enormous Expenditure a Struggle Between Two European Powers Would Entail

The enormous expenditure that a war between two great European powers would entail can be seen from the following details of the cost of the Franco-German War of 1870, which appears in the current issue of the "Army and Navy Gazette":—

"The cost from July 17, 1870, to the 18th of the following May, on which day the treaty of Frankfort was ratified, was 1,912,000,000 francs—or about $385,000,000—this being for war charges, properly so called. This sum works out at something like $1,560,000 per day."

But if the charges for the provisioning of Paris, the support of the families of soldiers, the maintenance of the invading armies, contributions imposed by the enemy, loans, succor for the victims of the war, repair of damage done, or other indirect charges, and the vast indemnity of five milliards with its interest be added, the total cost of the war is brought up to the colossal figure of $1,973,000,000 and to a rate of some $8,100,000 per day.

"The cost of the war to Germany is estimated, with contingent charges, and the reorganization of the army but not the ordinary military budget, to have been $675,000,000.

"In modern conditions, a year of war would cost France $2,200,000,000 while for Germany the outlay would be something approaching the vast sum of $5,500,000,000."

DANGEROUS EXPLOSIVES

The Great Precautions that Have to be Taken by Workmen

On the outside of the wrapping of frozen dynamite feathery crystals gather. These crystals are called "whiskers," and they are more "irritable" than dynamite itself. So touchy are they that anybody treading heavily near them is sufficient to set them off by concussion.

Cordite is another dangerous explosive, more so during its manufacture than after. Easy as it is to handle in its final form it is a favorite explosive with anarchists and bomb-throwers. It is made from a mixture of nitro-glycerine, gun-cotton, and vaseline.

The nitro-glycerine store is a most extraordinary building, buried literally under a mound and reached by a brio-lined passage through the earth.

Nitro-glycerine itself is an almost colorless liquid, and so careful are the men who handle it, that if a single drops falls on the leaden floor it is at once wiped up with a damp rag. All the water that comes from this underground building is carefully drained into a neighboring pond, and every week this is blown up by dynamite on account of the dangerous explosive matter contained in it.

Even in the manufacture of such a comparatively "harmless" explosive as gunpowder the greatest precautions have to be taken. On entreing the building where the powder is being turned out, all matches, pipes, and any steel instruments have to be given up, and special boots have to be put on to prevent any grit reaching the soft leather floor of the buildings.

FORTUNES CAME WITH THE IDEAS

Inventions That Have Been Worth Millions to the Men Who Owned Them

The report that an invention for making salt has recently been sold to an American syndicate for no less than $5,000,000 once again illustrates the remarkable value of good ideas in these days of keen competition in the commercial world. We cannot, of course, all think out time and labor-saving devices which are going to bring us in a cool million, but we can keep our eyes open for useful inventions which, although they may not at the moment seem very profitable, may prove little gold-mines; for the fact should not be overlooked that some enormous fortunes have been made from little things.

Simple toys, puzzles, and games, have often proved such a success as to put thousands of dollars into the pockets of their inventors. The man who invented the tin rattle for babies retired with a quarter of a million of money, while the man who thought out the idea of the returning ball, which consisted of an ordinary rubber or wooden ball to which was attached a long elastic cord, profited to the extent of $50,000 per annum. The flying top had a rush of popularity which enabled its inventor to live in the lap of luxury for the remainder of his life, while the once popular toy known as "Dancing Jim Crow" is said to have yielded its patentee an annual income of upwards of $75,000.

Inventor of Roller Skates

It is not so many years ago that everyone laboriously laced his own boots from the lowest hole to the top. There was none of that lightning crossing of the laces into the neat little hooks with which the modern lace-boot is provided. The inventor of the boot-hook, H. A. Snipp, sold his patent outright for the sum of $250, and the purchasers are said to have made $1,250,000 out of the idea.

When Harvey Kennedy introduced the shoe-lace he made $2,500,000, and Mr. Plimpton, the inventor of the roller-skate, made a similar fortune out of his idea. Probably our readers will remember a legal action which took place some years ago, when in the course of the evidence it transpired that the inventor of the metal plates used for protecting the soles and heels of shoes from wear sold 12,000,000 plates in 1879, and in 1887 the number reached a total of 143,000,000, which realized profits of $1,150,000 for the year.

Badly Rewarded

But the inventor does not always reap such magnificent rewards for his genius. Take the case of Mr. J. Longridge, the famous engineer who invented the wire-wound gun, for instance. Longridge invented the gun in 1854, and did all in his power to place it before the authorities, but they would have nothing to do with it. Thirt yyears afterwards, however, the Ordnance Department at Woolwich, subjected one of the guns to exhaustive tests, and so satisfactory were the results that they declared that nothing could equal it for heavy ordnance. Unfortunately, the inventor died from a broken heart before this end was attained.

In all the world's history, however, there is no more startling instance of ingratitude and forgetfulness than the history of Henry Cort, a native of Gosport. He expended the whole of his private fortune of $100,000 in perfecting his inventions for puddling iron and rolling it into bars and plates. Then he was robbed of the fruits of his toil by the villainy of certain Government officials, and in the end left to starve. This was in 1784. Since that day Cort's inventions have conferred upon Great Britain an amount of wealth equivalent to $3,500,000,000, and given constant employment to about 600,000 workmen for the past four generations.

A CAT'S LONG WALK

Tatters Covered 133 Miles in Returning to Its Old Home

Tatters, a half-Persian cat, has just finished a walk of 133 miles from Kingston-on-Thames to its old home at Glastonbury. The cat, which is an abnormally large one, was sent by its mistress, Miss Pearce, to a home at Kingston last April, but it disappeared a day or two later. Nothing was seen of it for several months until it arrived at its old home. The cat was not recognised at first, and was refused admission, but later got inside. It jumped on its old chair, and its mistress exclaimed: "Why, it's Tatters come back!"

CROWN JEWELLERS

Interesting Purchases of Centuries Ago Revealed in an Old Ledger

Messrs. Garrard & Co., the Crown jewellers, whose business was started in the days when snipe shooting could be indulged in near Hyde Park corner, have opened at their new premises in Albermarle Street, West. Priceless gold and silver plate and enormous quantities of jewellery have been conveyed to their new home from the shop in the Haymarket, at which business has been done for nearly 200 years. The time-worn ledgers in the firm's strong rooms are full of famous names of bygone generations. An entry made as early as 1737 shows that the Princess and Prince of Wales ordered a service of plate, which cost $15,000. In 1776, "divers teapots," belonging to Sir Joshua Reynolds, were mended. Speaker Onslow about this time ordered a silver cistern, which weighed 5,000 ounces and cost $2,800. The Duke of Kingston, husband of the "Amazing Duchess," bought twenty-six silver coat buttons for $15. In 1786 Queen Charlotte was a frequent customer at Garrard's, and purchased, among other things, two gold toothpicks.

It was in 1731 that one, George Wickes, started as a jeweller at "The Sign of the King's Arms" in the Haymarket, and founded what is now one of London's oldest firms. The business became the property of William Garrard in 1781.

Captain Greenstreet has sailed or steamed altogether about 2,050,000 miles.

Machine Reads Character

Appraising human beings under one classification or another is a favorite pastime of many investigators. The Popular Mechanics Magazine contains a picture of a machine which an Englishman uses to read character. Color affords the test, and the result shows the subject's degree of "perseveration," on which his status depends.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

A sanitarium for the treatment of tuberculosis is now assured for Waterloo County and it will be located near Berlin.

An unoccupied balloon, apparently of French ownership, descended near Brighton, Eng., yesterday, and it is feared that the pilots were drowned.

Italy is reported to be hastening the completion of three dreadnoughts, by December, 1912, and has ordered 4,000 tons of armor plate from an American concern.

It is understood that the Hon. Sydney Fisher will re-enter the political arena and that Mr. G. M. Bolvin, member-elect in Shefford will resign his seat to make way for his return.

Howard P. Christie, aged 14, was accidentally shot in the head by Thomas Wade, aged 9, at Pennine, N.B., yesterday. The boys were out gunning. The boy died twenty minutes later.

Mayor Guerin yesterday laid the corner-stone of the new Montreal Herald building. Interest was added to the event by the fact that it was the 100th anniversary of the foundation of The Herald.

The rise in the Hudson river, owing to rainfalls has been so rapid that all work on the construction of the barge canal at Mechanicsville has stopped, and fears are felt for a number of cofferdams in the river.

Dr. T. S. Sproule will be Speaker of the House of Commons in the twelfth Parliament. This was decided upon at a Cabinet Council held yesterday afternoon. The Deputy Speaker will probably be Pierre Blondin of Champlain.

Arrivals from Hankow report that 800 Manchus were massacred. To make sure the identity of their victims, the rebels ordered them to count, and the crucial test was the pronunciation of the numeral six, which in Chinese is Liushihu.

Slave Horrors In Tripoli.

Rome, Oct. 20.—The missionary, Father Apollonio, head of the home at Benghazi, Tripoli, for young negroes who had been freed from slavery, says that the slave trade in the north of Africa is flourishing.

Small children are packed two, and even three, in a bag for transportation, while the larger ones are tied in chains, the desert being stained with their blood. Those who collapse are abandoned to die of starvation or to be the prey of lions.

On one occasion, the missionary says, the leader of the caravan, enraged because a female slave exhausted, was unable to proceed further, cut off one of her arms, using the member subsequently as a weapon with which to beat others of the unhappy party.

C. N. R. to Tunnel Montreal.

Toronto, Oct. 20.—A tunnel through Mount Royal, which will cost about $25,000,000, will be constructed by the Canadian Northern Railway. The necessary application for authority to construct and operate such a tunnel, with the necessary approaches and works, will be made at the next session of the Dominion Parliament by the Canadian Northern Montreal Tunnel and Terminal Co., Ltd.

New Rector of Ottawa College.

Ottawa, Oct. 20.—The appointment of Rev. Father A. B. Roy as rector of the University of Ottawa, in succession to Rev. Father Wm. Murphy, whose term has expired, was officially announced yesterday. Father Roy was born at New Glasgow, Que., in 1866. He was educated in St. Lin, Que., New York City, Albany and Buffalo. Since 1906 he has been a professor in the university.

You'll Sleep More Soundly
If You Keep Healthy With Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills

The man or woman with a good appetite, sound digestion, and bowels and kidneys working right, is never troubled much with sleeplessness. It is when the bowels become constipated and the liver and kidneys sluggish that the trouble begins.

Lazy liver and constipated bowels quickly bring on biliousness, indigestion and sick headaches, making a sound, refreshing night's sleep impossible. Or the inactive kidneys allow the blood to becomes loaded with uric acid, which causes rheumatism, with all its sleep-destroying tortures.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills, taken regularly, induce sweet and dreamless sleep by keeping all these organs active and regular. The headaches disappear, the digestion becomes good again, the blood is purified and perfect health returns.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills have been a favorite household remedy in Canada for over half a century, and they are in daily use throughout the world. Being purely vegetable they are safe for young and old. Made by W. H. Comstock Co., Ltd., Brockville, Ont., and sold by all dealers at 25c. a box.

GOLDEN OPPORTUNITY.

Jamaica Offers Much to Those Who Would Succeed.

Senor G. H. Melhado, the Croesus of the West Indies, is very enthusiastic over the smiling isle of Jamaica which he believes has a great future before it. He is probably the richest man in the West Indies and the best informed on opportunities for investment in that fruitful region. In discussing the matter recently he said:—

"Unless a man has a good-sized nest egg he will not be able to make much money in Jamaica. There are only three or four industries — growing sugar cane and bananas, raising cattle and mining—and capital is absolutely essential. Land is cheap, however, and there are large profits in sugar and bananas. Then, too, capital is absolutely safe in Jamaica. It is the best-governed of all the English colonies, and no matter where one lives on the island one can go to sleep with as much security as in the biggest hotel in London. A large amount of capital is being invested there at present, and scores of people from other places have cottages and bungalows there.

"There are more than 1,000 miles of fine macadamized roads on the island, and although I have traveled all over the world I know of no place where one can take a better automobile trip.

"Jamaica will never have any manufacturing. Its future lies in the development of its broad acres. To make a success at raising sugar cane or bananas one must remain on the island the greater part of the year. There are hundreds of thousands of acres that have never been cultivated and they can be bought very cheaply."

Ghost and the Secret Box.

Lord St. Audries, better known as Sir Alexander Acland-Hood, has been entertained at the House of Commons to a farewell dinner by Col. Lockwood, Sir Gilbert Parker, and Mr. Wilfrid Ashley.

Like many of the members of both Houses of Parliament, Lord St. Audries was in the Grenadier Guards, but left the army some seventeen years ago upon succeeding to the baronetcy. Four years previously he had married a daughter of the fourth Lord Ventry.

A nephew of the late Lord Hood of Avalon, his lordship is also a connection of Lord Bridport.

There is a weird ghost story told about the Bridport family. At the death of the father of the present peer, an old worm-eaten box was found among his possessions. No one had ever been allowed to touch it, but after the decease of the old peer a relative determined to find out its contents.

So one night, having had it conveyed into the library, he set to work, struggling hard with the locks, clamps, and steel binding. Looking up suddenly, so the story goes, he was utterly astounded to see the dead man standing opposite him, his arm raised, as though defying him to go any further. After that the box with its secret was destroyed unopened.

The Inexpensive Life.

They tell of an official at Washington known by his friends to be a rather close man, who has many a passage of arms with his wife, all by reason of the very closeness.

On one occasion a friend had the misfortune to enter just as the pair were ending an argument touching some question of household expenditures. He was just in time to hear the husband say:

"See here, Marie, you cannot hoodwink me in these matters. Do you think that I have lived all these years for nothing?"

"I shouldn't be at all surprised," was the wifely repartee.—Harper's Monthly.

Johnnie Knew.

A teacher in an uptown school was giving her small charges a lesson in politeness the other day.

"Now, when," said she, "should you say 'Excuse me, please?'"

There was a moment's silence, then a very small boy put up his hand.

"Well, Johnnie?"

"Please, ma'am, you should say 'Excuse me, please,' when you sneeze at th' table and don't turn away your head quick enough."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Closed Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 19.—An immense business was done to-day in wheat, notwithstanding the price range was narrow. Longs were apparently taking profits and waiting for the cash demand to catch up with the gain in futures. Compared with last night, closing figures varied from 1-2c lower to 3-8c advance. The end of the session left corn unchanged to 1-8c and 1-4c down, oats a shade off to a like amount higher, and hog products slanting from the wind-up 24 hours before to 7 1-2c above.

The Liverpool market closed to-day unchanged to ½d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ½d to ¾d higher on corn. Antwerp closed unchanged on wheat. Berlin, ¾c higher and Buda Pest, ¼d higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 19.—There was an increased demand from foreign buyers for Manitoba spring wheat for prompt and nearby shipment, and sales of over 100,000 bushels were made at an advance in prices of 1½d to 6d per quarter, but the bids for Nos. 1 and 2 northern for December-January shipment were all the way from 2c to 4c per bushel out of line, based on the closing price of the October option. There was also a good demand from New York houses, and sales of a number of loads of feed wheat were made.

Oats was firm at the advance. A sale of 50,000 bushels of No. 2 Canadian western was made at bay ports for Ontario account. The demand from foreign buyers for spring wheat flour was good, but the bids in most cases were below asking prices. A good local trade is being done at firm prices. The demand for bran for export account is good and bids of $22.50 per ton are being made freely for round lots.

NOTED Y.M.C.A. WORKER IN PETERBORO' TELLS OF PROGRESS OF THE MOVEMENT

Dr. J. Brown, of the International Committee Tells the Examiner of the Y.M.C.A. Survey Work and Other Features of the Association

CONFERENCE HERE TO-DAY

Dr. J. Brown of New York City, is in the city to-day, attending the Y.M.C.A. conference, at the local rooms, and is making his headquarters at the Hotel National.

When seen by an Examiner reporter this morning, the Doctor briefly outlined the movement going on in connection with the Association. At the present time a campaign is being carried on through the United States and Canada for the promotion of the Association and improvement in its constitution and teaching, which will prove beneficient to its members.

Dr. Brown stated that he came from Toronto, where they had a conference at the Association rooms there, and in brief outlined some of the work accomplished. He said a number of men were sent out for a survey of the city, and in the course of this survey they were instructed to note the sanitary and physical condition, and the number of foreigners in the city, also the condition their residences were in. The men worked in a sort of co-operative way with the Board of Health, and when they noted sanitary conditions in a bad state, they made a recommendation to the Board—the same as the Inspector or Medical Health Officer would do. He said it was astonishing what they found in some cases in Toronto and other cities where they had conducted the survey. There were far more foreigners in the City of Toronto than they were aware of, and they were, in some cases, housed in a very unsanitary way. Some houses contained dozens, with ten and twelve in two rooms. The Y. M. C. A. surveyors also inspected the collection of the garbage, and made any recommendations they saw fit to the Board of Health. They also made recommendations for playgrounds for the children. This is one of the great movements the Association is working on at present—more playgrounds, more physical exercise, and facilities for a better class getting it, and more swimming exercises. He said they had two men in the United States and two in Canada promoting the swimming exercises. They have not, as yet, visited Ontario, but last year they took a complete tour of the Canadian West, where they conducted swimming classes in the different cities, and got a campaign started. When some representatives of the Association visited Peterborough last year they tried to get a campaign started for larger and more numerous play grounds for the children in the summer time. He did not know whether the recommendations they had made, had been taken up by the local representatives but he said this was one of the great objects of the campaign. Another great movement, occupying the attention and consideration of the Association, is the swimming exercises. In Toronto, he said the work was being supervised, or carried on, by Mr. George H. Corsan, swimming instructor of the Toronto University, who had been engaged by the International Committee of the Y. M. C. A. to promote the exercise. The same is being done as regards calisthenics.

Dr. Brown stated that as a matter of fact they were trying to promote the interests of the Y. M. C. A. but he considered it no boast to say that they were conducting a campaign which was doing the general public an immense good.

He hoped to be able, in the course of a short time, to have the Y. M. C. A. survey conducted in Peterborough, but at the present it was quite impossible on account of the vast work they had on hand.

Dr. Brown arrived in the city on the C. P. R. midnight, last night, to attend the conference at the Y. M. C. A. here to-day and will depart on the midnight train to-night.

WATCH FOR PINK SHEET SPORTING EXTRA TO-MORROW

The Examiner will issue another sporting extra to-morrow afternoon, giving full particulars of all the important sporting events of the day. The special edition, which will be along the lines which proved so successful last week, will be on the street early, and will no doubt be appreciated by the sporting fraternity. The fourth game of the world's series between Philadelphia and New York will be fully covered, with the play by innings and the box score, through special telegraph service, while the rugby scores, the local soccer game and other athletic events will be given due publicity. There is keen interest in the Ottawa College-Varsity game, on account of the number of Peterborough boys involved, and local people will also be anxious to know the results in the Big Four and the O.R.F.U., including the game at Toronto between Toronto Centrals and Peterborough West Ends. Watch for the pink extra to-morrow.

BOBCAYGEON MAN TO RECEIVE CARNEGIE MEDAL

William Laird, Farm Hand, Who Saved Child From Burning Home Will Have His Bravery Recognized by Presentation of Bronze Medal and Five Hundred Dollars.

PITTSBURG, PA., OCT. 18.—Five Canadians figure in the awards made by the Carnegie Hero Fund Commission, which met here to-day.

Forty-seven bronze and twelve silver medals were awarded at the fall meeting of the Commission. Besides cash awards of $53,036, pensions amounting to $315 a month were left to survivors of men who had risked their lives to save others. Thirteen of the heroes paid with their lives their devotion to humanity.

A Brave Farm-Hand.

William Laird, aged 68 years, a farm-hand, who, on January 9, 1911, at Bobcaygeon, Ont., rescued Vera M..., and attempted to rescue E. Thereon Anderson, aged 3 and 5 years, respectively, from their burning home, was awarded a bronze medal, and $500 to reimburse him fr pecuniary loss sustained and other worthy purposes.

Laird entered a bedroom of the burning house, and going to the bed caught hold of Vera, put her under his arm, and felt under the cover for Thereon, but could not locate him. The heat was so intense and the smoke so thick that Laird was driven from the room, a burning curtain falling across his shoulders as he went out of the doorway. He was badly burned about the head and was disabled for some time. Vera was slightly burned and Thereon perished in the flames.

AUCTION SALE OF BUILDING LOTS WAS SUCCESSFUL

The people of Peterborough yesterday certainly had an opportunity, as was announced, of buying good building lots at their own prices, and seemed to realise this and take advantage of it. Not one lot that was put up was with drawn, 25 lots being sold in about two hours. There was a busy scene at A. Brown & Co's real estate office last night, when many parties were there to make enquiries regarding sale, and also those who had purchased lots getting their contracts. One contractor who purchased two lots yesterday, already has started the excavation for the erection of a brick house on his lot.

Several have purchased two or three lots as a matter of speculation.

The sale will be continued to-morrow, when it is expected that every lot will be disposed of.

ENGLISH TRAVELLER'S OPINION OF LAND OF THE MAPLE

Mr. J. Pigott, of Bradford, Eng., is a visitor in Peterborough, a guest at the Oriental. He is travelling for an English manufacturing concern, and stated to an Examiner reporter this morning that this was his first trip to Canada. He was very favourably impressed with Canada and Peterborough. He expressed himself to the effect that Canada has great possibilities. He had not been further west than Windsor, but from what he could learn, the west was the place where a man could make some progress. Ontario, however, in his opinion, was a very industrious province, and most of the cities were wide-awake places for business.

He said that people in Canada had a wrong opinion of England, however, as times were not nearly so bad as they were reported. He was astonished to hear the opinion that Canadians expressed about his native country. He said that while wages were low in England, expenses, and the cost of living were correspondingly low, while here higher wages was met by a higher cost of living. Despite this fact, he thought a man had a better chance to make good here.

PREMIER AND SIR WILFRID HAVE CONFERENCE TO-DAY

Special to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 20.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier called upon Hon. R. L. Borden in the Premier's office this morning and they had a long conference together, presumably about imperial affairs, as to which Mr. Borden would naturally desire Sir Wilfrid's counsel; probably communications from Downing street as to which it is necessary for the ex-Premier and the present Premier to consult before a reply is sent to London. There is also the possibility that pending ministerial bye-elections were discussed, and it would not be surprising if some arrangement were come to by which, in return for ministers being unopposed, the Conservatives would agree not to oppose Hon. Messrs. Fielding, Graham and Fisher. Nothing has yet been settled as to where Hon. W. T. White will be a candidate.

Death of Young Girl Under Suspicious Circumstances Has Led to an Arrest Being Made

DEAD FROM POISON

BOSTON, MASS., OCT. 20.—Following an investigation into the death by poisoning of Miss Avis Lennell, a student at the New England Conservatory of Music, Reverend Clarence Richson, a Baptist minister, was arrested in the home of his fiancee, Miss Emanda at eight o'clock this morning. The affair is causing a big sensation here.

The police have given it out that they have evidence that Richson purchased cyanide of potassium at a drug store recently. He was formerly engaged to Miss Linnell. She was found dead in the bath room of the Young Woman's Christian Association, with evidence that she had unknowingly taken drug sent her by somebody outside.

SUING FOR $50,000 FOR HEART BALM

WILL RETIRE OWING TO ILL HEALTH

Special Wire to The Examiner.

MONTREAL, QUE., OCT. 20.—At a meeting held here to-day of the Canadian Freight Association the following resolution was passed: "This Association learns with regret that Mr. W. B. Bulling, owing to ill health, has been obliged to retire temporarily from active duty. Its members desire to place on record an appreciation of his services. His long years of experience, his accuracy and strength of memory and the thoroughness of his work, inspired respect and confidence, while his unfailing patience, integrity and courtesy caused him to be held in high esteem and friendly affection by all."

"It is the hope of this Association that a complete rest may restore his health and enable him to once again become an active member."

Mr. W. B. Bulling is assistant-freight traffic manager of the Canadian Pacific Railway, and is exceedingly well known throughout the railway world. His many friends will regret to hear of his serious illness.

REPORTS CONFIRM RUMOURS THAT IMPERIAL TROOPS WERE DEFEATED AFTER FIERCE BATTLE

Government Troops Are Retreating With Gun-Boats Down the River---News Causing Great Uneasiness Among the Natives---Strict Censorship Being Enforced.

Special to The Examiner.

PEKIN, OCT. 20.—Associated press despatches and private wire from Rear Admiral Winsloe, commander of the allied forces, confirms the rumour that the revolutionists defeated the Imperial troops after a fierce battle around Hankow and that the latter are retreating with gunboats down the river, taking up a strong position there and awaiting reinforcements. The news is causing great uneasiness among the natives in the capital and restricted censorship and reassurances are continually sent out to quiet the Pekin people and frustrate attempts at a revolution here.

BLONDIN DEPUTY SPEAKER?

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, OCT. 20.—It is reported here this morning that P. C. Blondin, Nationalist member for Chaplain, who last year attacked Lanctot Richilieu re house painting scandal, will be deputy speaker in the House of Commons.

A BALD-HEADED WOMAN

Shorn of Her Crown of Beauty, Loses in Love and Marriage

Hair is certainly most necessary to woman. Who could love and marry a bald-headed woman? What charms could one array to offset such a disfigurement?

A woman's goal is usually love and marriage. Her crowning glory is her hair. The loss of her hair mars her beauty, happiness, and success. Yet, right here in Peterborough, there are hundreds of women who are neglecting or injuring their hair to such an extent that it is only a matter of time when it will be utterly ruined.

Many women destroy the beauty of their hair through thoughtlessness or ignorance of certain facts. They use curling irons over-heated, or to excess which destroys the natural oil of the hair, causing it to split, break and come out. They do not shampoo their hair often enough, or too often. They use soaps or preparations which contain ingredients positively harmful to the scalp and hair.

As a result of such treatment, dandruff is created, the hair loosens, loses colour, falls out, and baldness commences, unless proper and prompt precautions are taken in time. Then again, microbes and certain diseases bring about unhealthy scalp and hair conditions.

Almost any woman may rid herself of dandruff and diseased scalp and hair if she will but use the right remedy. We have that remedy, and we will positively guarantee that it will either cure dandruff and baldness or if will not cost the user anything.

That's a pretty broad statement, but we will back it and prove it with our own money. We will return your money if you do not find that Rexall "93" Hair Tonic is an entirely satisfactory remedy that will promote hair growth and overcome scalp and hair troubles; that it will grow hair even on bald heads, unless all life in the hair roots has been extinguished, the follicles closed, and the scalp is glazed and shiny. It gets its name from the fact that it grew hair in 93 out of 100 cases, where it received a thoroughly hard, impartial, and practical test.

We want you to try Rexall "93" Hair Tonic at our risk. You surely cannot lose anything by doing so, while you have everything to gain. You had better think this over, and then come in and see us about this offer. You will be well repaid for your visit to our store. Remember, you can get Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermaid and Drury.

WOULD RETIRE

Examiner Special:

MONTREAL, QUE., OCT. 20—Recalling the heresy charges which were levelled at the staff of McMaster University last year, Chancellor McCrimmon of the University told the Baptist convention here to-day that when the members of the Faculty could not believe and teach the tenets of the Baptist faith, they would retire.

VALUABLE DOG POISONED

There was a very regrettable incident at the Munro House to-day, when the beautiful brown spaniel dog of Mr. R. J. Munro, got some strychnine and at the time of going to press, was almost dead, being in convulsions. Dr. Rogers, V.S., was called and worked with the dog for some time, but apparently without effect. The dog was a valuable one, and was a great pet. When first seen it was in convulsions near the house, and medical aid was immediately sent for. A big scare story was circulated that the dog had rabies, but this was absolutely untrue, as Dr. Rogers pronounced it a simple case of poisoning. The dog, on no occasion, attempted to bite any person.

Labour Charges Whitney with Giving Bribe to Labour—Says He Has Insulted the District Labour Council.

SHOULD TURN HIM OUT

TORONTO, OCT. 20.—The District Labour Council held a stormy meeting last night, and the Whitney Administration, as a result of it, received nothing but knocks. The Council is in arms over the Premier's method of procedure in the drafting of the new workmen's compensation act, and in spite of the fact that many of the members considered it would be to their advantage to have nothing to do with Sir William Meredith's hearing on Monday next, a committee composed of Jos. Gibbons, F. Bancroft and J. Doggett will go up to the Parliament buildings and look after the interests of the workman on the day of the hearing.

Blames the Premier.

"Premier Whitney," said Mr. Bancroft, in speaking of the way things had been conducted, "for months did nothing but insult the District Labour Council, but now on the eve of an election he comes forth with a notice that the Commission, Sir William Meredith, will hear the case on Monday. This is meant as a bribe to the Labour vote, and what we want to do is to turn him out for his past negligence and insolence to this Council. He explained that the Council had asked for a commission including a Labour man to get this proposed act in shape, but Whitney's way was to appoint only one man.

Labour Not Consulted.

He was of the opinion that the Commissioner had not as yet consulted a Labour man, but he was certain that he had consulted the manufacturers. The act, which the manufacturers favoured, was along the lines of the one in Germany, where the labourer has to pay if he wished his wife to get compensation in case of his death. "What we want," said Mr. Bancroft, "is an act resembling that of Manitoba or Great Britain. What's the matter with the British act? Six weeks ago the manufacturers of this city were waving the British flag and praising British institutions, but now where are they? They are going to Germany for a compensation act. That's the depth of their patriotism."

Will Send Committee.

The committee of the Council to collect data re compensation was appointed about eighteen months ago, and while it is caught a little unprepared, having only two days to obtain the data which a solicitor of the manufacturers has been working upon for over a year, still it will do its best, and will not be snubbed, as many of the manufacturers suppose. Mr. James Simpson was strongly in favour of sending the committee on Monday, and he also moved that after the hearing the Council should employ a solicitor to draw up an act of their own, regardless of what developed at the hearing. This motion passed, so that the real struggle over the act will take place on the floor of the House, with possibly Allan Studholme in the harness.

UNDUE ADVANTAGES.

A special despatch to a Toronto paper is as follows:

Welland, Oct. 20.— Welland real estate men have donated sixty-eight acres for free factory sites. * * *

The Board of Trade have started a campaign to add 200 members to the board.

The Hydro-Electric power scheme gives great advantges to the west of Ontario. Nearly every town, within a near radius of Niagara Falls especially, is receiving great industrial stimulus, at the expense of those towns which have considerable natural advantages in the East. For instance Peterborough, which has to bear its share of the expense of the transmission of power to be sold at cheap rates to its industrial rivals is shut out from the benefit which this cheap power confers upon the favoured localities. The Hydro-Electric scheme may be a great provincial boon—to some sections—but certainly Peterborough has only suffered injury from it. While no doubt cheap power gives a town like Welland a decided advantage in bidding for factory location, a good deal depends upon the energy of its people as well as the public spirited action of the business men and the energy of the Board of Trade, as shown in the above despatch. Peterborough will have to become a little more alert.

THE ROOF OF THEIR SMILE.

If the members of the Toronto police force observe the dictum of Col. Grassett, Chief of Police, in regard to cultivating a roof for their smile, as thoroughly as the members of the Borden cabinet have done, without orders, he will be obeyed. Every member of Mr. Borden's cabinet, but one, sports a moustache, and Mr. Foster adds to the hirsute upholstery of his upper lip a beard. The only thoroughly bare-faced member of the cabinet is Hon. Dr. Roche, Secretary of State. The members generally are well equipped with the crown capillary; all have comfortable heads of hair except two. Hon. Dr. Roche and Hon. T. W. Crothers, Minister of Labour, are the only real high-brows in the collection. The entire departure of the hair from their crania provides the conditions of unimpeded mental ventilation. However, Hon. Mr. Doherty shows evidence of incipient baldness, and Hon. Mr. Nantel, the Nationalist, has some of his forelocks missing—doubtless sacrificed in the "National" interests—blown away by gales during his search for a good deep place to sink the Canadian navy in. On the whole, the Borden cabinet members are rather a good looking lot. It is a pleasure to be able to say this; for, taken as a whole, it is about all the good that can be said of them. As to their political composition, the least said the better—for them.

REPRESENTATION READJUSTMENT.

Quebec as the pivotal province of Confederation, sets the standard of representation. No matter what provincial increases or decreases of population the census may show, Quebec's representation always remains the same in the Dominion Parliament —65 members. Its census figures, divided by sixty-five, decide the unit of constituency strength. According to the recent census, this figure is about 20,000. Upon that figure the number of representatives of the several provinces will be determined according to population, and the representation will be readjusted, some province gaining, some losing. In the aggregate, the eastern provinces lose nine members, and the western provinces gain twenty members, making the net addition to the membership of the house eleven—a total membership of 232. The representation of the several provinces in the Dominion Parliament will be as follows, as fixed by the recent census:

Province	Present House.	Next House.
Ontario (loses 4)	86	82
Quebec (no change)	65	65
New Brunswick (loses 2)	13	11
Nova Scotia (loses 2)..	16	16
P. E. I. (loses 1)	4	3
Manitoba (gains 5	10	15
Saskatchewan (gains 5)	10	15
Alberta (gains 5)	7	12
British Columbia (gns. 5)	7	12
Yukon (no change)	1	1

CENSUS CONSIDERATIONS.

The figures of the Dominion Census of 1911 are disappointing in regard to the estimates that had been formed in advance. They, however, show a very gratifying increase, comparatively. The total increase has been at the rate of thirty-four per cent., for the past ten years. In the whole history of the United States, tremendous as has been the growth of her population, the highest rate of increase for any ten-year period was twenty-four per cent.

Of course the increase has been greatest in the West, the province of Alberta leading, with a gain of 411 per cent, British Columbia with 103 per cent., Saskatchewan following, with a gain of 398 per cent. and Manitoba, 78 per cent. While in the East Quebec leads with 21 per cent, Ontario comes after with fifteen per cent., while Nova Scotia and New Brunswick have an average gain of 2 per cent. The gain in Quebec and Ontario is largely to be accounted for by the growth of urban population, especially in Montreal and Toronto. In regard to urban per centage of gain, Peterborough comes among the first of the minor cities, with 62½ per cent. increase, a gain that would have been much greater if we had had the success that some think might have been had, in inducing new industrial establishments to locate here.

Another gratifying feature, in addition to our percentage of growth having been greater than any ten-year period in the United States, is the fact that the past decade has been the most fruitful in growth of any period in the past generation. If our growth is not what we think it should be, we are gaining. The census of 1881 showed a gain of 839,049; the growth in the ten years betwen 1881 and 1891 was 508,429. The 1901 census showed a growth of 536,076, and the last census reveals a growth of 1,700,000. Thus, the gain in the past ten years is three times greater than the average of the past three decennial periods. While increase in population is not the true measure of national progress, it is interesting to point out that in he last ten years of the Laurier Government the increase in population has been three and a half times greater than it was in the palmiest period of Conservative rule—from '81 to '91—when we had a real statesman at the head of the Conservative Government. So that in an obstinate matter, like the growth of population, as in all other national respects; in trade and commerce, internal development, and national and international standing, the progress of Canada has taken its greatest stride under a Liberal Government.

The great expansion of population in the West, where the Dominion Government, owning the lands, led to a vigorous immigration propaganda to fill them up, suggests that a lack of enterprise to people Ontario's great agricultural areas, accounts for the trifling increase of urban population and an actual decrease of rural population of the Province in the past ten years. What has Sir James Whitney been doing to build up Ontario, old and new? What has Hon. Frank Cochrane done to build up New Ontario? As a matter of fact, under Sir James Whitney's government, outside of the cities, the population of Ontario has decreased in the past decade. The cities and towns of the Province show a net increase of 344,753, while the total increase in the Province is only 383,955, showing a decrease in the rural sections of about 8,000. This is a sad record for the greatest agricultural province of the Dominion. The agricultural policy and the immigration policy of the Whieny Government are non-existent as to results. We have in New Ontario a great belt of first-class farming land, capable of supporting hundreds of thousands of population. The Government has allowed it to lie fallow, as it has been for centuries.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Yuan Shi Ki has been appointed

One of the first steps of reform of viceroy of Hu Peh, China. Yuan "must have a big pull wid Bourassa."

Sir James Whitney might tell us, if he can, what his government has ever done in the interests of labour.

One of the first steps on reform of the Borden government, is to reform the senate—by increasing its membership from 86 upwards, by giving the west greater representation.

On Oct. 17, wheat was $1.10 to $1.10 3-8 in Minneapolis; on Oct. 17, wheat was $1.00 3-4 in Winnipeg. Wisconsin wheat is soft wheat and Manitoba hard, and by grade is worth from four to five cents per bushel more than Wisconsin wheat.

Mr. Borden, says the Manitoba Free Press, is not the only Conservative leader who was nurtured in Liberalism. Sir James Whitney belongs to Liberal family, and began life as a Liberal. Twenty-five years ago the hottest, wildest Liberal in Manitoba was one R. P. Roblin. The Liberals apparently have to supply leaders for both Canadian parties.

A WEALTH OF WORDS.

Perhaps some of our readers may not be aware of the extreme extent of waste of words in stating a simple fact. This is shown in an extra of Canada's Gazette. All that was to be expressed was that "Parliament was called to meet on the 15th of November next, with the signature of the Governor-General added. Here, however, is the red-tape style of stating this simple notification:

WHEREAS the Meeting of Our Parliament of Canada stands Prorogued to the EIGHTEENTH day of the month of NOVEMBER next, nevertheless, for certain causes and considerations, we do will that you and each of you, be as to Us, in this matter, entirely exonerated; commanding, and by the tenor of these presents enjoining you, and each of you, and all others in this behalf interested, that on WEDNESDAY, the FIFTEENTH day of the month of NOVEMBER next, at Our City of OTTAWA, personally you be and appear, for the DESPATCH OF BUSINESS, to treat, do, act and conclude upon those things which in Our said Parliament of Canada, by the Common Council of Our said Dominion, may, by the favour of God, be ordained.

In Testimony Whereof, We have caused these Our Letters to be made Patent, and the Great Seal of Canada to be hereunto affixed. Witness, Our Most Dear and Entirely Beloved Uncle and Most Faithful Councillor, Field Marshal His Royal Highness Prince Arthur William Patrick Albert, Duke of Connaught and of Strathearn, Earl of Sussex, in the Peerage of the United Kingdom; Prince of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, Duke of Saxony, Prince of Saxe-Cobourg and Gotha; Knight of Our Most Noble Order of the Garter; Knight of Our Most Ancient and Most Noble Order of the Thistle; Knight of Our Most Illustrious Order of St. Patrick; First and Principal Knight Grand Cross and Great Master of Our Most Honourable Order of the Bath; Knight Grand Commander of Our Most Exalted Order of the Star of India; Knight Grand Cross of Our Most Distinguished Order of Saint Michael and Saint George; Knight Grand Commander of Our Most Eminent Order of the Indian Empire; Knight Grand Cross of Our Royal Victorian Order; Our Personal Aide-de-Camp; Governor-General and Commander-in-Chief of the Dominion of Canada.

At Our Government House, in Our City of OTTAWA, in Our said Dominion, the EIGHTEENTH day of OCTOBER, in the year of Our Lord one thousand nine hundred and eleven, and in the second year of Our Reign.

By Command,
JAMES FOLEY,
Clerk of the Crown in Chancery, Canada.

SATURDAY NIGHT'S OPINION.

Saturday Night's "first page" begins with the following expression of opinion upon the new Borden cabinet:

"We have had a few Federal Cabinets, in this country since Confederation, but the present one will unquestionably march through time as having received the record number of hard knocks. If the personnel of the present body is satisfactory to anyone, he has not been heard from; and to do the Hon. Mr. Borden justice, I doubt very much if he is himself altogether tickled over the result.

To the English-Canadian, and to many French-Canadians, the most discouraging feature is the thought that the Premier deems it necessary to cater to the Nationalist element of the Province of Quebec. Here we have Monk, Nantel, and Pelletier; and Monk with the most important portfolio, aside from that of Finance, safely tucked away in his coat tail pocket. One of them might have passed without serious criticism, but three is too much for even the most ardent Tory that ever cast a vote. If catering to these men and their up-side-down notions of retarding the growth of the country because the French-Canadian can't and won't keep pace with his English-speaking neighbour, had been a political necessity, the Hon. Mr. Borden might have possessed something in the way of an excuse, but with the Conservative majority back of him, such as the new Premier has—without taking Quebec into account at all—he has not a political leg to stand upon.

Under no account am I to be understood as wishing, or even insinuating, a desire to deprive the French-Canadians of the Province of Quebec of proper Cabinet representation. That is their right, though the giving of at least one portfolio to a representative of the English race in Quebec would have been no less than what is due, considering the imoprtance of the English-speaking interests within the confines of that province. Of course, it is quite possible that the Premier figures Mr. Monk as representing the English element; but as the aforementioned Mr. Monk is an out and out Nationalist—a little Canadian—he comes as far from being a representative English-Canadian as do Messrs. Bourassa and Lavergne. As a matter of fact, there is nothing English about the Hon. Mr. Monk, but his name.

However, let us hope for the best. Let us think that some day we will here in Canada get beyond the point of trading politically in men's religions, for Nationalism, as it stands, is, after all, three-quarters religion and one-quarter navy. Let us at least imagine that this traversty, this burlesque of trafficking in a man's God; of making political capital of his Creator on the election platform and before the ballot box, will cease by reason of our being ashamed to further utilize such methods.

The Duty Of The People In The Coming Provincial Elections

(Toronto Star.)

The Whitney papers are amusing themselves by gibing at the smallness of the Opposition in the Legislature and predicting a repetition of the last election. These little pleasantries are recognized features of the party game, like those of the coacher on the baseball field, and so far as they are made merely at the expense of a party, are of no public importance.

But there is a public question which all electors, Liberal, Conservative and Independent, ought very seriously to consider. They are told in effect that Sir James Whitney is now the dictator of Ontario, and that the selection of the new Legislature is to be made by a little caucus of politicians in sympathy with the dictatorship; in other words, that for the term of the next Legislature, there is to be a surrender of self government. Do the self-respecting electors of Ontario, whether Liberal or Conservative, like the prospect?

The fact is that the boasts of the Whitney papers cannot be made good unless there is a very serious neglect of public duty on the part of every constituency and every elector in Ontario. The blame for this neglect of duty cannot be thrown upon Mr. MacKay or his followers in the Legislature. The election is not a contest between two rival dictators. It is an opportunity afforded to every elector to choose his own representative in the Legislature and to express his own convictions upon public policy. If he does not use the opportunity, he demonstrates his unfitness for citizenship. If he meekly resigns his franchise to a caucus, he shows that he is unworthy of the franchise.

Nor can an elector excuse himself by saying that he believes Sir James Whitney to be an honest man, and that there are good points in the record and policy of his Government. His duty is to support what is good and to reject what is bad; to give the Whitney Government fair play, but not autocratic power. For this purpose there ought to be a choice of candidates in every constituency. Besides the regular party nominees there ought to be a very large number of independent men, who will say frankly with what portions of the Government policy they agree, with what they disagree, and what are their own particular views as to advancing the welfare of the Province.

This election might become the opportunity of enthusiasts in every line of public service, of men who are specially interested in scientific agriculture and in the improvement of the condition of country life, of enthusiasts for public ownership, of enthusiasts for town-planning, for public playgrounds, for the housing of the people and the removal of slums, of enthusiasts for educational progress, of enthusiasts for temperance reform, of enthusiasts for tax reform. Why let slip this golden opportunity for public service? Let those who are deeply interested in these things get into the Legislature and help to make our laws, instead of forming deputations to "wait upon" the Premier, and accept his answer as a decision from which there is no appeal? Let public-spirited men in every constituency get together, and see that no man enters the Legislature merely to count one for the Government or against it, but that the Legislature shall be a body of men who understand the interests of the Province, who have definite plans for advancing them, and who have courage and perseverance to back their convictions.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

There is a certain kind of vanity which has a clever habit of masquerading in the sheep's clothing of modesty, and which I would very much like to unmask.

And that is the vanity of the person who is always fancying that some one or other dislikes him.

He—or more often she, for men seldom have time for such notions — meets a new acquaintance. "I know that woman does dislike me," she declares afterwards.

In all probability that woman didn't think enough about her to dislike her, but of course her companion is obliged to assure her that the new acquaintance was doubtless much impressed with her beauty and brilliance.

"I wish I could make people like me," is a favourite plaint of this type of person.

The unfortunate creature to whom this plaint is made naturally assures her that people do like her and cites instances of her popularity.

But she is very hard to be convinced. Apparently the difficulty is due to her extreme modesty and diffidence. Actually it is a part of the game. For she will not submit to be convinced until she is sure that she has drained every possible compliment from her reassurer.

When she feels that this unwelcome moment has come she will reluctantly desist only to carry her plaint to some other victim as soon as she gets a good opportunity.

The strange part of the process is that the victim seldom realizes that it is vanity to which he is catering. He may dislike the process, he may not like to give praise when it is extorted from him at the pistol point of self-depreciation by this social highwayman, but he usually thinks it is an excess of humility that is causing all the trouble.

Whereas, as a matter of fact, it is almost always vanity pure and simple.

Perhaps, to be just, I should admit that the victim is not the only one deceived.

I suppose it is probable that the social highway woman herself honestly believes that she thinks people do not like her and that she says so because she is modest.

Doubtless that is why she is so clever in deceiving her victim — because she is herself a co-victim of the delusion.

They say ignorance of the law is no excuse.

I wonder if ignorance of one's self is any better exemption?

I wonder, too, if some of the abodes in that place which is said to be paved with good intentions may not be plastered with self-deceptions.

$20,000 STOCK OF MERCHANDISE LOCKED IN STORE EIGHTEEN YEARS

In Wallace, Kas., a stock of general merchandise worth $20,000 in a store that has been double locked and boarded up for eighteen years. In that time the door has never been opened. Peering through the cracks in the boards covering the windows one can see the shelves filled with goods, showcases full of expensive cutlery, cases of tenpenny cut nails that have been out of fashion for years, bales of clothing upon long counters, shoes, boots and cowboy outfits hanging from the ceiling, and buggies, kegs of barrels, piles of boxes and pyramids of tin cans.

Moths, mice, rust and decay, unchecked for eighteen years, have done their work in this stock of goods that once cost $20,000. Through the window cracks one can see where the dirt drifted over the floor from the rotted sacks; the men's clothing is a pile of lint that eighteen generations of moths have rested in. The seams in the harness, gloves and saddles have sprung apart, the handsaws are red with rust, the labels on the rows of canned goods are rotting off. A musty smell comes out of the closed store.

The Key Shall Never Turn—Robidoux.

Peter Robidoux, the man who owned the store, who locked it eighteen years ago and owns it yet, lives only a few rods away from it. He has never been in it since he closed it so long ago. He declares he will never enter it again and that the key shall never turn in its lock as long as he is alive. He is one of the wealthiest men in Wallace County; he owns thousands of acres of land and thousands of cattle, his wife and his sons have asked him many times to open the store and sell what remains of the merchandise, but he says:

"When I boarded up the windows and locked the doors I meant it to stay closed and stay closed it will."

When Peter Robidoux closed the store eighteen years ago it was the largest store between Kansas City and Denver.

Why did he close it and why does he keep it closed? Well, here is the story as gathered from Robidoux and his neighbours:

When the Kansas Pacific (now the Union Pacific) Railroad was building westward across Kansas, Peter Robidoux, then a boy of 16, drove mules with one of the construction gangs. He was from Canada and a member of the family of Robidoux, the founder of St. Joseph.

With the same construction gang, moving as it moved, from camp to camp, was Tom Madigan, an Irishman who sold whisky to the graders. When the railroad reached Fort Wallace there was a pause in the work of extension, and at that point was established a division of the railroad, with a roundhouse and a machine shop. There Madigan pitched his tent with the barrel of whisky and another of beer. Beer or whisky was twenty-five cents a drink.

Robidoux had long watched Madigan and the money he was making and he decided to go into the same business. He saved his wages until he had enough to buy a barrel of whisky and a box of cigars. With these he set up business in an old army tent in Wallace. He sold whisky for twenty-five cents a drink, and he soon had money enough to buy lumber and put up a small building opposite that which had been built by Madigan. From that time the two men were rivals in business, but friendly ones.

A Beer Keg Full of Silver Daily

Within a few months after Wallace was established it had a population of nearly five thousand persons. It was a typical frontier town, with dance halls, gambling halls, cowboys, and bad men and women. Fort Wallace, with its United States soldiers, was two miles away. The railroad shops and the construction gangs added several hnudred to its population. Money was plentiful. Robidoux tells that in his first saloon he used an empty beer keg for a safe. He kept his small change in a cigar box behind the bar and dropped the silver dollars into a beer keg. His usual income for one day was a beer keg full of silver.

Madigan added groceries to his stock and Robidoux built a larger store and sold groceries and general merchandise as well as whisky and beer. Madigan also built a new store. Then Robidoux built the big store which stands now, its doors locked. He bought goods by the carload. He got enormous prices. Among the goods he handled were hand-made boots from France that sold for $20 a pair. He sold Stetson hats for $10 which could be bought for $5 in Kansas City and Leavenworth. Everything was twice as high in Wallace as in Eastern stores and both Robidoux and Madigan became wealthy. Robidoux built a bank and a row of houses. The town became the county seat. A $10,000 schoolhouse was put up. The railroad built a big hotel with a park in front of it set with pine trees and shrubbery. Connected with it was a Harvey eating house and all trains stopped there. A crop of real estate dealers came there and the town was boomed as "the Metropolis of Western Kansas." The place was full of speculators and town lots sold and resold as quickly as the papers could be made out. A steady stream of immigrants came by the railroad and every quarter section of land had its settler. Money was so plentiful that no one cared what they paid for goods and Robidoux was getting immensely rich in his big store.

Then the Bottom Dropped Out

Then the bottom dropped out of the boom. First the government abandoned the fort and moved the soldiers away. Then the railroad moved its division point and shops to Sharon Springs, twelve miles farther west. With them went the county seat. Wallace became a whistling station; only the slow trains stopped there. On top of these disasters came a series of dry years. The settlers on the land discovered that they could not grow wheat and they abandoned their claims and moved away.

The town used to be a freighting point for all the country around. Robidoux tells of seeing one hundred and fifty freighters with wagons and teams camped there at once. They hauled goods from Wallace to points even one hundred miles away. The extension of the railroad westward, the building of the Santa Fe, Missouri Pacific, Rock Island, and Burlington railroads paralleling the Union Pacific killed this freight business.

Gradually the town dwindled until the population shrank to one hundred, and these had little money. Robidoux's business shrank as the town did. What little business there was left him and went to Madigan, because Madigan had lowered his prices while Robidoux would not sell for a cent less than he had got in boom times. James H. Barrett, the postmaster, tells of going to Robidoux's store for a hat. He picked out one that fitted him and asked the price.

"Ten dollars," said Robidoux.

"I can get it at Madigan's for $5," said Barrett.

Robidoux snatched the hat out of his hand and told him to go to Madigan's and buy.

So Robidoux Quit.

One day Robidoux sat from morn- till night in his store and not a customer came. He looked out upon a scene of desolation. There was scarcely an occupied house in the town. He realized that he must either close up or sell cheaply, and even then the trade would amount to little. He could not bring his mind to take less profit than he had always got. With bitterness in his heart against the fate that had befallen his once prosperous business he decided to close it. The next morning he boarded up the windows and locked the doors, and he and his family moved out to a ranch he owned twelve miles north.

Having closed his store Robidoux never entered it again and would permit no one else to go in. When he wanted goods he bought them of other stores in the town. With hundreds of dollars' worth of canned goods on the shelves of his own locked store he would drive past it and buy canned goods at another store. In the years that have passed since he closed the place he has bought hundreds of dollars, perhaps thousands, of dollars' worth of harness and saddles, and yet there was plenty in his own store to have supplied his wants.

In the first years after he closed the store he was so filled with disgust at the town and loss of trade that he would not open it. Later on, after he had moved again to the town, he said: "It's been closed so long now I'll keep it closed as long as I live."

There are not twenty houses in Wallace now and one of them is the old frame courthouse with the stone vault behind, out of which someone stole the court records and carried them to Sharon Springs in the bitter county seat fight between the two towns. Nearly all the buildings in the town were moved away for ranch houses after the boom broke. Some were moved to Kit Carson and Cheyenne Wells, fifty miles away. Now the few old-timers that are left sit in the one general store and tell stories of the town's past glories.

One story is of how Robidoux played a trick on his rival Madigan. The two were always trying to get the better of each other in practical jokes. Once Madigan went East for a week and left a greenhorn in charge of his saloon. Madigan had one hundred quarts of champagne in the cellar, which he sold for $10 a bottle in those palmy days. One day while Madigan was away Robidoux sent several of his friends to Madigan's saloon and they began playing cards for drinks. When the time came for the first round of drinks all ordered cider. The new bartender did not know where the cider was. One of the men said:

"It's down cellar in those bottles with the white labels on and the tinfoil on the cork. Bring us a bottle apiece. The price is twenty-five cents a bottle."

In the week that Madigan was away Robidoux's friends drank all his $10 champagne at twenty-five cents a bottle. When Madigan returned he "cussed" Robidoux so hard that the Frenchman almost died from laughing.

In the few years that Wallace was prospering fourteen men were killed at different times in brawls and fights, and all were buried in one place at the edge of the town. A few years ago the townspeople hired J. H. Barrett to dig up those fourteen bodies and move them out to the graveyard at the old fort, two miles distant. Barrett says that when he dug down to the fourteen bodies he found a pair of cowboy boots with high heels in each grave. The men had been buried as they fell.

A Mob that Stopped for a Drink.

One of the bodies was wrapped in the remnants of a buffalo coat. He was a man who was hanged to a telegraph pole. He had stolen a horse and been caught. A mob formed and decided to hang him. They started toward the railroad track, it was a very cold night and someone suggested that they ought to stop at Robidoux's and get a drink. They did so, and the man who was to be hanged drank with them. Then they had a few more, the man under sentence taking a drink whenever the others did. After a while they began to get mellow under the influence of the whisky and the horsethief told a funny story. This brought another round of drinks, and the horsethief told another story and then another keeping the company in a roar of laughter. At last one of the company remembered that they had a hanging on hand and the leader said:

"Come on, fur coat; you're delaying the game here; just one more drink and then you've got to swing."

He was drunk and so were his executioners when they hanged him to the telegraph pole. The next morning, when he body was cut down, it was found that he did not die from strangulation, but had frozen to death. The thick collar of his fur coat was turned up to his ears and his drunken executioners had placed the rope around that instead of around his neck. He might have lived until morning if the weather had not been so cold that he froze as he swung. They buried him in his fur coat.

One of the oldest inhabitants of Wallace is George Bowers, who preempted a claim near the town thirty-five years ago and built a dugout on it in which he had lived ever since. From the door of his dugout he has seen the town grow from nothing and has seen it die again to almost nothing.

Of the gorgeous Harvey eating-house and hotel not a trace is left. Of the park that the railroad company made is left one solitary pine tree. Through its stunted branches and withering foliage the winds of the Kansas prairies sough mournfully.

CASCARETS FOR A SICK, SOUR STOMACH

Gently but Thoroughly Cleanse and Regulate Your Stomach, Liver and Bowels While You Sleep

That awful sourness, belching of acid and foul gases; that pain in the pit of the stomach, the heartburn, nervousness, nauseau, bloating after eating, feeling of fullness, dizziness and sick headache, means indigestion; a disordered stomach, which cannot be regulated until you remove the cause. It isn't your stomach's fault. Your stomach is as good as any.

Try Cascarets; they cure indigestion, because they immediately cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour, undigested and fermenting food and foul gases; take the excess bile from the liver and carry off the decomposed waste matter and poison from the intestines and bowels. Then your stomach trouble is ended for ever. A Cascaret to-night will straighten you out by morning—a 10-cent box from any drug store will keep your entire family feeling good for months. Don't forget the children—their little insides need a good, gentle cleansing, too.

WHAT MAKES A COMPLEXION?

The season's programme of evening parties, social events, etc., is before you. Why not look your best? Why not ensure a good complexion? Matter of time and perseverance only if you will use Zam-Buk.

Zam-Buk is a skin food; and complexion is purely a matter of skin health. Zam-Buk, smoothed gently over the face each night, acts as a skin tonic. It stimulates the cells beneath the cuticle to healthy action, makes the capillaries and blood vessels work, and the vigorous circulation, thus started, carries away sediment, impurities. Waxy, sallow deposits are thus removed, and that yellow tinge gives place to the pink of health.

Isn't this wiser than trying dish (falcum powder and cosmetics? Zam-Buk builds up a complexion from blood and tissue. It heals.

CHILD LOST

At noon to-day a little girl about four years old, appealed to an official of the law, with the request that she be directed to the Peterborough House. She was evidently lost, for when P. C. McGinty took her to the American house, formerly known as the Peterborough house, there was no one who could identify her. The child, who gave her name as Baker, was then taken to the Snowden house, where it was ascertained that her people were registered as guests and a happy re-union took place. The child had been wandering about the city for about two hours and her disappearance caused her guardians no end of anxiety.

$400 CONSUMED

Mr. Newton Allen, Postmaster at Marlbank, met with a rather serious loss the other evening. He was away during the afternoon and evening and one of the family took a roll of money, $400 and stuck it in the waste paper basket for safe keeping, believing that if burglars should nose around any, they'd never think of looking in there. Mr. Allen arrived home during the night. He was up bright and early however, and cleaning up about the office, he dumped the contents of the waste paper basket into the stove and touched a match. The result was that 400 wood dollar bills went up in smoke.—Tweed News.

SIGNS OF KIDNEY TROUBLE

In the early stages kidney troubles are known by backache and urinary disorders. Later come dropsy, stone rheumatic pains, and perhaps diabetes. But don't wait for these. Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills will help you in a few hours. Their thorough action on the liver, kidneys and bowels will clear away the pains and aches and make you well again.

Local Men On A Jaunt

(Havelock Sentinel.)

Three young men from Havelock and one from Peterborough, who were rounded up here on Fair day by the police on a charge of drunkenness and disorderly conduct, came before Reeve Breault on Monday and were each fined $5 and costs, which amounts were paid forthwith, the fines being handed over to the village treasurer. A fifth party who was arrested on a similar charge and who put up $5 as a guarantee that he would appear when wanted, has yet to be dealt with. The local authorities are determined to see that law and order is observed, and it would be well for parties to bear this in mind.

The seat sale for Paul Gilmore and his select company, in "The Mummy and the Humming Bird" at "The Grand" on Monday, Oct. 23, is now open. Book your seats early.

All ladies interested are cordially invited to be present.

Rev Jas. Rollins will deliver his lecture "A Prince of the Sea" postponed from Tuesday evening, in St. Andrew's Church this evening at 8 o'clock. Mrs. S Dickson Hall will sing Treneer will give organ numbers. 1d

Impressed With Growth Of This City

Mr. B. C. H. Becker, of the lively little town of Brighton, was a guest at the Hotel National last night. He left the city this morning. It is just one year and two weeks since Mr. Becker was here before, and he was greatly impressed with the progress the city had made during that year. Mr. Becker had visited Belleville, Brantford, and several other cities, and towns in Ontario, but Peterborough, as a whole, impressed him very much. He said this city's hotel accommodation was the best he had witnessed in any of the cities he had visited. The hotels here are more up-to-date and modern in every respect, and run on more business-like principles than the general run of places. Other buildings had also sprung up during the year, and he was greatly surprised to see the rapid progress that the city had made. He said that Belleville had been more stationary from a business point of view, and from the excellent opportunity it has, than any city or town he visited. It has almost all the advantages a city can have:: Railway and steamboat connection, a fine farming community, and an industrial centre. Peterborough, an inland city, has made rapid growth, and holds an important position in the commercial world.

THE PRIVATE SECRETARY

William Gillette once said that of all the parts he had played none gave him more genuine pleasure in its portrayal than the role of the Rev. Robert Spaulding in "The Private Secretary." The comedian went on record as calling the play the funniest farce ever conceived. That American theatregoers thought so is evidenced by the fact that it has been, ever since its first presentation, the most consistent money maker of all comedies, not excepting "Charley's Aunt," and that locality makes no difference is shown by he fact that the play was just as successful abroad and in foreign language as it was on this continent.

Mr. C. James Bancroft, the celebrated English comedian, has been very happy in his selection of "The Private Secretary" as the medium for his forthcoming starring tour. He has presented the play himself over 2,000 times, playing nearly two years in London alone. In coming to this country he has made no bad move in bringing his English Company intact, just as he played in England. The papers of the British metropolis were loud in their praises of Mr. Bancroft and there is no question about his success here. The play will be seen at the "Grand," to-morrow, (Saturday), matinee and evening, Oct. 21st.

GRIP STOLEN

A brown grip, containing a grey overcoat, was removed from the G. T. R. station on Wednesday evening, presumably by a sneak thief. The stolen goods was the property of Mr. Stanley Norris. He had left the grip, together with a trunk and some other small articles, at the baggage room door for a few minutes while he went in and interviewed the agent regarding the checking of the goods to his home in Napanee. On his return the grip containing the overcoat was missing. The matter is now in the hands of the police and a quick round-up of the covetous gentleman is expected.

NEW ARRIVALS

During the past week, several new arrivals in the city have been placed by Mr. Howson, emigration agent. Among these were a married couple, with a little girl 11 years old. A good home was secured by Mr. Howson for the husband and wife, while the girl is still available. Anyone desiring help of any kind will confer a favour by communicating with Mr. Howson. The influx of emigrants to this city is on the wane, although the demand for help of this kind is keen.

ONCE LIVED HERE

Further to the article appearing in the columns of yesterday's issue of the Examiner to the effect that Mr. J. Irwin, formerly G.T.R. trainmaster, Lindsay, and now superintendent of the Dauphin division of the C.P.R., was in Lindsay attending the funeral of his son Maurice, who was crushed to death between two freight cars at Guelph, it is ascertained that Maurice was formerly employed at the C.G.E. works here.

POST CARD COLUMN

AN ENGLISHMAN'S PROTEST.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—May 1, through the columns of your valuable paper, enter my protest, as a "Britisher", against one of the films shown last evening at the "Royal". The film I strongly resent is one showing the taking of a fort during the American War of Independence, and is in the worst possible taste. Several of my fellow countrymen have expressed their indignation to me and I must say I am both surprised and indignant at the management showing such a picture in one of the colonies, and the greatest colony of the Empire. The film depicts the British Commander and the officers and soldiers of the fort in a very distasteful manner, and is a libel on the British Army. Surely enough years have rolled by now to place scenes enacted in that war in the realms of past and forgotten history, and to show that picture in the way it was shown is an offence against the Britishers who patronize the "Royal." How would Americans like to see pictures depicting the way the "Canadian Militia" defeated them when they, with their army, tried to subdue Canada. I hope the management of the Royal will never again show such bad taste to a numerous class of their patrons.

Yours respectfully,
Percival G. S. Webb.

The Examiner has received another communication along the same lines as the above, but as it was unsigned is not published.

In this connection it should be stated to Manager Pappas' credit that pictures such as the one objected to are very decidedly the exception and not the rule at the Royal. Mr. Pappas is always careful to show only such pictures as shall be appreciated by his patrons, and the one that has caused comment has been eliminated from the programme.

To the Editor of the Examiner.

Dear Sir,—Some children are just left to grow. Now, if we want a fine garden, one that we take pleasure in, we must attend to it regularly, and keep the weeds out and train and prune and cut back the plants, and dig and rake around the roots, so that the garden will grow with good healthy plants. Now, children are of far more worth than plants, but some are not attended to; they are allowed to grow like weeds, which are of little use to anyone, rather a hindrance.

Children need plenty of sunshine: just the same as plants, and their minds trained, taught obedience to be respectful.

Take, for instance, the men in high positions; they had good parents or a friend, who taught them all these things. The first thing children should be taught is obedience. It is difficult for some parents to teach this to their children; they go about it in the wrong way, and make them obedient through fear.

Children need so much sunshine of love—the shadows come soon enough—that if it is withheld they fail even in their little enjoyments and play.

Children know just where to go to find mother if she is loving, kind, and good. They may be playing outdoors, but they know she is just within so they do not fear.

How different it is with children who fear their parents, one feels so much sympathy for them they have no true guide to follow; they are obedient through fear, with a longing to keep away from their home; no running in to tell mother their little disappointments. Thy would only be scolded. No, they have to bear it themselves, and how children feel their little troubles when they have no one to sympathise with them.

We need more good Christian homes. Homes where family worship is. Where God's words are taught to children, and where they are sent to school with bright, happy faces.

Sincerely yours,
A Mother.

A NIGHT ASHORE

A Short Story

It was in June, 1887, and I just completed my contract to serve twelve months on board the Perim Coaling Company's coal-hulk Ben Nevis. The company had sent a man over from Perim to relieve me, and I was going home.

Going home! How beautiful those two little words sounded! They were like the promise of Paradise after living in Hades, for I think the Red Sea is the nearest approach to Hades upon earth.

The hulk, as I have said, belonged to the Perim Coaling Company, but was chartered by a French company, who had established a coaling station at Obokh. She was anchored off Obokh, and I, with twelve Arabs, looked after her and supplied coal to the French warships which came down that way.

My relief informed me that I was to proceed to Perim and report to the manager, who would instruct me as to how I was to go home. I could almost have thrown my arms about that man's neck and kissed him when he came on deck and reported himself; but I was afraid he might not like it so I refrained, and did a song and dance on the deck instead—much to the disgust and amazement of the new-comer who, by the look on his face, evidently thought that I had been touched by the sun during my stay on the hulk. But I did not care what he thought; I was going home. After he had served two or three months on the hulk he would understand why I was so delighted.

Just picture yourself living on the hulk of an old wooden sailing ship, anchored a mile from the shore. On the one side of you are the glassy waters of the Red Sea, which are very rarely disturbed except by a shark's fin; on the other side there is nothing but a long stretch of sandy beach, with the dark-bluish outline of the Abyssinian hills looming up in the background. In the daytime the sun pours down its burning rays relentlessly, scorching and blistering the paint-work. The pitch oozes out of the seams in the deck, and the mercury in the thermometer hovers between ninety and a hundred and ten degrees.

Even when a breeze springs up it is hot and sultry, and does not cool one in the slightest; and when it increases to a gale or storm the air is filled with fine sand, which almost chokes one. At night time there is not much relief for I have lain in my bunk panting and gasping for air the whole night long, and only dropped off to sleep in the early hours of the morning just before sunrise.

For company I had twelve Arabs, who had neither comprehension nor sense in them, except what I drove in with a stick. I had no one to talk to, and very rarely saw a white face, except when a French warship came alongside for coal, and then it was only for an hour or two. I was just beginning to forget what the English language sounded like when my relief came on board, so you will understand why I was so delighted when he arrived.

It did not take me long to pack up my few belongings, show the new arrival his duties and give him the necessary instructions as to what was required of him. Then I bade him good-bye and started off for Perim.

I found that Mr. Spalding, the manager at Perim, had my passage already arranged. I was to go home in the City of Calcutta, which was leaving Perim the day I arrived.

I wanted some money, as I had not a pennypiece to my name. I did not require money on the hulk, so never bothered about drawing any pay while I was on board. Mr. Spalding was in much the same fix, as he had no money either, nor could he see his way to getting any for me.

I told him I simply must have some cash. I could not go all the way home to England without money in my pocket; and, besides, I should want money to buy myself clothes and several other necessary items when I landed in England.

Finally Mr. Spalding solved the problem by giving me a cheque on a Mr. Stapleton, ship-agent at Port Said. He told me the City of Calcutta was calling at Port Said for orders, and also that he would speak to the captain and explain the predicament I was in, and ask him to give me time to go on shore to get the money. Everything was thus arranged satisfactorily, and I boarded the City of Calcutta with a light heart.

We arrived in Port Said at midnight, and when the ship had anchored I went up to the captain and reminded him of his promise. He was talking to the ship's agent, who had come on board in a small boat as soon as we arrived, and this gentleman volunteered to take me ashore with him as soon as he had finished his business, sending one of his servants with me to show me where Stapleton's place was.

It was about one o'clock in the morning when I climbed into the agent's boat. The captain told me to be as quick as I could and he would wait until I came back.

We pushed off from the ship and headed towards the shore. Everything was perfectly still, and the stars shone out from the heavens like so many diamonds, yet the night was very dark. There was not a breath of air, and the slightest sound could be heard even above the dull click of the oars and the splashing of the water.

As we were being pulled towards the shore the agent tried to explain to me how I was to find Stapleton's place. I was to go up this street, and turn to the left when I got so far up, and then turn to the right when I got to So-and-So street. By the way he rattled on with the turnings and twists I was to take, and the different streets I was to negotiate, I thought I was in for a ten-mile walk.

"But never mind," he said, at the finish of his description; "the boy will take you to the place all right, only I thought I would give you a slight idea of where you were going, so that you would have a landmark or two in case he gave you the slip on your way back. They have a bad habit of doing things like that when they want to go to bed and think they have been kept out of it longer than they should have been. And there's another thing I want to warn you about. Keep your eyes open when you are coming back, and don't get dreaming, or somebody may tap you on the back of the head or stick a knife in you. You know these confounded Arabs are not too particular if they think you have any money about you. They believe they have as much right to it as you have, and will take it if they get a chance. By the way, how much does your cheque amount to? Stapleton might not have enough money on the premises."

I told him it was made out for twenty-five pounds.

"Oh, he'll have that much with him," said the agent. As he spoke he lit a cigarette and deliberately threw the burning match on the bare back of one of the Arabs, who nearly jumped out of the boat when he felt it. "That rascal is paying too much attention to what we are saying," explained the agent, in a whisper. "You have to bring these fellows up with a round turn at times. They always try to mind everybody's business but their own, and it is not good to let them know too much, especially when it is about money matters."

The boat grounded on the beach as he finished speaking, so we both got up and jumped out. The agent gave his servant the necessary instructions as to where he was to take me, and, after once more warning me to be careful, bade me good night and strode off into the darkness.

I was very thinkful for the advice he had given me, and determined to keep my weather eye open in case I should be held up.

I told the Arab servant to go ahead and take me to Stapleton's, giving him to understand that I would stand no monkey tricks. As he walked along I kept close up to him; at the same time I tried to take bearings, so that I should know my way back in case I lost him.

The place was very dark, and everywhere seemed much of a sameness, so I could not take notice of any special landmarks by which to guide myself when I came back. The boy walked quickly, and by the time he had turned and twisted up a couple of side streets I gave it up, making up my mind that I would hold on to the boy and compel him to bring me back.

We were not long in getting to Stapleton's place. The street it was in was dark and narrow, and I could not tell what my surroundings were like, except that the house I was standing in front of was a small two-storeyed affair.

I knocked loudly on the door several times before I received any answer. Then a window above my head was pushed open and a sleepy, but angry, voice demanded my business. The voice further urged me to state pretty quickly and to the point, or I would get a dose of buckshot in my carcase.

Needless to say, I started to explain, but as soon as the man above heard my voice and the English language he interrupted me by apologising for being so rude.

"I thought it was some of those Arabs up to their tricks," he said. "Wait a minute, and I will come down and open the door for you. We can talk better inside."

He came down in his pyjamas, with a lamp in his hand, and took me into his office. I apologised for waking him up, and then, producing my cheque, handed it to him and soon had the money in my pocket. He showed me to the door, and, wishing me a pleasant trip home, closed and locked it, and, I suppose, went to bed again.

Alone once more, I turned to look for the boy who had guided me to the house; but there was no sign of him to be seen. I could have kicked myself for being as stupid as to leave him outside, after the warnings I had received, but, as a matter of fact, I forgot all about him from the time Mr. Stapleton opened his window until I came out into the street again.

I did not mind being left by myself; that did not trouble me in the least. What did trouble me was that I might get lost and Captain Thoms might not wait for me if I was too long away. However, I knew I was not very far from where we landed, so I started off to find my way back, trusting to luck to bring me right.

I kept in the middle of the street, and walked steadily along until I came to the first turning, which, I remember, was to the right. I was just about to turn out of the street when I tripped over a cord which was stretched across the end of it, and fell on my hands and knees. The thought immediately flashed across my mind that this was a trap. So, instead of jumping on to my feet again, I rolled over on my back. It was a good thing for me that I did, for if I had got up on my feet again I should have received a knife between my shoulder-blades. As it was, I saw a fellow standing over me with a knife in his hand, with two other rascals close behind him. Without a moment's hesitation I drew my legs up quickly and then, with all the force I could bring to bear, shot my feet into the first man's stomach. He staggered backwards, crashing into one of the other men, and the pair of them fell to the ground. Springing to my feet, with a good swing of my arm I let the remaining one have my fist on the lower part of his jaw. Then I turned tail and raced down the street as fast as my legs could carry me.

I turned and looked back after I had been running for a while, but could not see any signs of them. I knew, however, that this did not necessarily mean safety. I might not see them, yet they were possibly following me, so I kept on running.

Presently I came to a side opening where a cart had been wheeled in just clear of the main street. The horse or whatever drew it had been taken out. It was a two-wheeled affair, and the back end was on the ground, with the shafts sticking up in the air. I jumped into this and, crouching down, decided to wait and see if I was being followed.

While I was waiting I tried to think how these fellows knew I had money on me. I thought of the agent's boy, and came to the conclusion that the information must have come from him, for I do not think anybody else was aware that I was going to Stapleton's to cash a cheque.

I had only been in my hiding-place about two minutes when I saw three figures pass by in the gloom. I lay very quiet, hardly daring to breathe. They were only moving slowly, and were evidently searching the sides of the street as they passed along.

They stopped close to where I was hiding, and one of them, speaking in a low voice, asked the second man if he was sure I came along that street. The other replied that he was certain, adding that he saw me stop running just about where they were.

"We will seek for him farther up the street, then," said the first Arab, "and if we do not find him we will go back and wait."

They were speaking in Arabic, but I could understand them, having learnt the language from my men on the Ben Nevis.

The trio passed on up the street, and I slipped out of my hiding-place and crept away in the opposite direction, keeping close to the houses in case they happened to turn round and see me.

When I was well clear I hurried on as fast as I could, taking the direction which I thought would bring me down to the harbor. I must have walked on for about twenty minutes, but did not see a soul to direct me, the streets being absolutely deserted.

I began to feel that I was lost, and stopped for a moment to see if I could recognise the street I was in and if I was anywhere near Stapleton's place, but failed to do so. Leaning up against the wall of a house to think, something stuck in my side. Putting my hand down, I found it was my revolver. I had placed it in my hip-pocket when I left the ship, and in the excitement had forgotten all about it.

The presence of that little weapon cheered me up considerably, and, feeling more comfortable, and having renewed confidence in myself, I started off in search of the harbor again. I did not seem to care now whether I met those three Arabs or not.

I plodded on, turning and twisting about the silent streets, until at last I stumbled across an Arab policeman sitting down in a doorway and peacefully slumbering. I almost fell on his neck with joy, as I had been away from the ship quite a considerable time by now, and was beginning to think that Captain Thoms would not wait for me.

When I woke the policeman up he sprang to his feet and came to the salute: I suppose he thought I was his sergeant. I asked him to direct me to harbor, at the same time placing a shilling in his hand. My knowledge of Arabic stood me in good stead again, for the fellow could not understand a word of English.

He directed me how to go, but by the time he had finished explaining I was as wise as ever. Although he told me the harbor front was only about five minutes' walk from where we were standing, I was not going to take the chance of getting lost again, so, with the help of another shilling, I induced him to walk with me and show me the way. At first he did not care to come; he was frightened of the sergeant not finding him on his beat. However, the extra shilling did the trick, and he finally came along with me.

The policeman was quite right in saying I was only five minutes' walk from where I could get a boat, for we just took three or four turns down narrow streets, and we were on the harbor front. He pointed to where the boats were lying, and, bidding me good night, went back to his beat again.

I thought I should have some difficulty in procuring a boat to take me off to the ship at that early hour of the morning, for it must have been close on three o'clock by now, but I was mistaken. As soon as I made my appearance an Arab came up to me and inquired in English if I wanted a boat. I answered him in the same language, and told him that I did, whereupon he offered to take me off for two shillings. I was quite satisfied; in fact, I was only too glad to get a boat at all.

The native guided me along the beach a little way until we came to his craft, and then, waking up two of his mates, who were asleep in the boat, he helped me in.

I could see the lighted ports of the City of Calcutta, and by the lights which were moving about on her forecastle-head I judged that they were heaving up anchor. The captain had evidently got tired of waiting for me.

I told the Arab to hurry up and get off as fast as he could. I went to sit in the stern sheets, but he stopped me.

"Sit in the middle of the boat, Johnny," he said in his broken English; "there is no room here, because I will steer."

"Sit in the middle of the boat yourself, confound you!" I cried. "Who do you think you are trying to insult? For two pins I would knock your head off."

The fellow took not the slightest notice of me, but just sat down in the stern, and, looking up at me quite unconcerned, replied:

"All right, suppose you no sit there, we no pull off to your ship. Look"—with a wave of his hand—"them ship go soon."

There was no help for it, the fellow had me, so I had to do as he told me; yet I did not want to sit between the two oarsmen.

As a rule there are only two Arabs to a boat, and the passenger sits in the stern and steers. Now, there were three in this boat, so I felt a little bit suspicious, and more especially as they wanted me to sit in the middle of the boat, in between the two men who were pulling. I did not like the idea at all, but I either had to sit there or lose my passage in the City of Calcutta, for there was no other boat available. So I went and sat down where I was told, determined to keep a watch, as far as possible, on the men in front and behind me. If they made any movement towards assaulting me I intended to shoot. To this end I slipped my revolver out of my hip-pocket and put it up the sleeve of my coat, with the butt resting in the palm of my right hand.

Meanwhile, the Arabs shoved the boat off and commenced to pull slowly toward the ship. When we were well into the harbor and clear of the shore, the fellow in the stern started an Arabic chant in a low voice. At first I did not take much notice of what he was singing, thinking it was merely some native song; but presently I caught the word "money," and was all attention immediately. He repeated the chant two or three times in the same low voice, and to my surprise I found that under pretence of singing he was asking one of the other two if he was sure I had the money.

The fellow behind me took up the chant, and, keeping in time with the pull of his oar, answered the one in the stern, telling him he was certain I had the money.

"All right," chanted the man in the stern; "we will stop shortly, so watch for the signal."

The whole situation dawned on me. These were the three fellows who had attacked me in the street! Failing to achieve their object there, they had come down to the beach to wait for me, knowing I must return to the ship. The words one of them used when I was hiding in the cart came back to me also. I had not taken much notice of them then, but now I thoroughly understood what they meant. No wonder they wanted me to sit in the middle of the boat! I supposed the fellow behind would give me a crack on the back of the head, or stick a knife into my back; they would then rob me of my money and throw me over the side into the water. However, I was determined that they should neither murder nor rob me. They evidently thought that I did not suspect them, and must also have thought that I could not speak their language. Now that I came to think about it, they had addressed me in English, and I had answered them in the same language; I had not spoken Arabic at all in their presence.

As soon as the fellow in the stern had finished speaking I knew it was time for me to act, and act quickly, if I did not want to be turned into a corpse.

Taking hold of my revolver by the muzzle and slipping it from my sleeve, I struck the fellow who was pulling in front of me just under the ear with the butt-end of it. He collapsed at once, dropping limply to the bottom of the boat. The rascal in the stern jumped to his feet, but I was too quick for him. As soon as I had struck the first fellow I jumped over him, and, hitting out with my left fist, I landed the one in the stern square between the eyes, knocking him over the stern of the boat into the water. The rower in the bow was too surprised to do anything but stare at me blankly; it was all done so quickly.

"Yes, I have got the money, you blackguards," I said, speaking for the first time in the vernacular, and swinging my revolver in their direction. "Moreover, I mean to keep it; and I have a good mind to shoot the three of you."

ANNUAL MEETING OF THE CURLING CLUB

Successful Gathering of Local "Knights of the Broom" Held Last Night at Which Officers for the Season Were Elected.

That the time is again wearing around for the curlers to get busy, was evidenced last night, when a large number of curlers gathered in the Board room of the Montreal Bank and elected the officers for the coming season.

The electing of the officers followed the reading of the minutes, which were confirmed. Everything was done in a business-like manner, and as a result the Club had considerable time for discussion of general preparations in connection with the coming season, which they intend to make even more successful than last year, if possible.

Officers Elected.

The following were the officers elected:

President—Mr. J. H. Connal.

Vice-President—Mr. R. Hicks.

Mr. J. A. Cameron was nominated for this office first, but refused the nomination on account of his time being too much occupied with personal business.

Secretary-Treasurer — J. H. Ferguson.

Asst.-Sec.—Harry Foote.

Last year's representatives to the Ontario Curling Association, were Messrs. W. G. Ferguson and W. G. Morrow, and they were re-elected for the coming season.

An Honorary President was elected in the person of Mr. R. M. Waddell.

Auditor—Dr. Cameron.

Skips.—Mayor Morrow moved that the same skips be re-elected, with the provision that if there were any vacancies, by members leaving, etc., that the election of other skips to take their places be left with the Executive, with power to act.

Executive.—The following are the members on the Executive: Messrs. W. M. Lang, D. Davidson, W. McIlroy, G. H. Giroux, T. E. Yeates.

A vote of thanks was tendered Mr. R. M. Waddell for the efficient services he rendered as President of the Club during the last season.

Mayor Morrow, Messrs W. McIlroy, J. H. Ferguson, R. M. Waddell and the two presidents, were elected as a Reception Committee to look after the Scotch curlers, who will again visit the city this season.

The Secretary was instructed to write a letter of condolence from the Club to Mr. J. A. Fitzgerald, in the recent bereavement of his father, the late Mr. Thos. Edward Fitzgerald, who passed away on Wednesday evening.

Mr. J. A. Cameron offers a "Sailor Boy" prize for the best four ladies' rinks. His offer was thankfully received by the Club.

The following are the members of the Membership Committee of last year who were re-elected: Messrs. T. Brightman, R. Best, T. E. Yeats, T. E. Clark, B. Hicks, W. Stockes, W. M. Lang, A. Moore, D. Davidson, and L. Hall.

The Club discussed the advisability of getting the rink in shape as soon as possible for the winter's proceedings, and other preparations will be made.

An agitation was rife for a social committee to arrange for special sport to make it interesting for the younger players, but the majority were in favour of cutting down the officers to as few as possible. However, all will work in a cooperative manner to make the game as pleasant for new members and beginners, as possible. And it might be mentioned that the club desires that any person wishing to become a member for the coming season should write the Secretary at once.

Last-Year Officers.

Hon.-President—W. G. Ferguson.
President—R. M. Waddell.
Vice-Pres.—J. H. Connal.
Sec.-Treas.—J. H. Ferguson.
Asst.-Sec.-Treas.—H. F. Foote.
F. Medd, J. E. A. Fitzgerald; Dr. Eastwood, W. G. Reid.
Umpire—A. McIntosh.
Caretaker—A. McIntosh.

The Club's membership last year was: gentlemen, 146; ladies, 17.

Loving Cup For Club Which Plays The Most Friendly Games In Season

Curlers agree that the friendly game's the thing and the O. C. A. have thoughtfully gone upon record in an endeavour to encourage the game by puting up a cup for the club that does the most of it at the meeting of the executive held Tuesday.

On motion of Messrs. J. S. Russell and J. D. Flavelle, the following resolution was adopted: "That, with the view of fostering and promoting more general playing of friendly games between clubs forming the Ontario Curling Association, a new competition be constituted, to be called the "Loving Cup Competition" open to all clubs in the association. The award is to be a handsome loving cup, to be presented to the club playing the greatest number of friendly games with the other clubs in the association, and with not less than two rinks a side, under the following general regulations, viz.; (1) That not more than two games between any two clubs shall be counted in any season. (2) Matches played at bonspiels, tournaments for trophies of any description shall not be counted. (3) The players shall be ordinary members of the clubs taking part in the competition, and, as far as possible, in regular rotation. (4) Returns of games played shall be reported to the secretary of the association before the last day of March in each year."

It was decided that in view of the eminent services rendered the association by Mr. Russell, to call this competition the J. S. Russell Loving Cup.

Walter Knox's Brilliant Season In Scotland Won Many Firsts

TORONTO, OCT. 18. — Walter R. Knox, of Orillia, Canada's crack all-round professional athlete, is in town to-day en route for his home in Orillia, after a brilliant season's campaign in Scotland. Knox returns home with one Scottish record at his belt—the pole vault—and the enviable record of having at one time or another beaten every one of the Scotch weight champions.

Knox's feat of defeating the burly, brawny Scotchmen is all the more remarkable because of his weight. He weighs only 154 pounds and the fact is remarked by several critics, one of whom says that he is the best man, considering his poundage, who ever performed in Scotland. Another one says that he is the most scientific ball-putter he ever saw.

Knox, who was away four months, won 57 firsts, 23 seconds, 31 thirds, and two fourths. Though he is a grand sprinter, he relied mostly on his pole-vaulting, weight-throwing and jumping. He only ran one sprint all the time he was across, and that was a handicap. He toyed with Scotland's pole-vaulting champions all summer, striving to get on a match, but there was nothing doing, so he showed his real form and set the record at 11 feet 6 inches.

The best he did with the shot was 45 feet, though he once got 46 feet 1 inch, but fouled.

He beat A. A. Cameron, John McNichol, Dick Adams, Jim Morrison, Jock McKenzie, Donald Macdonald, and Duncan Ross, all of whom are mighty men with the weights in Scotland.

In the Powderhall sprint of 130 yards, the famous Scotch professional handicap, run each New Year's Day, Knox already has an allowance of 7 yards.

Knox leaves for Orillia to-night, and will go on to Gow Ganda, where he has some claims, next week.

Roast For Giants

Heywood Broun, the baseball writer of the New York Telegraph, let his hammer have free play in reference to the McGraw methods of ball playing, as compared with the more gentlemanly behaviour of Connie Mack's men. He even goes so far as to say that it will be a splendid thing if the championship does not go to New York, for the reason that it will show that the McGraw system is not as successful as it is offensive.

This is hot stuff.

"The defeat was tempered for the rooters of New York by the fact that one of McGraw's men was guilty of the most barefaced bit of dirty work ever seen on a ball field. One does not expect from professionals all the courtesies of sport, but one does expect the decencies. When Fred Snodgrass, in the tenth inning, slid into third base with one foot listed high it was evident that he intended to spike Frank Baker, the mainstay of the Athletics and the man who had just reviously put his team in the fight by walloping the ball into the right field stand. Snodgrass succeeded in his design and Baker received an ugly gash in the thigh. There was absolutely no excuse, for the play at third was not close. Baker was waiting for the runner.

Fans Miss Snodgrass.

That the fans of New York realized that a very raw piece of work had been perpetrated was shown by the fact that the plucky third baseman of the visitors was roundly cheered when he continued in the game, while Snodgrass was hissed. McGraw might have indicated his disapproval of his player's action by removing him from the game. This is not McGraw's style. After this incident a number of rooters changed sides and the victory of Mack's men could hardly have been received with more enthusiasm than if it hadbeen achieved at Shibe Park.

We are not very proud of our club officials, and there does not seem to be much reason for us to be proud of our players. Mack's men have showed up the Giants by their behaviour on the field. They have not confused aggressiveness with rowdyism. Noisy coach players and verbal assaults on opposing players they do not recognize as splendid leadership, and the spiking of basemen is never referred to by them as daring base running. That the championship should go out of New York, as seems likely, is a splendid thing. It is some consolation to lovers of sport to know that the baseball style of play known as the McGraw system is not as successful as it is offensive."

ANOTHER CLASSY ENTRY FOR EXAMINER RACE

The manner in which the entries continue to come in for the Examiner Senior and Junior races on Thanksgiving Day indicate that the events this year will be better entested than ever before. Among the junior entrants within the past couple of days is Cecil Armstrong of the Y. M. C. A. This youngster carried off third prize last year and as he is in better shape, and has the advantage of being a year older, should be a contender all the way. Frank Leahy, last year's winner, is expected to face the starter again on the holiday and other likely youngsters are coming to the front. With the establishing of a minimum age limit the junior field will be composed of a squad of real runners, and should make the best contest in the history of the junior race. As regards the senior the prospects for a bitter struggle increase as the day of the race approaches. There is no doubt that the runner who beats Albert Smoke to the tape will be stepping some, if the Indian is as good as he was last year. However, he will have opposition all along the line.

The prizes for the two events will be announced in all probability, tomorrow, and will be placed on exhibition in a day or two.

WEST END LINE-UP FOR THE GAME AT TORONTO

Rathburn, the ex-McGill quarter, filled in that position on the West End team last night, and worked in well. He will be used in the game to-morrow against Central Y. M. C. A. and should be a valuable addition to the team. The boys have the greatest confidence of not only turning the tables, as regards to victory, but think also that they can get enough points to win the round. At any rate the score will be much closer than last Saturday.

The following men are asked to be at the C. P. R. Station Saturday morning at 7.40, where they will depart in a private car:

Minorgan, Richardson, Bearss, Hill Eccelstone, Thompson, Turner, Davidson, Hogan, Langley, Gilbert, Denison, Rathburn, Kirn, Copping, Elliott, Webb.

Any person wishing to take advantage of the club rate, which is $2.40, can secure tickets at the depot. Corkery, Johnston and Craig, who played last Saturday, were unable to get away for to-morrow's game.

THE VARSITY RUGBY TEAM PASSED THROUGH TO-DAY

The Varsity Rugby Club, leaders in the Intercollegiate Union and strong favourites for the Dominion honours, again this season, passed through Peterborough on the 11.35 (C.P.R.) express, this morning, en route for Ottawa, where they play Ottawa College to-morrow. The Collegians, as they tumbled out of their private car here, in their vari-coloured sweaters, were a likely looking lot, light, but giving the impression of speed, and cleverness. Gordon Campbell, the Peterborough boy, who is playing a sensational game at quarter back, for Varsity, was with the squad, and was met at the station by his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Peter Campbell.

The Examiner had a few moments' conversation with Peterborough's representative on the team, and also with Captain Jack Maynard, and Mr. Mulqueen, manager of the team. They expressed themselves as confident of taking Ottawa's measure to-morrow, although Captain Maynard will likely be out of the game on account of an injured ankle. The players are delighted by the return to College of Jeff. Taylor, who will play middle wing to-mrrow and is expected to be a host of strength to the line.

Messrs. Campbell, Maynard and Mulqueen will be the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell on Sunday.

It is interesting to note that three or probably four, Peterborough boys will be in to-morrow's game at Ottawa: Campbell, with Varsity; and Dick Sheehy, Vernie Hayes and possibly Frank Hefferman, with Ottawa. The latter has been out of the game with injuries and may not be ready to play to-morrow.

the side heard me say this, he immediately dived under water and, I suppose, swam ashore, for I never saw him again. The one I had hit with the revolver was only temporarily knocked out, and he now scrambled up on his knees and begged for mercy, saying that he had nothing to do with trying to rob me. The man in the low gased at me sullenly and said nothing. When I looked at this fellow's face I recognized him immediately. He was the man who had rowed the agent and myself ashore, and on whose back the former had thrown the lighted match. I was now certain where the robbers had got their information from.

Sitting down in the stern, I told the two remaining ruffians to take up their oars again and pull as hard as they could, promising to shoot them if they as much as looked at me or made the slightest attempt to stop.

Inside of a few minutes the boat shot under the gangway of the City of Calcutta, and I made ready to climb on to the ladder. Then it suddenly occurred to me that I was letting these would-be murderers off far too easily. So, instead of jumping on to the ladder, I picked up an oar and belabored the two Arabs until they leaped into the water. Next, taking out my revolver again, I shot two holes in the bottom of their boat, so as to give them something to worry about on their way back to the beach. This done, I stepped on to the ladder, pushed the boat clear of the ship with my foot, and climbed on board, thanking my lucky stars that I had made good my escape.

FUNERAL TO-DAY

The funeral of the late Mr. T. E. Fitzgerald took place this afternoon from the family residence, 460 Charlotte street, and was largely attended. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. The service, which was very impressive, was held in the house at 2.30, Rev. Jas. Rollins officiating. A large number of friends and acquaintances were present at the graveside to pay their last respects to one whose many estimable qualities endeared him to all. The pall-bearers were: Drs. Caldwell and Marshall, and Messrs. Ross, A. K. Kidd, Alex. Gillespie and Dickson Best.

Last Rail Is Laid

The last rail on the Canadian Pacific Railway's new grain route, from Victoria Harbour to Bethany, was laid yesterday morning. Word to that effect was received at the local headquarters of the C. P. R. this afternoon and as soon as the ballasting has been completed the line will be ready for regular traffic. This should not take more than a couple of months at the most, as the greater part of the ballasting is already finished. What balasting that will have to be done before the line is ready for traffic is in the vicinity of Lindsay and Bethany. At Lindsay, where the biggest bridge of the line is being finished the builders have a fair staff of men at work and it is expected to be completed in a very short time. There are several other bridges on the line, but the only one of importance is where the line crosses from Lakes Simcoe to Couchiching. Here there is a 160 foot span swing bridge. The completion of this line by the Canadian Pacific is of singular importance. It will have to play an important part in the transportation of the grain crops of the West to Montreal and the east. The grain, at present, is brought from Fort William and Port Arthur, either all the way by the great Lakes, via Owen Sound and Toronto. When this new line is operated a new alternate route will be offered. The grain can be forwarded from the head of the lakes by steamer to Victoria Harbour on the Georgian Bay, the western terminus of the line, and from there by rail to Montreal. The advantages of the new route are manifold. First of all it will cut down the time consumed in shipping the grain from the head of the lakes by many hours. Compared with the Owen Sound-Toronto it means a saving in haul of nearly one hundred miles, and it is obviously much shorter than the all water route; another advantage is that it is a line with practically no grades, a feature that will tend to make the running of trains much easier. Outside of its usefulness as a grain line the new branch will have considerable value as a passenger line. It will allow the C. P. R. to tap a country which they have not heretofore entered and it will give good transportation facilities to a large farming populace. The new line starts from the docks at Victoria Harbour and crosses the Toronto-Sudbury line of the C. P. R. 13 miles out, at Bethany, fourteen miles west of Peterborough it forms a junction with the main Toronto-Montreal line of the C. P. R. The Toronto Construction Company have had the work of building the road. It is 88 miles from Victoria Harbour to Bethany, and 85 pound rails have been laid. In connection with the new line, the C. P. R. have spent huge sums of money in equipping Victoria Harbour as the western terminus of the line. Two wharfs, 3,600 feet long, and 60 feet wide, have been built on either side of the harbour, and these are separated by a water way 600 feet wide, giving ample room for the berthing of a dozen large lake boats at the same time. There have also been built a large storage elevator, a boiler house, two 1000-feet freight and flour sheds, boarding houses, cottages, etc. The elevator is one of the largest in Canada; it has a storage capacity at present of two million bushels of grain but it is so constructed that it can, in future, be enlarged to a capacity of ten million bushels.

ONE DIFFICULTY

From Farm and Dairy.

"One of the difficulties we have as butter buyers is to get a carload of butter evenly salted," said Mr. J. B. Muir, of Ingersoll, at a meeting of creamery men from various points in Western Ontario at Guelph. "The makers will claim that they all use the same percentage of salt, but the difference of the salty flavor in the butter product is wide, although we notice that the salting of butter from the same creamery is uniform." These statements of Mr. Muir's led to an instructive discussion on the salting of butter, and we here reproduce some of the ideas of the creamery men present for Farm and Dairy readers to compare with their own methods:

"We estimate how many pounds of butter we will make when the cream is put in the churn. We know the weight of the cream and the percentage of fat. From this we calculate the amount of salt required. The size of the granules and the time allowed to drain affects the salt content of butter. When butter is not well drained there may be enough water left in the churn to wash a lot of salt out of the butter and uniform salting cannot result."—Jas. McFeeters, Grey Co., Int.

"Another feature other than the quantity of salt that we butter makers should pay attention to is the quality of the salt. Some of my salted butter at Toronto last year scored 98 and 96 per cent., while non-salted butter scored 90. The difference was due to bad flavored salt."—R. M. Player, Bruce Co., Ont.

The Lamp That Saves The Eyes

Children naturally never think of possible strain on their eyesight when poring over a fascinating book.

It is up to you to see they do not ruin their young eyes these long evenings by reading under a poor light.

The Rayo Lamp is an insurance against eye troubles, alike for young and old.

The Rayo is a low-priced lamp, but it is constructed on the soundest scientific principles, and there is not a better lamp made at any price.

It is easy on the eye because its light is so soft and white and widely diffused. And a Rayo Lamp never flickers.

Easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and replish. Solid brass throughout, with handsome nickel finish; also in many other styles and finishes.

Ask your dealer to show you his line of Rayo lamps; or write for descriptive circular to any agency of

IN GENERAL

Plan your work and work your plan.

To build up the future, Heaven shatters the past.

Probabilities. — Light, variable, winds; cloudy. Saturday, cooler.

Storage.—A limited amount of first-class storage space. Apply Peterborough Harware Co., warehouse opposite C.P.R. station.

Houses to Rent.—We have desirable houses to rent, ranging from $7.00 per month up. M. Carton, C. J. Carroll, 372 Water street. Phone 822.

Dental Practice. — Dr. Middleton, 374½ George street, (over McWilliam's fur store) has taken over the practice of W. H. Manning, dentist.

Pictures Framed.—If you have any pictures to frame, try Kelsey Bros. the new framery, corner Charlotte and Aylmer streets. Best work, at low prices.

Fog Causes Delay.—The heavy fog prevailing this morning was instrumental in delaying the river traffic. The "Geneva," when loaded, had to wait until the fog lifted.

Painting and Decorating.—Painting paperhanging, graining, etc. All work quickly and neatly executed. Country work specially attended to. —Arthur Guppy, 558 Water street.

Special Meeting.—A special meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. will be held to-morrow (Saturday) evening at 8 o'clock. A full attendance is requested.

Funeral To-morrow.—The funeral of the late Mr. John Sawers will take place at 2.30 o'clock to-morrow, from the late residence of the deceased London street, to the Little Lake cemetery.

Pupils, Attention!—Miss Geraldine King wishes to announce that she is prepared to receive pupils in vocal and instrumental music, commencing September 1st, 1911, at 290 Charlotte street. Both phones 134.

Notice.—The officers and members of Court Little John, C.O.F., No. 92 will meet this evening at 8 o'clock at lodge room, Hunter street, to make arrangements for Bro. John Sawyers funeral. Bros. Stewart, Chief Ranger.

Live the truth as absolutely in your thoughts, words and deeds that you need do no more than deny a statement to be believed. That is the best possible revenge for your lying enemies.

The kindly plans devised for others good, so seldom guessed, so seldom understood. The quiet, steadfast love that strove to will some wanderers from the woeful ways of sin. These are not lost.

Small kindnesses, small courtesies, small considerations, habitually practised in our social intercourse, give a greater charm to the character than the display of great talents and accomplishments.

Police Court.—Edmond Parks, who was remanded for a week for being drunk, a week ago, was discharged in the Police Court this morning. Francis McGuire, who has spent the last six months in gaol, came to the Chief and requested to be put back for another six months.

Potatoes For Sale.—I have for sale, two carloads of fine, dry potatoes, from the sandy hills of Manvers, in 90 bag lots, $1.25 per bag, delivered. Best and cheapest in the city. Telephone or call on E. H. Mann. Phone 249, 166 Dublin street.

Music and Languages Taught.—Prof. D. Schlochow, late of Toronto and London, is prepared to take pupils in German, French and Music. For full particulars, apply at his Studio, The J. M. Green Music Co., Ltd., Greene Music Building, Charlotte street. Phone 595.

Nothing is sweeter than love, nothing stronger, nothing higher, nothing broader, nothing tenderer, nothing better, either in heaven or earth, because love is born of God, and rising above all created things can find its rest in Him alone.

No. 3 Troop.—The boys of the 3rd Troop of Boy Scouts will take notice that there will be a meeting at 7.30 sharp at the Armouries to-night. Do not forget the Troop fund. It is not necessary to wear uniforms. There will also be a practise of the Third Troop Bugle Band.—C. Richardson, Asst. Scout Master, 3 P. T.

An Effective Ad.—In Tuesday's issue of the Examiner an ad. appeared for a parcel which had been lost on the Ennismore Road. It was marked from L. P. L. Co., London, to James Grady, Peterborough. The effectiveness of the ad. occasioned the parcel to be returned to its rightful owner early on Wednesday morning.

Finest Grapes This Season.—Just unloaded, car of Red and Black Rogers Grapes, finest stock in grapes we have had this season. Also in stock. Sweet Potatoes, Cranberries, Seal-shipt Oysters in bulk and tin, Finnan Haddie, Salmon Trout and full line of vegetables. W. J. OKE, 376 George street. Both phones, 18 and 19.

Snaps in Groceries.—The attention of housekeepers in the western part of the city especially, are directed to the advertisement of Dawson Bros., grocers, *near corner of Park and Mac*donald streets, which appears in this issue. This young firm are introducing attractive week-end specials, which are well worth watching for.

New Music Studio.—At the James M. Greene Music Co., Limited, 185 and 187 Charlotte street, 'Phone 595 Herbert C. Treneer, A. T. C. M., Organist and Choir Master of St. Andrew's Church, will receive pupils for piano and theory. Pupils prepared for College or Conservatory examinations, if desired. A thorough and technical training guaranteed with special attention to interpretation. For terms, etc., apply to address mentioned above.

Flour.—You cannot make bread unless you get the right flour. James R. Bell represents the leading Flour Mills in Canada—Reindeer, Quaker, Mikado, Pride of the West, etc. Potatoes are still $1.35 per bag; onions, 35c per peck; excellent cooking and eating apples, 20c and 25c per peck.—James R. Bell, 161 Hunter street; 'phone 455; branch store, 43 Hunter street, East City.

Did You Ever Think?—That when you attempt to get the dirt out of your carpets by sweeping, that you only drive it down into the pile to become alive with vermin, and therefore make your house very unsanitary. The modern way of cleaning is to use the Vacuum Cleaner system. The Automatic Hand and Electric Vacuum Cleaner, we sell, is the best, by test. Let us explain the superiority of the double-tank screening system over the ordinary machine. Electric, $110; Hand, $25.00, with complete set of tools; both fully guaranteed. To rent by the day at moderate prices.—D. C. Lamont, 301 George street; telephone 921.

Patronize Home Industry.—There is no need of sending to Toronto, or elsewhere, for showcases, or store-fixtures of any kind. Patronize the Peterborough Showcase Co., a well-equipped factory, for turning out large contracts, as well as small ones. The material and workmanship is of the best. Prices are right, and terms to suit all people. Any one intending to equip their stores with showcases, wallcases, etc., for the coming Christmas trade, by sending their order to the factory by the 30th of September, will be allowed a discount of 10 per cent. on orders exceeding $75.—W. THEOBALD, Manager; Factory, 709 Water street. 'Phone 1158.

A LUMBERMAN'S OPINION

"I was troubled with palpitation of the heart and sleeplessness," writes Mr. Wm. Mills, Ont., "and used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with very great benefit, as my whole system was strengthened and built up." Dr. Chase's Nerve Food forms new, rich blood and restores the feeble wasted nerve cells.

EDMONTON PROPERTY

A few days ago the Examiner made mention of the fact that Mr. H. P. Kenedy had purchased a block of property in Edmonton and would place a portion of it on the market in Eastern Canada, Mr. Kennedy retaining some of the lots, believing the property to be excellent value, and showing unprecedented promise. Mr. Kennedy stated to an Examiner representative to-day that lots may now be purchased and that already a number have been disposed of. More information has arrived from Edmonton. It is shown that those who get in on this property have one of the best propositions that has yet been placed before the investing public of the East. Mr. Galbraith will be in the city from Toronto for a few days and give any information regarding the lots that may be desired to any one who will call at the Independent Real Estate Office, 340 George St., or Telephone No. 133. The Examiner will contain fuller particulars next week of this promising investment opportunity.

MILLINERY

The new fashions in millinery are truly legion, so numerous are they, but while shown in a bewildering profusion of styles, yet they all revolve around one central standard design.

But within that compass there is great scope for the artist to arrange for your particular figure and face the hat that lends a completeness and harmony to your costume.

Our Milliner is an artist and never fails to leave the impress of her skill upon all her work.

Hundreds of ladies compliment her.

Come and have a talk with her about your Millinery. It will be of great interest to you.

Please remember that while we give you benefit of the highest millinery skill, you pay us no more than you do for the ordinary hat.

Night Classes

Many ambitious young people are taking advantage of the splendid opportunity to improve their education by attending the night classes at the Peterboro Business College. These classes are conducted on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights, and students receive instruction in any one or all the subjects of the comercial or stenographic course. By this method, young people may learn while they earn—and thereby increase their salaries and better their positions without losing time from their work. You may enter any time but it will be to your advantage to enter now. The cost is small, while the benefit to be derived therefrom is inestimable.

The business world is full of opportunities, but the best positions are open only to those who are competent to fill them. By attending Night School at the Peterboro Business College, you may become competent.

KIT'S COLUMN

Our new governor-general, H.R.H. the Duke of Connaught, is the most beloved member of Britain's royal house in Ireland. You may say that his name or title has something to do with it. Probably, in the beginning. Ireland is as susceptible to flattery, I suppose, as any other nation, and Queen Victoria called her favorite son after Ireland's poorest province—poor, but a proud province for all that. Anyway, Ireland claimed her prince. The writer was present at a manifestation of Irish loyalty towards the duke in Dublin in 1907 when the Roman arch to the Irish Fusiliers who went down fighting for the Flag in the Boer war was opened in Stephen's Green. I saw more Jacks waving that day than on the occasion of the Duke of York's visit just after the Queen's jubilee. The whole town turned out (it doesn't always for royalty) and the cheering was honest. Mary, the chambermaid, was out in "the Green" in her little cap and apron alongside her mistress or the next fine lady, and Mary was cheering, with the old rebel fla—lone harp on green field—in one hand and the flag the Fusiliers had shed their blood for in the other. And Mary's remarks I remember, for we rubbed shoulders in the crowd.

"'Tis he that's the fine soldierly man. (God bless him!" cried Mary as the duke rode by; "an' he's that handsome, wid his fine gray mustache an' sthrait as a pike." Ah, Mary, you're like the rest of the women. 'Tis "the fine man that's in it" that takes our fancy first. And the soldier! How Bridget and Mary and their betters love the red coats! Every evening you will meet her with her shy bright eyes and rosy dewy cheeks, and a gap where a front tooth ought to be, hanging on the arm of her soldier. For Mary is careless about her teeth. They last till they go, and shure they're gone then entirely, glory be to God! And Mary's heart is untroubled. But the prince: they don't think of him in Ireland as a duke; they throw up their hats and sang St. Patrick's day in the morning for him as he passed, and I think the handsome, soldierly man knew they cared about him and counted him as their own—a sort of Irish prince that belonged to sad Connaught and her bogs. And down in Galway, in the heart of the province, the Galway Rangers—our crack regiment, if you please—were celebrating the day. And now we have Connaught in Canada, and a great wave of affection will rise to meet him from many an exiled Irish heart that warms to the name. He will be well loved here, you may depend on it. We have had many a fine governor at Ottawa since the time of the Dufferins, but is Dufferin forgotten? And they say of the prince that he has the warm generous heart and the kindly thought and word always, like Dufferin. And this is better for us than the pomp and grandeur and importance that will attach to royalty in Canada—the warm, generous heart and the kindly word always, for these things are what humanity everywhere is asking and looking for, and without them all the rest is hollow. So it's Cead mille failthe, and welcome, and God bless you, sir, and may your stay be long with us.

An outcry for the return of the petticoat with all its frills and fancies is clamoring at the doors of La Mode. The cambric and muslin and lace industries are beating upon the gates. Tarare, near Lyons, where these things are made, is shouting no "Tara-ra-boom-de-ay," but is closing up its cambric shops and singing funeral dirges. A frantic appeal is being made to the French government. M. Couyba, the minister of commerce, is being implored to order the ladies to resume their petticoats. Poor man, he throws out hands and shrugs shoulders in despair. What can he do to induce madame to see the impropriety of the narrow skirt and the suggestive charm of the bit of lace showing in billowy flounces just under the hem of the skirt? Madame laughs at him over her shoulder and eliminates another breadth from her gown. It takes just four times less material to make a gown than it did a few years ago, but though the petticoat has dwindled to a mere sheath of thin satin or messaline, the price of the gown has soared. This is a mathematical puzzle not yet solved. Tarare is doomed. The only woman who rejoice in petticoats are the Dutch and the Irish peasant. Bedelia going to mass at the church on the cross-roads every Sunday still wears her wealth of petticoats, each a bit shorter than the one beneath it, to show how many she has. Thus, but a year ago I beheld her. First there was the petticoat of Galway flannel—white, wide and deeply hemmed; and over it—by a hem the shorter—the petticoat of Galway flannel dyed a deep muddered; and over it the petticoat of Galway flannel dyed a deep blue; and over it the petticoat of Galway flannel tufted and shortest of all—and over that—peace, my pen! Bedelia has forgotten her petticoats as in an ecstasy of joy she sits on the wayside grass and takes off the boots that "hurted" her all the way to the chapel. Now can she pray in peace.

Premier Borden and his charming lady stand in a good way to be overloaded with fulsome flattery. Were one to believe all one reads in the press about our new premier one would find an angel—not what the country wants: a sane, level-headed, practical, honest man. Fortunately, Mr. Borden is that, and not an angel incarnate. Naturally, such writings cannot be agreeable to Mr. Borden or his wife, and they are not likely to have their heads turned by them. Why should not Mr. Borden have gone to visit his mother before and above everything when his life was crowned with honor? Was there anything wonderful about it that it should have been related with "bated, breathless" pen, so to speak? It was the most natural thing in the world for a man to do, and we would have thought little of any man who in the same case would not have done the same thing. We are now in grave danger of losing our dignity in the sloppy nonsense that of late it has been the fancy to print about prominent persons and rich persons. There used to be less snobbery in Canada and more sense. Are we going to emulate the anobdom and title worship of our friends to the south of us now that we have a royal personage for governor-general? Let us hope not. Let us hope that Canada will remain fine and sane and wholesome always.

Miss Currie Love's illustrated article in Canada Monthly on Women of the West—reproduced in the Calgary News-Telegram—reveals the fact that not only youth and money and enterprise are going west—but beauty also. Calgary—that wonder-city of "the last west," has apparently more than her share of beautiful women. Moreover our western women are always smartly gowned and excellently turned out. Indeed I shall not soon forget how plain and dowdy I felt when last Calgary was visited. It is a sparkling place where they brew the essence of hope and gladness, and it is growing and improving all the time. I don't think I would ask more of the gods that rule our fate than to be young and pretty, and living in Calgary. It is a far more preferable place to live in—believe me—than Paris.

Magistrate Denison, of Toronto, voiced the grievance of many when he declaimed against the speed at which the motor-cycle is run. These machines fly through the streets of every town at a rate which makes the timid wayfarer tremble. They are allowed to navigate at any speed they like while the police are busy noting the automobilists. To come in contact with one of these racing cycles would mean certain death. Only a few days ago I saw a motor-cyclist literally shave a woman's skirts as he passed. He carried a triumphant rag of her gown with him as a banner. She was an old body who had been trembling for minutes at the edge of a crossing in the busy part of the town, and at last she went forth only to meet the doom of her dress. Fortunately the fabric gave easily, and did not pull its owner with it. I do not know whether any regulations are laid down or not regarding the speed of motor-cycles, but assuredly you will have a dreadful accident one day in your town if no attention is paid to this matter.

And while touching on the motor subject, how does "Mora" strike you as a new name for a brand of motor car? All the other titles seem to be done to death. And, by the way, here is a new reading of an old song: "La Donna e Automobile."

A Dublin woman who had married her fourth husband was tried for bigamy the other day because her third husband was alive at the time. But she proved that her first husband, whom she had legal grounds for supposing to be dead when she married the second, was really alive when she married the third, making that union invalid, and the marriage of the fourth valid.

Showing that the maxim that "two wrongs do not make a right" does not apply to law.

Teetotallers and anti-tobacconists should take note of the case across seas of Mrs. Mary O'Mara (Italian, of course), who celebrated her birthday on the first of this month. This happy degenerate confessed to liking "a drop of the hard sup now an' thin" and "a shaugh of the pipe." When she is older she may, of course, learn how wrong all this is. She is only a hundred and three now.

An Irishman wanted to telegraph to his mother. They told him the message would cost 4s 6d, of which 1s 6d would be for the telegram and the rest for carrying the message from the post-office. Poor Patrick had only one and six, but "shure sind the message," sez he, "an' I'll write an' tell me mother to call for it." And it was another Irishman—from near where I was born—who, wishing to break some bad news to his people, wrote to say he sent them a telegram with the evil news, and he would like to prepare them with a letter before it came. Both stories of which I was reminded to-day when rummaging through a desk drawer I came on a yellow telegraph envelope marked "Mother, Toronto." It was sent by an Irish boy, and, what's more, it found me.

THE FAMILY HEARTH

The Laundry Problem.

As with the cleaning problem, the laundry work is best helped by prevention, and this is really easier than it sounds. Many housekeepers think the only way to lessen the washing and ironing is to wear the clothes a little longer, and therefore make them dirtier and harder to wash, but this is not the solution found by hundreds of thousands of country women. They know a better plan and have had it in operation for some time, and yet their families and their homes are clean and well ordered, while they, themselves, are not overworked.

The best plan is never to buy an article for household use or for personal wear without knowing what it will do to the laundry work of the home. For example, it is folly for the country housewife to wear white or light coloured wrappers about her work unless she wants to make a slave of herself on washing and ironing day, and yet she need not appear daily about her home in dirty, dark, unbecoming garments. One of the best illustrations of this was seen in our neighbourhood lately when two women bought table linen, one choosing a thin, flimsy quality at a low price, and the other taking firm, substantial goods at a reasonable price. The thin linen did not look well to start with, it was in the wash twice as often as the firm piece, and it wore out when the other hardly showed a bit of wear, beside being harder to iron. True, it was so thin it was easier washed; but that is small consolation to the woman who has thrown away her money for poor goods. The same might be said of all household supplies, for good, substantial towels, linens and bedding will outwear cheap, thin goods and require less washing and ironing.

When it comes to under wear, the saving in labor is very great, where planning and intelligence are the order of the home. Thin outing flannel night gowns, too, worn for winter, make ideal summer gowns for the entire family and require no ironing at all, while the heavy ones used for winter require only shaking out and drying, or if they are ironed require but a few minutes for the task. Gauze vests, drawers and corset covers may be worn by the women, and, of course, men's undergarments are from the factory. A very good quality of durable gauze may be purchased at reasonable rates; these garments require no ironing, beside being much easier to wash than muslin or cambric, and if they are bought at bargen sales out of season they can be had for a mere song. With the underwear and night gowns easily washed and not ironed, one of the largest items of the laundry work is eliminated.

A great many women are investing in a large number of "flat" pieces of household goods, as they are classed at the laundries, and are sending two or three bundles each summer to the steam laundries to relieve themselves of the washing and ironing at the busy season. The sheets, towels, pillow slips, table cloths, stand covers and all straight pieces come back clean and beautifully ironed, and thus the best kind of help is obtained. The rates are moderate, and the economy of having a large quantity appeals to many a thrifty housekeeper who knows tht any kind of clothes will wear longer if not used constantly.

Then, too, the fact that many farmers insist on married hired men for their helpers is a great factor in lessening not only the laundry work, but everything else on the farm. One of the greatest bugbears of the heated season in country homes is the fact that some stranger must have his clothes washed and ironed with the family garments. Often a man little better than a tramp must be taken in an emergency whose clothes and bedding really require a separate washing, because the careful housewife does not want to risk possible contagion.

Another thing that has helped lessen the laundry work to a great extent is that many farmers begin to see the wisdom of having old garments for dirty work, and of saving their working clothes in every way. In many homes old shirts, old blouses and old trousers are saved for working with fertilizers, sheep shearing and kindred tasks. If the clothes are too far gone for further use, they are burned, but if not, they are hung away for future tasks. Women are also "saving" their garments, wearing large aprons to protect their trim house dresses, and using sleeve protectors for specially nice waists. All materials for working clothes are of the kind that wash well and wear well, never the flimsy calicoes and lawns that allure the careless shopper. Wrappers are being discarded for the two-piece cotton gowns or the dark skirt and belted dressing jacket which is so deservedly popular just now.

If a woman wants to save herself washing and ironing, there are innumerable ways of managing without going dirty. Silk shirt waists for wear under jackets, instead of thin white ones, thin silk jackets made of discarded waists to protect the best waists under jackets, and many other things, save on the laundry work. Black petticoats that shed the dust instead of white ones, bloomers for the little folks to save the clean undergarments, straight curtains instead of ruffled ones, linen instead of cotton dish towels, and hosts of other devices might be mentioned, but the bright woman will think many of them out for herself once she gets started. One thing should never be done to economize work, and that is the substitution of the red table cloth for the white one, or the white oil cloth not save time or labour, and it does not save time or labour, and it does work havoc with the table manners and self-respect of the entire family. Stick to the white cloth through thick and thin, and there will still be plenty of ways for saving washing and ironing that will give you time for plenty of clean garments and a dainty table, and bring you joy and satisfaction beside, without discarding the daintiness of the place around which your family gathers three times each day.

Things Worth Knowing.

Aluminum pots and pans that have become dull, or blackened with use, can be cleaned by being well rubbed with a cloth dipped in lemon juice.

If a thick cloth, or piece of bath towelling, folded once or twice, is placed at the bottom of the pan in which delicate china or glass is to be washed, the danger of chipping will be lessened, or of scratches in the case of silver.

A thick slice of peeled lemon dropped into the water in which white clothes are boiled and left there while the clothes remain, will take out any stains from the garments, and leave them very white.

The easiest way to clean windows is to use a bowl of hot water and a chamois leather. Dip the chamois in the water, slightly wring it, and wipe over the pane. It does not need a soft duster, as it dries with a beautiful polish.

Many women to protect their hands use chamois mittens when sweeping and performing tasks where gloves will not interfere. The mittens are easily made and can be washed in a basin of warm water to which is added a teaspoonful of olive oil.

Olive Oil.

It has long been observed that those who treat olive oil as a common article of food and use it as such are generally stronger and healthier than those who do not. We have still to learn that there are many ways of using the oil besides in salads. It may be used with good effect as a substitute for butter, in compounding the ordinary brown or white sauce. A teaspoonful of oil added, just before taking up, to every quart of split-pea, bean, potato or other soup, lacking fat, greatly increases its richness as well as its flavor. A child soon learns to like the taste of olive oil on bread in place of butter, while any kind of cold meat, that is to be re-cooked, is improved by having a little oil poured over it at least half an hour before heating.

The Best We Seek.

If all the skies were sunshine,
Our faces would be fain
To feel once more upon them
The cooling plash of rain.

If all the world were music,
Our hearts would often long
For one sweet strain of silence
To break the endless song.

If life were always merry,
Our souls would seek relief,
And rest from weary laughter
In the quiet arms of grief.
—Henry Van Dyke.

Citron Preserves.

For this delicious preserve select sound fruit, slice in one-half inch sections and slip out the seeds with a pointed knife. By holding the slice up to the light every seed can readily be discerned. Pare off the rind, then cut each slice across both ways, making dice or oblong shaped pieces of convenient size, then weigh the whole; to every pound of citron allow one-half pound of loaf sugar; put the citron on to cook tender by itself, adding just enough water to allow the whole to cook evenly. It requires long, slow, steady cooking and should, when done, be a clear and beautiful amber. Drain through a colander and place the weighed sugar in the kettle, adding enough water to wet it through and well dissolve it. Some simply use the strained water from the citron for this, as it contains the citron flavor, but the pure sugar syrup makes a clearer preserve. Let the syrup boil till very clear, skim, and before putting in the citron again, add to the syrup two large lemons, sliced and freed from seeds, also a small piece of ginger-root to give it a fine flavor; then put in the citron and let all cook steadily.

Cream Cake.

Beat 2 eggs in a teacup and add several tablespoonfuls of cream or rich milk to fill the cup to the brim. Blend this by beating with 1 cupful sugar, 1 cup of flour, 1 heaping teaspoonful of baking powder, or 1-2 teaspoonful of soda and 1 teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Flavour with lemon and bake in a moderately hot oven.

If you have an idea that you are too good for a picked up dinner, remain a bachelor.

A trade is a good thing to have; it is better than gold—brings a larger premium. But to make a premium, the trade must be perfect—no silver plated affair. Determine in your mind to be a good workman, or let the job out. Learning a trade is different from eating mush and milk—mechanical education does not slip down without chewing. Never slight your work, never. Every job you do is a sign. Poor signs are against success.

The matron who appears before the members of the family in a shabby, soiled wrapper and makes the excuse, if indeed she takes the trouble to make one at all, that "it is so much more comfortable," has little idea of the possible consequences of such a course. Could she but realise that her dress is an evil example to her daughters, and productive of consequences that will reach far beyond her own span of life; that her husband and sons cannot fail to draw comparisons between her dress and that of the ladies they meet in other homes, and that these comparisons cannot fail to decrease their respect for her, she might be induced to give more attention to her personal appearance.

Mothers sometimes say when a child shows a vile temper and shrieks a good deal, that it would endanger his life to punish him; perhaps so, but you still more endanger his future if you don't punish him. Many a gallows tragedy had its beginnings on the mother's lap. We wish we could write it in imperishable, glowing letters on the walls of every home—obedience, obedience, obedience! Obedience to law—to household law; to parental authority; unquestioning, instant, exact obedience. Obedience in the family, obedience in the school! Wherever, from the beginning, from

WHY?

The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boom at this season of the year. Chicago, Ill.—"I suffered from a female weakness and stomach trouble, and I went to the store to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but the clerk did not want to let me have it—he said it was no good and wanted me to try something else, but knowing all about it I insisted and finally got it, and I am so glad I did, for it has cured me.

"I know of so many cases where women have been cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I can say to every suffering woman if that medicine does not help her, there is nothing that will."—Mrs. JANETZKI, 2026 Arch St., Chicago, Ill.

This is the age of substitution, and women who want a cure should insist upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound just as this woman did, and not accept something else on which the druggist can make a little more profit.

Women who are passing through this critical period or who are suffering from any of those distressing ills peculiar to their sex should not lose sight of the fact that for thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which is made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills. In almost every community you will find women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

It was only as the Laminian rounded the eastern coast of Cuba that McKinnon detected any signs of unusual interest in the gun-runner's actions. He caught sight of him at the rail, shadowed by one of the lifeboats, scanning the shore-line through his binoculars. He could see him there for an hour or more, studying the long, grayish-yellow littoral land-shelf and the lonely and misty blue hills beyond it. He stood there, expectantly, as though in search for some signal which was not to be found. Then he fell to walking the deck, impatiently, between the engine-room skylights and the lifeboats. McKinnon, as he watched him striding back and forth, with a touch of exasperation out of keeping with his customarily ponderous movements, could see that a little of the colour had gone from his pendulous cheeks ,and that his deep-set eyes were more haggard and puffy than usual.

But nothing came to the quiet and sun-steeped ship to relieve McKinnon's accruing sense of anxiety. His coherer wooed no response from the silence about him; his aerials intercepted no answering message. More than once he felt tempted to confront his impassive and quiescent opponent, if for nothing more than to end the strain, to knock the chip off his shoulder and bring things to an issue.

But Ganley gave no opening. And again there crept through the younger man, as the second long and sultry day ended in a black and star-strewn evening, the feeling that he was friendless and alone, far from his own kind. With the coming of the calm and spacious tropical night there came to him a more compelling sense of his isolation. More keenly than ever he felt the barrier that his own dissimulation had built up between himself and Alicia Boynton. There was a barb of mockery, he felt, in the very manner in which he had been compelled to relinquish a friendship that had promised to mean so much to him. He tried to tell himself that a man must fight alone, in warfare such as that he was facing, that he must learn to accept his loneliness as a natural part of the game.

Then, of a sudden, his isolation seemed a thing of the past. For, looking up as he sat crouched before his tuner, he saw a figure standing at his open door. And it did not take a second glance to show him that this figure was the figure of the woman of whom he had been thinking. The momept he caught sight of her, in her low-throated gown of white linen, he felt the subjugating influence of her presence. His heart began to beat faster ,even before she stepped across his coppered door-sill. He felt grateful for her companionship, for her mere presence there. He noticed the restlessness of her brooding eyes as she sank into the broken-armed steamer-chair that he placed for her. He wondered just where the thread of their old intercourse would be taken up again.

"Are you in communication with anything?" she asked, with an anxious glance at his apparatus. Her tone was tentative and non-committal; it left everything still unanswered.

"No," he said.

"You can't get anything?"

"Nothing whatever,' 'he answered, "though I've been calling regularlf twice an hour."

"And not a message in two days?" she asked.

"Yesterday afternoon I picked up a few words from an Atlas liner, bound north. She seemed to be reporting distances. But I couldn't get enough power; my coils weren't strong enough to reach her."

The girl rose to her feet, and crossed the cabin and stood studying the faded map of the Caribbean on the closet door.

"But aren't there chances of still getting in communication?" she asked. "There are so many ships, nowadays, that carry wireless."

McKinnon rose and stood beside her, regarding the map.

"Yes, there are hundreds and hundreds of ships, but, on the other hand, there is so much ocean, so much distance to swallow them up," he explained, indeterminately feeling that the longer he could hold her there the more firmly the tie of their old companionship would be re-established. "Look at this map, for instance, with all these islands that seem so terribly close. In the Bahamas alone there are three dozen good-sized islands, and over six hundred bays, and nearly twenty-five hundred rocks of one kind or another. You'd imagine, to look at them on the map here, that you'd hardly get a ship through without bumping into one of them. But when you're down here actually cruising among them, going days without a glimpse of land, you realize how far apart they actually lie. And it's the same with ships. It's possible we may not get another call all the way across the Caribbean."

"That means the Princeton won't be at Puerto Locombia?"

"Not unless I can pick her up."

"Then it's hopeless!"

"I can't say the case is hopeless," parried McKinnon. "But the chances are against us. All we can do is wait and be ready. Sometimes, on clear nights like these, we can make wireless carry a surprising distance."

"There must be somebody—some ship!" persisted the girl, as she sank into the chair again. He began to wish, as he watched her, that it lay in his power to bring some touch of contentment to those unhappy and anxious eyes before him.

"We'll surely overhaul the Princeton," he had the hardihood to assert, "if she's lying-to anywhere in the neighbourhood of Culebra."

"And if that fails?" asked the girl.

"I'm hoping we'll still be able to pick up Puerto Locombia itself," he ventured.

She shook her head meditatively, absent-mindedly.

"There is no station at Puerto Locombia."

"No station?" cried McKinnon.

"It will be dismantled—most likely it will be burned to the ground by this time. If De Brigard is fighting his way up to the capital, he would never leave a coast-station behind him, to be calling for help."

Here was news, indeed, thought McKinnon; and a sudden grateful look leaped into his eyes, as he realized the misstep from which she had saved him.

"Can you remember if there is a telegrahp line between Puerto Locombia and that capital?" he asked, after a moment of deep thought.

"There was one, once," answered the woman. "But their poles rotted down in less than a year—the heat and rain and insects of that climate, you know, will make a log as high as your table crumble away in one season. So the government brought in a shipload of street-car rails, I think they were second-hand rails from Kingston, and planted them for poles to carry the line up to Guariqui. But the natives kept cutting out sections of the wire for their own use, to mend saddle-girths and tie up hut-wattles, and it took three-quarters of Arturo's government troops to patrol the route and keep the line open. So they gave it up, at last, and fitted up the three wireless stations."

She did not join in McKinnon's laugh over the untimely end of Locombia's telegraph system.

"Where is the third station—the telegraph line between Puerto Locombia?" he asked.

"At Boracao—that's the biggest of the banana-shipping towns."

"It's hard to have to sit and wait for—for the inevitable this way," he said, with an assumption of cheeriness.

"Yes, it is hard," she said ,out of the silence that once more fell over them.

He felt, none the less, wordlessly grateful for her presence there, talking or silent. She seemd to bring a new and more vital atmosphere into his squalid little station. She seemed to throw a warm and transforming tint on everything about her, as he had seen a rose-tinted stage-light alter and enrich the canvas and tinsel of a Broadway playhouse.

He saw her take a long and troubled breath, look up at him ,and once more look away. The hum and whir of his electric fan was the only sound in the cabin .

"I don't think either of us has been quite honest with the other," she said, compelling herself to meet his puzzled gaze.

"I know—and I'm sorry," he replied, puzzling her again by his note of humanity .

"I've told you an untruth," she said at last, taking another deep breath.

"In what way?" asked McKinnon.

"I lied to you ,when Ganley and you were in my cabin. I can't let it go on. I can't endure the thought of this lie standing between us like—oh, like a quicksand that can never be crossed."

"But what is it?" asked the other.

She looked up at him again, very steadily and very bravely.

"I told you that my husband was dead," she answered in her low and constrained voice. "He is not dead."

"He is not dead?" echoed McKinnon.

"I said that he died of yellow fever. He took the fever and was ill with it. But he did not die. He was sentenced and sent to the Island of Malpanto, on the Pacific coast. The Locombian penal colony is there. He was sent there for life. He was dead to all the world—he was dead to me."

"Then he is dead to all——"

"Wait. I wanted to make sure of my freedom, to be foolishly sure of it. So I went North. Then I went to New Orleans, to my old home."

"But why?" he asked, as he noticed her hesitation.

"A felony, in Louisiana, is a cause for absolute divorce."

"You mean you were set free in your own country?"

"Yes, that is why I went to the United States. That is why I was there when the news of this revolution first reached me."

"And Ganley knows this?" McKinnon demanded.

"Ganley knows everything," she answered.

"And this is why you are so against him?"

She had to school herself into self-control bef re she could go on.

"I have a better reason for being against him. If he and his Liberal Party once acquire power, Ganley will bring Perralta back to Guariqui; he will commute his sentence. He will do this to strike at my brother Arturo."

McKinnon looked at her in amazed and silent comprehension. At last he seemed able to understand, disturbed as he was by the thought of so fragile a figure entangled in such brutal and rudimentary conflicts. The lack of motive for her presence in the same circle with Ganley, whether facing or following such a man, had been the underground yet actual cause of more than one of his wayward suspicions. But now he understood. And her confession, instead of shocking and disturbing him,brought into his softened eyes a sense of release, of more perfect understanding. What she had told him seemed to humanise her, to bring her into touch with the world of realities as he had met and known it. The last of his old-time fear of her, his hampering awe of her, had vanished.

"We are both against Ganley," he said ,as though speaking to himself.

"You are against Ganley?" she questioned.

"To the end of time!" he answered, with a solemnity that brought her great wondering eyes up to his. She noticed that he rose from nis chair and closed the cabin door.

"Why have you changed?"

"I have not changed!"

"Then what is it?"

"It's that I'm at last going to be half honest with you—that I can't continue not being honest with you! I am on this ship for the same purpose that you are here."

"To go to Locombia?"

"No—to defeat Ganley!"

"For what reason?"

"For your reason!"

"But for whom?"

"For the Minister of War of the United States of Locombia,' 'answered McKinnon. He leaned towards her a little as he spoke, and lowered his voice, with a warning side-glance towards the closed door.

"But my brother Arturo is the Locombian Minister of War," she maintained, her eyes still wide with wonder.

"And for two months past I've been commissioned by your brother to keep in touch with practically every so-called 'Liberal' expatriate in New York. And only twenty hours before this ship sailed I found out what it carried and why it was necessary for me to be on board of it."

For a full minute she did not utter a word.

"Then you are a spy?" she said, at last.

"Scarcely a spy—I am merely a Secret Agent for Arturo Boynton's government," was his answer.

He could see the deep breath she took as she leaned relaxingly back in the broken-armed steamer-chair.

"Then we are acting together," she murmured slowly, still a little mystified, still a little sceptical as to this new issue which was reuniting them.

"Yes, we're acting together—and we'll never let Ganley win!" said McKinnon.

It was something more than the fire of foolish ardour. And the woman at his side must have seen and known it, for a touch of colour came into her pale cheek. The electric fan purred and hummed on its little bracket. The soft and balmy night air beat on their faces. The gloom and quietness of the ship was about them.

"Won't you let me fight this fight out, for you?" he asked, surrendering to the tide of feeling that seemed tearing him from all his old anchorages.

"If we only could!" she said, inadequately.

"We can, together," he cried, with blind and unreasoning hope, resenting the look of something that seemed strangely akin to pity as she gazed up at him.

She did not answer, in words, but some slowly transforming emotion, some inner and unuttered capitulation slowly overbore the look of trouble that weighed upon her. Then she closed her eyes, as though shutting out some glimpse of happiness too great to be anything but a mockery. Before she opened them McKinnon had her hand between his great bony fingers, and reckless fire and warmth and daring went singing through his veins.

"I'm going to fight this out for you," he said, "and I'm going to win because you want me to win!"

"Oh, it will be hard!" she murmured ,with a vibrata of something that was almost happiness in her voice.

"Hard!" he cried ,in his new-born and unreasoning audacity; "I'd fight through Hell itself for you!"

CHAPTER XVI.
THE VERNAL INVASION

Ganley, togged out in a loose-fitting and many-wrinkled suit of white duck, was pacing the Laminian's bridge-deck, like a polar bear pacing its cage.

He watched the morning sun come up, bright and brazen, like a newly-minted penny. He watched the aerials bridging the mastheads and waiting like a seine to net any wandering school of æolian notes. He watched the bare-footed sailors sluice the steaming deck-boards. But most of all he watched the sky-line ahead, with many ruminative uplifts of his heavy iron-grey eyebrows.

It startled him a little to see McKinnon emerge from the deck below, fresh from his early bath in a rusty iron tub that had long since parted with its porcelain, whistling like a sand-boy as he climbed the brass-plated stairs.

He emerged from the stair-head in a suit of fresh linen, clean and cool-looking, as chirpy as a city sparrow at a fountain-rim. It even disturbed Ganley a little to behold him so causelessly and so mysteriously happy.

But what more serjously disturbed the guardedly watching man was the trivial discovery that McKinnon took a key from his pocket as he approached his station door, that he inserted it in the lock and turned it before he gained admittance to his narrow operating quarters. It obviously meant that, for some reason or other, the wireless-room was thereafter to be kept under lock and key.

McKinnon himself knew there were more reasons than one for that early morning mood of his. It was not the mere thought that he could now claim a definite and dependable ally which brought his lightheartedness back to him. It was more the consciousness of that new camaraderie which must exist between him and Alicia Boynton, the promise of close and subtle companionship with a young and lovely woman whose interests were to be his interests. It was the realization that at last duty and desire had been made one.

He found something wordlessly consoling in the fact that as the long tropical morning wore away he could look up from his tuner and phones and rest his eye on the white-clad figure of the girl, not a stone's throw away from him. It was understood that they were not to meet openly. But he knew, as he looked out at her from time to time, and saw her lying idly back under the patched awnings of the bridge-deck, apparently engrossed in a book, that she was quietly co-operating with him in keeping a watch of their common enemy.

The firstfruits of this quiet espionage was the disturbing sight of Ganley making his way to Captain Yandel's stateroom.

What took place there it was impossible to tell. All that Alicia could be sure of was that he remained for half an hour with the ship's master. For the past few days, she suspected, this thick-necked and bullock-minded officer had been more than ever under the influence of liquor. Alcohol, apparently, only served to crown his sullen taciturnity with an animal-like ferociousness when interfered with or even accosted. That silent and friendless man, she knew, was not one to be easily won over. He had neither the brains nor the ambition to disrupt the even tenor of his ox-like days by affiliations with anything so disquieting as a revolution-maker. He was not open to a gun-runners's negocio, or he would surely have played his hand earlier in the game.

DOCTORS GAVE ME UP

But "Fruit-a-tives" Cured Me.

MOORFIELD, Ont., March 25th, 1910.

"I suffered from severe indigestion and dyspepsia for nearly two years. I could not take food without fearful distress.

I could not do any work and became so run down and weak that I could hardly walk. I was attended by two experienced doctors and they both pronounced my case incurable, that they could do nothing more for me as they thought my disease was HEART FAILURE AND INCURABLE. The doctors gave me up and I looked forward for death in a short time.

At this time my son asked me to try 'FRUIT-A-TIVES', and from the outset of taking these wonderful tablets I was better, and gradually this medicine completely cured me. I took a large number of boxes, perhaps a dozen, and now I am entirely cured and I have gained over thirty pounds in weight."

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c. box—6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c.—or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Crippled With Sore Back

Kidneys Were Badly Diseased and She Didn't Know It

Was Completely Cured by Less Than Three Boxes of

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Women are very often deceived and mistaken in regard ot kidney disease. The pains in the back are attributed to other derangements, and kidney disease is allowed to run on and on until beyond the reach of medical science.

There is needless suffering, and life itself is risked, because backache is not recognized as the most marked symptom of kidney disease.

There is no treatment which so quickly relieves and cures kidney pains in the back as Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. As proof of this read Mrs. Patterson's letter:

Mrs. Richard Patterson, Haldimand, Gaspe Co., Que., writes: "I will gladly say that I was cured of kidney trouble by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. When I began using this medicine I was crippled with sore back and did not know what was the trouble. In looking over Dr. Chase's Almanac I saw Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills advertised and decided to try them.

"I had not used two boxes before my back was all right, and before I had completed the third box was entirely cured. There has been no return of the old kidney trouble, and I therefore believe the cure to be permanent."

One pill a dose, 25c a box, at all dealers, or Edmandson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

A Warm Bathroom

PERFECTION SMOKELESS OIL HEATER

Every mother should be careful that the children take their baths in a warm room. The chill of a cold room is dangerous after coming out of the hot water.

A Perfection Smokeless Oil Heater brings bathroom or bedroom to just the degree of warmth you want in five or ten minutes. All you have to do is to touch a match.

The Perfection Heater burns nine hours on one filling and is always ready for use. You can move it anywhere it is needed. There is no waste of fuel and heat warming unoccupied rooms. Just the heat you want, when and where you want it.

The Perfection is fitted with an automatic-locking flame spreader that prevents the wick being turned high enough to smoke and is easy to remove and drop back when cleaning.

Drums finished either in turquoise-blue enamel or plain steel; light and ornamental, yet strong and durable—suitable for any room in any house.

MATRIMONIAL MASCOTS

Queer Ideas Among the Hindus for Finding a Mate

Here is a tip for unmarried lady readers with matrimonial ambitions. Buy cards at a shop that is about to close for the day, or, having looked upon a bridegroom at a marriage ceremony, turn your back upon him and go straight home. Result, a happy marriage within a few months.

Anyhow, according to Mr. R. A. Leslie Moore, who has made a close study of the people of India, the Hindus consider this an infallible recipe for securing husbands. Among other quaint ideas prevalent amongst Indian people, Mr. Moore mentions that they believe that anyone killing a frog will never get married. On the other hand, according to a picturesque Bengali fancy, if a butterfly entered and flitted about a house there would soon be a marriage in the family; and if a butterfly persisted in hovering about any particular person, that person was destined for early connubial bliss.

WHALES WERE STRANDED

Thirty-Seven of Them Were Left Floundering in the Sands

Thirty-seven monster whales were stranded recently on the coast of Perkins Island, North Tasmania. The whales, among which there was only one cow, quarreled, and in chasing the female, entered the shallows. All their attempts to jump back into the deep water failed, and as the tide receded they were left floundering on the sands, in which they half-buried themselves in their struggles, with the result that they perished in a short time. A number of persons who saw the spectacle formed a syndicate with a capital of $1,500, to recover the ambergris from the carcases. They have already obtained 3,000 pounds of the valuable commodity.

PEER AND PLAYWRIGHT

Lord Howard de Walden, the plaintiff in the recent remarkable law-suit, is one of England's wealthiest peers, being credited with an income of $1,000,000 a year. As "T. E. Ellis" he has figured as the author of several plays, and was one of the earliest supporters of the movement for a National Theatre as a Shakespeare memorial. An ardent sportsman and soldier, he served with distinction during the South African War. He is exceedingly skilful with sword and gun, and once he achieved the unique feat of shooting a pheasant and hare almost at the same moment. He fired at the bird and brought it down. The report disturbed the hare, which jumped up almost at his feet and made off. Like a flash he turned round, fired the other barrel, and killed the hare.

THE PRINCE MUST BEHAVE

According to a custom in China the members of the imperial family are above the law. Prince San-Chi has been doing just as he likes recently, fortified with this immunity. It is said that there is not a hygienic law that this interesting person has not broken. In fact, his great recreation seems to have been to defy the police. At length to the endurance of the police there came a limit, and on representations being made to the Minister of the Interior, that official brought the matter under the notice of the Regent, who has not only abolished the "convention," but the Prince's recreations also, and given instructions that in future he must act as an ordinary citizen or stand the consequences.

SHOOTING EXTRAORDINARY

The Marquess of Ripon, one of the three finest covert shots in England, recently entered upon his sixtieth year. The story goes that he can shoot a rocketing pheasant at such an angle as to catch the dead bird in his hand without moving from his position! Fifteen thousand head of game fell to his gun in one year. The other great passion of the Marquess's life is music, and that is fully shared by his beautiful and gifted wife, for both are great supporters of the opera. The Marquess is also an enthusiastic collector, and during the past twenty years has amassed a marvellous lot of Dresden china, said to be worth at least $250,000.

WHERE SWINDLING IS EASY

There is no country in the world where so many administrative formalities are necessary for the simplest things as in France, and this excess of red tape makes swindling comparatively easy. The French swindler acquires an exhaustive knowledge of all the needs and trichiness of red tape and its formalities, and soon discovers the weak points in them.

A CURIOUS CUSTOM

The village of Hambridge possesses a remarkable charity. It is known as the Alford Bread Charity, and provides that every laborer and householder in the parish shall receive bread. The customary distribution has recently been made, and every one in the parish except the parson, the farmers, and tradesmen, were recipients.

OPERATED ON HIMSELF

A young Roumanian surgeon, who has astonished Paris by performing upon himself, M. Fraicon, has been studying a new anaesthetic, which leaves a patient lucid while suppressing sensibility, and as he was suffering from hernia he resolved to try the efficacy of the anaesthetic. It was administered to him, and sitting down at the operating table he calmly performed the necessary operation on himself, stitched up the wound, and then went off to bed. M. Fraicon is now, it is pleasing to learn, in a fair way to recovery.

THEN AND NOW

THEN "Mother's" code of Scalp Cleanliness included the energetic use of a fine toothed comb
NOW she applies a reliable scalp prophylactic and antiseptic

How well we recall the days when mother would say: "Here, get the fine toothed comb. I must scratch your head, it is full of dandruff." And, oh, the agony of the next two hours. How we hated it. There was no use in remonstrating. We were obliged to submit our tender scalps to that scratching and digging which left a hurting in each individual hair and our raw scalp tender and perhaps bleeding.

Poor soul, she didn't know what else to do. The germ origin of dandruff had not yet been determined. But the dirt and dandruff was a reality, it was there and it must be got rid of. There was no such a thing as a sanitary hair dressing and the fine toothed comb was the most effective eradicator "mother" knew. And what did she accomplish? Absolutely nothing but the temporary removal of the scale-like accumulation and the infliction of pain and discomfort.

What does "Mother" do now?

Instead of that torturing and hair-destroying comb, she keeps on hand at all times and insists upon every member of the family using regularly and intelligently

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer

Unlike the comb HERPICIDE is effective. Far from being a discomfort, it's use is a delight. The feeling of cleanliness and self assurance following an application of this remedy commends it to all, young and old, men and women. Properly applied, HERPICIDE works down around the root of the hair, where it destroys the germ life that causes dandruff. This permits proper nourishment to reach and strengthen the hair which becomes vigorous and luxuriant and ceases to fall out. Itching of the scalp which is so disagreeable, stops almost instantly.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE contains no grease, does not stain or dye and possesses a most delicate and exquisite odor.

HOW JEWELS ARE SET

Four Distinct Methods of Setting a Diamond—Art is Simple

Few people outside the jewellery trade have any idea how the brilliants they buy and wear are fastened into their settings, and a great many retail jewellers who have sold jewellery for years are equally ignorant. The art of setting jewels is comparatively simple, the skill of a setter depending upon his knowledge of the strength of the material and the delicate touch required, which can only be gained by years of practice.

There are only four distinct methods of setting a diamond, though mountings are made which involve two or more of these methods. The most common is the clamp or claw. The operator imbeds this mounting, whatever it may be, in warm shellac on the end of a stick (six inches of, broom handle is generally used), leaving the setting exposed. This cools and holds the delicate piece of jewellery firm in all parts. He then, with a thin file, files all the clamps, bringing them up to sharp points. Then, with a scraper or graver shaped like a chisel (all his cutting tools are miniature chisels of different shapes) he digs out a bearing or shoulder for the edge of the stone on the inside of each clamp.

He now, with a pair of sharp-pointed pliers, bends the clamps inward or outward, as they happen to require, until the stone will just squeeze into the circle of clamps. Then the stone is pressed firmly down until the edge rests squarely on the bearing of each clamp. This leaves the ends of the clamps sticking up past the edge of the stone. The next step is to push all these ends over the edge and burnish them tight. A piece of soft steel about three inches long is used for this, filed to a small square end, and fitted in a round handle. When the clamps are all firm in their places, they are bright cut, as the term is. The clamps are trimmed to a point with three cuts, two on the sides and one on the top.

The setter cuts away from the stone and must be careful not to dig too deep into the gold, or he will push the whole clamp away from the stone; then, to make a good job, the stone must come out and the clamp bent forward again. Some who manufacture the finest goods do not believe in bright-cutting clamps on rings, as the sharp edges left are very severe on gloves worn over them. A setter employed by these firms merely sets the clamps to a point, and the polisher buffs it round on top, when the work gets the last finish.

RULES THE RICHEST MAN

Rockefeller's Secretary, Miss Adam, is a Vigorous Woman

The only person on earth that John D. Rockefeller, the Oil King, takes orders from is a woman, and that woman is not Mrs. John D. Rockefeller. She is his secretary, Miss Adam. She is a clear-cut, precise, strong, vigorous woman, like Katherine Harrison, who was H. H. Rogers's secretary for many years.

Miss Adam looks after the Oil King's correspondence, makes all of his engagements, and is his remembrancer, so that he forgets none of them. She goes through his correspondence every morning, and picks out the letters she thinks worth while for him to see. The rest of them she either mentions, or else she answers them without asking his advice, because she knows his wishes so thoroughly.

Sometimes Mr. Rockefeller, who is getting to be quite a mild and tolerant sort of man, is inclined to follow the suggestion of some of his correspondents, or to do as he is requested by an acquaintance or a friend. Miss Adam has been with him so long and knows him so well, and has his confidence so absolutely, that she does not hesitate to take a stand against him, if she does not believe in the wisdom of what is suggested. Nine times out of ten the man of many millions bows to her will.

PENSIONS OF PEERS

Some Sums English Taxpayer Pays to Aristocracy and Others—Interesting History

For more than 200 years the heirs of Lord d'Auvrequerque have been drawing comfortable pensions for something an ancestor did 217 years ago. It was in 1694 that William III. granted to Henry de Nassau, Lord d'Auvrequerque, his heirs, and assignees for ever, the sum of $10,000 a year, in consideration of "his many and faithful services"—which, in fact, were those of a purely nominal political nature. Lord Cowper, to whom the four-fifths of this yearly sum was paid, commuted a portion of it in 1853 for $200,000 down, but his heirs still receive $1,875 annually.

There is the case of the Schomberg pension, granted also by William III. He burdened the State with the sum of $20,000 a year to the Schomberg; and, though portions of this have been commuted by descendants, England still pays out $3,500 annually to people who, it is alleged, are not in any way connected with the original Schomberg family.

Earl Nelson gets $25,000 a year through holding the Nelson title and representing the famous admiral's family—in the indirect line. In a like manner Lord Rodney gets $5,000 a year, but he is the direct descendant of the gallant seaman who defeated De Grasse.

The largest of the perpetual pensions is that received by the Duke of Richmond. It amounts to $65,000 a year. The story of this pension takes one back to the days of Queen Elizabeth, who got a duty of one shilling per chaldron on all coal exported from the Tyne and burned in England. Her successor held this duty until the reign of Charles II., who granted it to the first Duke of Richmond. He and his heirs received it for over a century, till in the time of George III. it was changed to the present annual pension, which is known as the Richmond Shilling.

The Duke of Norfolk obtains $300 a year from the Exchequer for what are known as "ancient fees," and the Duke of Rutland $100 under a like heading. These sums are nominal, it is true, yet the recipients do nothing whatever to earn them.

The first Duke of Grafton was granted by Charles II. a certain import duty known as "prisage and butlerage" upon wines. In 1806 the then existing duke commuted this duty for the annuity of $34,350, and his heirs still receive yearly this handsome income.

But it is not to be supposed that it is only the aristocrats who have been granted free pensions on the national Exchequer. Seventy thousand dollars odd is paid out on account of the Courts of Justice for compensation to those whose offices have been abolished. One old man is still alive who obtains $275 a year because through the operation of a new Act he was deprived two generations ago of the privilege of selling forms in court. Laundresses who lost their work some twenty years ago through the Law Courts being removed from Westminster to their present site opposite Temple Bar still receive from $400 to $550, according to their status. A "Preacher at Rolls," formerly of the old Chancery Division, is paid $500 annually, though not a sermon has he preached for innumerable years; and there are many other instances in which the taxpayer is called on to pay every year.

KITCHENER'S HUNTING SPOILS

Lord Kitchener brought home with him from his trip through the Soudan, Uganda, and East Africa, a fine collection of trophies of the chase which he shot during his tour, writes a London correspondent. Among the more notable of these is a very good specimen of the Soudan giant eland, one of the species which Mr. Selous is sojourning at the present time in Bahr-el-Ghazal in order to obtain for the Natural History Museum.

Here is a little freak in figures which will interest you, and help you to entertain your friends.

Put down the number of your living brothers.

Double the number.

Add three.

Multiply result by five.

Add number of living sisters.

Multiply result by ten.

Add number of dead brothers and sisters.

Subtract 150 from result.

The right-hand figure in this total will be the number of deaths.

The middle figure will be the number of living sisters.

The left-hand figure will be the number of living brothers.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience: "I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the New Method Treatment and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

MATRIMONIAL MASCOTS

Queer Ideas Among the Hindus for Finding a Mate

Here is a tip for unmarried lady readers with matrimonial ambitions. Buy cards at a shop that is about to close for the day, or, having looked upon a bridegroom at a marriage ceremony, turn your back upon him and go straight home. Result, a happy marriage within a few months.

Anyhow, according to Mr. R. A. Leslie Moore, who has made a close study of the people of India, the Hindus consider this an infallible recipe for securing husbands. Among other quaint ideas prevalent amongst Indian people, Mr. Moore mentions that they believe that anyone killing a frog will never get married. On the other hand, according to a picturesque Bengali fancy, if a butterfly entered and flitted about a house there would soon be a marriage in the family; and if a butterfly persisted in hovering about any particular person, that person was destined for early connubial bliss.

WHALES WERE STRANDED

Thirty-Seven of Them Were Left Floundering in the Sands

Thirty-seven monster whales were stranded recently on the coast of Perkins Island, North Tasmania. The whales, among which there was only one cow, quarreled, and in chasing the female, entered the shallows. All their attempts to jump back into the deep water failed, and as the tide receded they were left floundering on the sands, in which they half-buried themselves in their struggles, with the result that they perished in a short time. A number of persons who saw the spectacle formed a syndicate with a capital of $1,500, to recover the ambergris from the carcases. They have already obtained 3,000 pounds of the valuable commodity.

PEER AND PLAYWRIGHT

Lord Howard de Walden, the plaintiff in the recent remarkable law-suit, is one of England's wealthiest peers, being credited with an income of $1,000,000 a year. As "T. E. Ellis" he has figured as the author of several plays, and was one of the earliest supporters of the movement for a National Theatre as a Shakespeare memorial. An ardent sportsman and soldier, he served with distinction during the South African War. He is exceedingly skilful with sword and gun, and once he achieved the unique feat of shooting a pheasant and hare almost at the same moment. He fired at the bird and brought it down. The report disturbed the hare, which jumped up almost at his feet and made off. Like a flash he turned round, fired the other barrel, and killed the hare.

THE PRINCE MUST BEHAVE

According to a custom in China the members of the Imperial family are above the law. Prince San-Chi has been doing just as he likes recently, fortified with this immunity. It is said that there is not a hygienic law that this interesting person has not broken. In fact, his great recreation seems to have been to defy the police. At length to the endurance of the police there came a limit, and on representations being made to the Minister of the Interior, that official brought the matter under the notice of the Regent, who has not only abolished the "convention," but the Prince's recreations also, and given instructions that in future he must act as an ordinary citizen or stand the consequences.

SHOOTING EXTRAORDINARY

The Marquess of Ripon, one of the three finest covert shots in England, recently entered upon his sixtieth year. The story goes that he can shoot a rocketing pheasant at such an angle as to catch the dead bird in his hand without moving from his position! Fifteen thousand head of game fell to his gun in one year. The other great passion of the Marquess's life is music, and that is fully shared by his beautiful and gifted wife, for both are great supporters of the opera. The Marquess is also an enthusiastic collector, and during the past twenty years has amassed a marvellous lot of Dresden china, said to be worth at least $250,000.

WHERE SWINDLING IS EASY

There is no country in the world where so many administrative formalities are necessary for the simplest things as in France, and this excess of red tape makes swindling comparatively easy. The French swindler acquires an exhaustive knowledge of all the needs and trickiness of red tape and its formalities, and soon discovers the weak points in them.

A CURIOUS CUSTOM

The village of Hambridge possesses a remarkable charity. It is known as the Alford Bread Charity, and provides that every laborer and householder in the parish shall receive bread. The customary distribution has recently been made, and every one in the parish except the parson, the farmers, and tradesmen, were recipients.

OPERATED ON HIMSELF

A young Roumanian surgeon, who has astonished Paris by performing upon himself, M. Fraicon, has been studying a new anaesthetic, which leaves a patient lucid while suppressing sensibility, and as he was suffering from hernia he resolved to try the efficacy of the anaesthetic. It was administered to him, and sitting down at the operating table he calmly performed the necessary operation on himself, stitched up the wound, and then went off to bed. M. Fraicon now, it is pleasing to learn, is on a way to recovery.

THEN AND NOW

THEN "Mother's" code of Scalp Cleanliness included the energetic use of a fine toothed comb

NOW she applies a reliable scalp prophylactic and antiseptic

How well we recall the days when mother would say: "Here, get the fine toothed comb. I must scratch your head, it is full of dandruff." And, oh, the agony of the next two hours. How we hated it. There was no use in remonstrating. We were obliged to submit our tender scalps to that scratching and digging which left a hurting in each individual hair and our raw scalp tender and perhaps bleeding.

Poor soul, she didn't know what else to do. The germ origin of dandruff had not yet been determined. But the dirt and dandruff was a reality, it was there and it must be got rid of. There was no such a thing as a sanitary hair dressing and the fine toothed comb was the most effective eradicator "mother" knew. And what did she accomplish? Absolutely nothing but the temporary removal of the scale-like accumulation and the infliction of pain and discomfort.

What does "Mother" do now?

Instead of that torturing and hair-destroying comb, she keeps on hand at all times and insists upon every member of the family using regularly and intelligently

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE

The Original Dandruff Germ Destroyer

Unlike the comb HERPICIDE is effective. Far from being a discomfort, it's use is a delight. The feeling of cleanliness and self assurance following an application of this remedy commends it to all, young and old, men and women. Properly applied, HERPICIDE works down around the root of the hair, where it destroys the germ life that causes dandruff. This permits proper nourishment to reach and strengthen the hair which becomes vigorous and luxuriant and ceases to fall out. Itching of the scalp which is so disagreeable, stops almost instantly.

NEWBRO'S HERPICIDE contains no grease, does not stain or dye and possesses a most delicate and exquisite odor.

You Want Newbro's Herpicide, Not Advice

The suggestion of "something just as good" when Herpicide is requested, like most unsolicited advice, comes from a selfish motive. The substitute pays the dealer a larger profit. Do you see why he is so anxious to sell you "something just as good"?

HOW JEWELS ARE SET

Four Distinct Methods of Setting a Diamond—Art is Simple

Few people outside the jewellery trade have any idea how the brilliants they buy and wear are fastened into their settings, and a great many retail jewellers who have sold jewellery for years are equally ignorant. The art of setting jewels is comparatively simple, the skill of a setter depending upon his knowledge of the strength of the material and the delicate touch required, which can only be gained by years of practice.

There are only four distinct methods of setting a diamond, though mountings are made which involve two or more of these methods. The most common is the clamp or claw. The operator imbeds this mounting, whatever it may be, in warm shellac on the end of a stick (six inches of broom handle is generally used), leaving the setting exposed. This cools and holds the delicate piece of jewellery firm in all parts. He then, with a thin file, files all the clamps, bringing them up to sharp points. Then, with a scraper or graver shaped like a chisel (all his cutting tools are miniature chisels of different shapes) he digs out a bearing or shoulder for the edge of the stone on the inside of each clamp.

He now, with a pair of sharp-pointed pliers, bends the clamps inward or outward, as they happen to require, until the stone will just squeeze into the circle of clamps. Then the stone is pressed firmly down until the edge rests squarely on the bearing of each clamp. This leaves the ends of the clamps sticking up past the edge of the stone. The next step is to push all these ends over the edge and burnish them tight. A piece of soft steel about three inches long is used for this, filed to a small square end, and fitted in a round handle. When the clamps are all firm in their places, they are bright cut, as the term is. The clamps are trimmed to a point with three cuts, two on the sides and one on the top.

The setter cuts away from the stone and must be careful not to dig too deep into the gold, or he will push the whole clamp away from the stone; then, to make a good job, the stone must come out and the clamp bent forward again. Some who manufacture the finest goods do not believe in bright-cutting clamps on rings, as the sharp edges left are very severe on gloves worn over them. A setter employed by these firms merely sets the clamps to a point, and the polisher buffs it round on top, when the work gets the last finish.

RULES THE RICHEST MAN

Rockefeller's Secretary, Miss Adam, is a Vigorous Woman

The only person on earth that John D. Rockefeller, the Oil King, takes orders from is a woman, and that woman is not Mrs. John D. Rockefeller. She is his secretary, Miss Adam. She is a clear-cut, precise, strong, vigorous woman, like Katherine Harrison, who was H. H. Rogers's secretary for many years.

Miss Adam looks after the Oil King's correspondence, makes all of his engagements, and is his remembrancer, so that he forgets none of them. She goes through his correspondence every morning, and picks out the letters she thinks worth while for him to see. The rest of them she either destroys, or else she answers them without asking his advice, because she knows his wishes so thoroughly.

Sometimes Mr. Rockefeller, who is getting to be quite a mild and tolerant sort of man, is inclined to follow the suggestion of some of his correspondents, or to do as he is requested by an acquaintance or a friend. Miss Adam has been with him so long and knows him so well, and has his confidence so absolutely, that she does not hesitate to take a stand against him, if she does not believe in the wisdom of what is suggested. Nine times out of ten the man of many millions bows to her will.

PENSIONS OF PEERS

Some Sums English Taxpayer Pays to Aristocracy and Others—Interesting History

For more than 200 years the heirs of Lord d'Auvrequerque have been drawing comfortable pensions for something an ancestor did 217 years ago. It was in 1694 that William III. granted to Henry de Nassau, Lord d'Auvrequerque, his heirs, and assignees for ever, the sum of $10,000 a year, in consideration of "his many and faithful services"—which, in fact, were those of a purely nominal political nature. Lord Cowper, to whom the four-fifths of this yearly sum was paid, commuted a portion of it in 1853 for $200,000 down, but his heirs still receive $1,875 annually.

There is the case of the Schomberg pension, granted also by William III., He burdened the State with the sum of $20,000 a year to the Schombergs; and, though portions of it have been commuted by descendants, England still pays out $3,500 annually to people who, it is alleged, are not in any way connected with the original Schomberg family.

Earl Nelson gets $25,000 a year through holding the Nelson title and representing the famous admiral's family—in the indirect line. In a like manner Lord Rodney gets $5,000 a year, but he is the direct descendant of the gallant seaman who defeated De Grasse.

The largest of the perpetual pensions is that received by the Duke of Richmond. It amounts to $65,000 a year. The story of this pension takes one back to the days of Queen Elizabeth, who got a duty of one shilling per chaldron on all coal exported from the Tyne and burned in England. Her successor held this duty until the reign of Charles II., who granted it to the first Duke of Richmond. He and his heirs received it for over a century, till in the time of George III. it was changed to the present annual pension, which is known as the Richmond Shilling.

The Duke of Norfolk obtains $300 a year from the Exchequer for what are known as "ancient fees," and the Duke of Rutland $100 under a like heading. These sums are nominal, it is true, yet the recipients do nothing whatever to earn them.

The first Duke of Grafton was granted by Charles II. a certain import duty known as "prisage and butlerage" upon wines. In 1806 the then existing duke commuted this duty for the annuity of $34,350, and his heirs still receive yearly this handsome income.

But it is not to be supposed that it is only the aristocrats who have been granted free pensions on the national Exchequer. Seventy thousand dollars odd is paid out on account of the Courts of Justice for compensation to those whose offices have been abolished. One old man is still alive who obtains $275 a year because through the operation of a new Act he was deprived two generations ago of the privilege of selling forms in court. Laundresses who lost their work some twenty years ago through the Law Courts being removed from Westminster to their present site opposite Temple Bar still receive from $400 to $550, according to their status. A "Preacher at Rolls," formerly of the old Chancery Division, is paid $500 annually, though not a sermon has he preached for innumerable years; and there are many other instances in which the taxpayer is called on to pay every year.

KITCHENER'S HUNTING SPOILS

Lord Kitchener brought home with him from his trip through the Soudan, Uganda, and East Africa, a fine collection of trophies of the chase which he shot during his tour, writes a London correspondent. Among the more notable of these is a very good specimen of the Soudan giant eland, one of the species which Mr. Selous is sojourning at the present time in Bahr-el-Ghazal in order to obtain for the Natural History Museum.

A FIGURE FREAK

Here is a little freak in figures which will interest you, and help you to entertain your friends:

Put down the number of your living brothers.

Double the number.

Add three.

Multiply result by five.

Add number of living sisters.

Multiply result by ten.

Add number of dead brothers and sisters.

Subtract 150 from result.

The right-hand figure in this total will be the number of deaths.

The middle figure will be the number of living sisters.

The left-hand figure will be the number of living brothers.

AFTER TREATMENT

Peter E. Summers relates his experience:

"I was troubled with Nervous Debility for many years. I lay it to indiscretion and excesses in youth. I became very despondent and didn't care whether I worked or not. I imagined everybody who looked at me guessed my secret. Imaginative dreams at night weakened me—my back ached, had pains in the back of my head, hands and feet were cold, tired in the morning, poor appetite, fingers were shaky, eyes blurred, hair loose, memory poor, etc. Numbness in the fingers set in and the doctor told me he feared paralysis. I took all kinds of medicines and tried many first-class physicians, wore an electric belt for three months, but received little benefit. I was induced to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, though I had lost all faith in doctors. Like a drowning man I commenced the NEW METHOD TREATMENT and it saved my life. The improvement was like magic—I could feel the vigor going through the nerves. I was cured mentally and physically. I have sent them many patients and continue to do so.

LONDON PREPARES FOR SOCIAL SEASON

Opera at Covent Garden and Mr. Hammerstein's New House an Asset.

PLANS OF QUEEN MARY

She Had Many Miniatures Painted of Herself for Distribution When She Goes to India.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

WITH the advent of autumn and the likelihood of a Parliamentary session prolonged until, most probably, the very last possible hour before Christmas Eve, every one is speculating as to what social events may be looked for in London itself. The fact that there will be opera at both Covent Garden and Mr. Oscar Hammerstein's magnificent new house is a great asset, especially with those who prefer spending the whole autumn and winter in town to the delights of hunting and shooting.

Among other musical fixtures Mme. Albani is to sing this month at a so-called "final" farewell for the benefit of the great artist. She will be supported—in the audience—by the presence of that other great songstress, Mme. Patti—the Baroness Cederstrom—and among other members of royalty almost certain to be at the performance will be Princess Henry of Battenberg. Mme. Albani, besides being in the late Queen Victoria's estimation the most charming and sympathetic singer of her day, had the unusual privilege of being a personal friend of the late Queen.

ROYAL ACQUAINTANCE.

Combined with her long personal acquaintance with Queen Victoria, Mme. Albani, of course, also came into constant contact with the Queen's daughters, more particularly with Princess Henry of Battenberg, who to the last day of Queen Victoria's life resided with her. As many are aware, Princess Henry is the most accomplished pianist among the many talented royal princesses, excelling specially in the difficult art of sympathetic accompaniment. It speaks volumes, perhaps, for Her Royal Highness' gift in this respect that Mme. Albani has often been heard to say that never has she been more perfectly accompanied on the piano than by the youngest of Queen Victoria's daughters.

Apropos of this, a well known American musician, at one time a most charming singer, namely, Mrs. Ronalds, has often been accompanied on the piano at Sandringham by Queen Alexandra herself when Princess of Wales. Wholly devoted to music from the early days of Princess Alexandra's arrival in England, she was never so happy as when surrounded in her Norfolk home with those to whom music was as much of a hobby and delight as she found it to be. It may also be known to many that Mrs. Ronalds also used to accompany the Princess on the piano, for Her Majesty had always a sweet voice, and nothing pleased her more than to get Mrs. Ronalds to assist her in accompaniment in the quiet everyday life at Sandringham long ago.

Another Anglo-American friendship which originated in much the same way was that of the late Consuelo, Duchess of Manchester, who was a great friend of the Queen, and of whom it has often been said that no professional artist ever excelled in the matter of pianoforte playing.

It is said with some authority that negotiations for the purchase of a house near Newquay, in Cornwall, for the occasional use of the royal children are being made.

Queen Mary has had many miniatures painted of herself, mostly replicas of those she already possesses, to take with her to India to distribute among prominent subjects. Queen Mary has a great penchant for fans, and uses one whether they be in fashion or not. She possesses the most valuable collection of fans in the world. Two or three artists have lately been making copies of some of the most interesting of the collection, as she has decided to make gifts also of these. Both King and Queen are taking an enormous number of gifts to India with them, all being purchased out of their private purses.

In the book of reminiscences just published by Mr. R. C. Hutchinson, there is a delightful story of Queen Mary's girlhood in Florence. At that time artists' balls were given on a magnificent scale, and the then Princess May was present at one of them with the late Duchess of Teck. It had been arranged that they should leave at half-past eleven o'clock, but when that time came the young Princess was unwilling to go, and expressed her feelings to Baron Lumbroso. He was quite equal to the occasion.

A ROYAL THUNDERSTORM.

When the Royal party arrived at the door it was found impossible to make a start, as a violent thunderstorm was raging, and the courtyard was flooded. This dreadful storm increased in intensity, and raged intermittently for some hours. The whole time was the work of some of the boats, who, by rubbing sheets of paper on the stucco walls of the courtyard, imitated the sound of rain, and of Baron Lumbroso, who managed the lightning and the rain. In one hand he held a flashlight machine, in the other the stage thunder-sheet, on in full force.

Amateur Photography.

Harper's: "I don't know about this picture, Bobby," said the visitor, as he ran over specimens of the youngster's camera work. "I am afraid a dog with a propeller instead of a tail is something of a fake."

"That ain't a propeller," said Bobby. "That's his tail. He kept waggin' it while his picture was being tookened."

Mr. Croker Shown at Unveiling of the Parnell Monument Before Dublin Throng

MR. JOHN REDMOND AND MR RICHARD CROKER ON WAY TO UNVEILING OF PARNELL MEMORIAL, AT DUBLIN

Retired New York Political Leader and Mr. John E. Redmond Are Principal Figures at Event.

IN the above photographs are shown the two principal figures in the unveiling at Dublin recently of the Parnell monument, Mr. Richard Croker and Mr. John E. Redmond, the latter of whom made the only address of the occasion, in which he paid a glowing tribute to the life and work of Parnell. The monument, toward the erection of which Americans subscribed a not inconsiderable sum, stands at the end of Sackville street, opposite the statue of Sackville, erected thirty years ago. Mr. Croker received a great ovation, and so great was the throng that viewed the parade of patriotic societies from St. Stephen's Green, at the north end of Sackville street, that Mr. Croker and Mr. Redmond, who rode at the rear of the parade, had to proceed on foot. Mr. Redmond in his address predicted that there would be an Irish Parliament within two years, and repeated the now historic phrase, "We cannot spare a single Irishman." In the entire city of Dublin there was not one British flag to be seen. Everywhere fluttered the flag of Erin, the American colors also being conspicuous in the line of march.

Sea Palace for King and Queen

The Steamship Medina Being Transformed for Voyage to India for the Durbar.

PERSONAL SELECTIONS

Furnishings of Suites Have Been Chosen by Monarch and Consort After Much Care.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

THE Peninsular and Oriental Company's steamship, the Medina, on board which King George and Queen Mary will travel to India for the Durbar in November, has arrived at the Portsmouth dockyard, where the work of fitting and furnishing the apartments to be used by the King and Queen and their suite is being carried out. With her white hull bordered with royal blue and cream colored funnels, the Medina presents the appearance of a huge yacht, and when the furnishing is complete she will be a floating palace.

Both the King and Queen have given a great deal of time and consideration to their own apartments, as well as those set apart for the members of their suites, having selected the carpets, curtains and furnishings themselves.

The color schemes throughout are of delicate shades, and will contrast strongly with the regal splendor and magnificence with which they will be surrounded in the course of the many functions that will be given in their honor in Delhi.

At the forward end of the vessel on the spar deck are two suites of cabins exclusively for the use of their Majesties, each comprising a sitting room measuring about 22 by 16 feet, a bedroom about 16 by 16 feet and a bathroom about 12 by 12 feet.

QUEEN'S APARTMENT

On the starboard side is the one to be occupied by the Queen, and this is of simple, refined panelling, which is painted white throughout. The furniture in the sitting room is of satin wood, finely inlaid, and comprises specially designed writing tables, bookcases, cabinet, &c., with various settees and easy chairs upholstered and covered in green and white striped silk. The port and door curtains are of silk of the same color and design as the coverings, and the carpet is of heavy pile, with a border of shades of green to harmonise with the coverings of the furniture.

The bedroom, which has a communicating door from the sitting room and has also a separate door from the corridor, is carpeted en suite with the sitting room and the fittings and furniture are of inlaid satin wood, similar to that in the other room. In the dressing room attached to the suite is a swinging cot, to be used in rough weather, if need be.

On the port side is the King's suite, which is very similar to that of the Queen. Between the two royal suites is the main corridor and staircase, which leads to a music room and divan. From this corridor, which is beautifully carpeted in royal blue, you enter the dining saloon, which is a handsome apartment, just aft of the royal suites. It has one long centre table, which can be divided into small tables if desired.

IN THE MUSIC ROOM.

The music room is on the hurricane deck. The panelling here is of light oak, and the furniture consists of very comfortable settees and easy chairs, and small occasional tables fixed where necessary.

There are two rough weather cabins amidships, which have been specially fitted up for the King and Queen, and here the moving of the vessel will not be felt so much as in their cabins forward should the weather prove violent. These cabins are upholstered and decorated in similar manner to their other apartments.

In addition to the apartments which will be used exclusively by the King and Queen there are also special cabins, and six writing rooms for the ladies and gentlemen in waiting, who will be about twenty in number.

DUKE OF TECK TO GO ON INDIA VISIT

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

Only by slow degrees do details of the King and Queen's journey to India become known. Now it is understood that the Duke of Teck will accompany them. The Duchess is not going, but will remain at home with her four children during her husband's four months' absence.

It has been a subject of considerable anxiety in royal circles since the death of King Edward as to how the present King might find members in the now comparatively limited circle of royalties to represent him at functions, either at home or broad, which it was impossible for him to attend personally. During the late King's life there were, of course, the then Prince and Princess of Wales, on whom His Majesty could rely at a moment's notice. But the fact that the present Prince of Wales is still quite a lad renders it doubly difficult to find suitable representatives for the various important missions that nowadays are constantly cropping up.

To Prince Alexander of Teck, the Duke's younger brother, has been assigned the duty of representing King George on the approaching coronation of the King of Siam, which is unique in its way, inasmuch as it is the first time that a European nation has been represented by royalty at the crowning of an Eastern potentate.

Prince Arthur of Connaught has often performed highly important ambassadorial duties abroad, both in this and the last reign, but it is not always convenient for this young Prince, as an officer in the British army, to leave his post for long.

Now that the Duke of Connaught for at least two years will be in Canada deprives King George of yet another responsible royal representative, and it is considered here an excellent choice to send out a brother of Queen Mary to this the very first Asiatic coronation of British royalty represented.

Prince Alexander's mission will permit his travelling part of the way with the King and Queen on their route to India, as Siam's new King will not be crowned until well on in December, a full month after King George and Queen Mary will have started on their own Eastern trip.

NONE BUT SCOTCH FOR BALMORAL VISIT

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

King George and Queen Mary have been endearing themselves to their Scottish subjects by insisting, while stopping at Balmoral, that every one around them shall be Scotch, in habit and costume at least. The royal ball at Balmoral Palace was opened by seven pipers playing "The Highland Laddie" instead of the national anthem. The King, the Duke of Connaught, the Duke of Fife and nearly all the noblemen in the royal entourage wore Highland dress. A scoffer in one of the English society journals says that the wearing of kilts was rather trying to some members of the party, but that His Majesty looked like a Bonny Scotchman. Another evidence of the King's tactfulness is revealed in the announcement that Mr. D. G. Rolls, one of the royal gillies, has been giving lessons to the young princess and Princess Mary in the sightsome reel and other Scottish dances.

QUEEN'S CHECK AS WEDDING PRESENT

Called a Most Sensible Present and an Example Sure To Be Followed by Many.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

QUEEN ALEXANDRA has set an example which it is expected will give a lead to society in the matter of wedding presents, and may remove the evil of the duplicated gift. On the marriage of the Duke of Grafton's grandson at Cowes Queen Alexandra sent a check, accompanied by a letter of congratulation, and a lady of the Court said to a friend that she could not recollect of the Queen having given such a gift before.

"But it is so sensible a present," she observed, "that many are sure to adopt it. Especially will this be the case with the nouveaux riches or persons of blatant disposition with a propensity for self-advertisement. The Englishman, however, is a somewhat secretive individual, and would object, I imagine, to expose through the medium of a check the amount he can afford to spend on a gift.

"An article for the table or a knick-knack is so much less expensive than its appearance might induce the recipients to suppose if it is judiciously purchased, and among my acquaintances are persons who are always on the lookout for bargains, which they store away and then produce when a friend is married. From the bride's and bridegroom's point of view, of course, a check is infinitely more desirable than furnishing or decorative articles."

THEATRICAL CHAT FRESH FROM LONDON

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

Everybody here is interested in the manner in which Mr. Max Rendix, musical director at the Whitney Theatre, conducts his orchestra. He stands outside the rail of the orchestra enclosure and directs the musicians and singers with hands full of expression and devoid of baton. In explaining why he does not use a score Mr. Rendix says that it is because every note in "The Spring Maid" is at the tips of his fingers, and that is why he conducts with them instead of with an inanimate stick of wood. "The music," he says, "is in my mind, in my heart and in my fingers, and the human hand, with its many variations of suggestion, is surely an improvement when one is talking to instrumentalists and singers on a senseless bit of wood lutched lightly in the hand.

Speaking of "The Spring Maid" recalls the fact that while many of the English critics slammed the production with faint praise the public, notwithstanding the announcement continually ding-donged into its ears that this light opera was "imported from America," continues to flock to th Whitney Theatre, where they hum the haunting waltz melodies and laugh at the ever delightful Mr. Courtice Pounds as he snaps out the rollicking number called "My Word."

Another understudy has come to her own, and this is attested ... Miss Nan Stewart's success as Lisbeth, the heroine of the dainty Dutch musical play, "The Love Mills," which is holding the boards at Mr. Charles Frohman's Globe Theatre. The rôle was to have been taken first by Miss Ruth Vincent and later it was offered to Miss Evie Greene. But they were debarred by the "barring clause" in their contract, and Miss Stewart, who has been making hit after hit in the provinces under the management of Mr. George Edwardes, got her chance, improved the opportunity and is a full fledged "star."

NEW LORD MAYOR AN OCTOGENARIAN

Sir Thomas Crosby at Eighty-One Says "Take Care of Your Arteries and Live Long."

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

FOR the first time in its history London is to have a medical man for its Lord Mayor, for the first time the Lord Mayor will be an octogenarian.

The Aldermen of the city of London are marvelling how that young old man of eighty-one Sir Thomas Crosby is to get through his year's service, a year that is crammed full with such hustling as even the busiest city men hardly know. During the five weeks that elapse between his election and his stepping into office with the Lord Mayor's show on November 9 the Lord Mayor elect has to go through a very severe training for the responsibilities of his twelve months of office.

Every day now Sir Thomas Crosby is keeping numerous engagements, attending meetings, delivering speeches, receiving and acknowledging congratulations, and discharging all these duties with a youthful vigor that causes every one to look forward to the Lord Mayor's show and the Guildhall banquet following it as the inauguration of a Mayoral reign at the Mansion House that will stimulate energy and activity in every department of the city's life.

How does he do it? is the question every one is asking.

"Take care of your arteries," is Sir Thomas' own prescription. "In the city of London, or anywhere else, take care of your arteries. A man is as old as his arteries. If they degenerate you get an effusion of blood on the brain or elsewhere and crack—you are old at twenty-five. And how to take care of your arteries? Early to bed, smoke little and drink less. If you drink frequently, take small doses; but you need never vary the long night's sleep."

$2,000,000 A YEAR FOR AMERICAN MEDICINE

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

Attention is being called here to a report issued by the United States Department of Commerce that 15,000,000 packages of American proprietary medicines were exported to Great Britain last year, the value of the "dump," as it is called by an English editor, amounting in round figures to $2,000,000. This, he says, is a big price for any country to pay for the privilege of being dosed by alien quacks, adding that the sternest free trade economist is bound to admit that here is an instance where protection would benefit the community. In so many words this is a demand for Imperial preference for the all-British quack.

ISSUE CATALOGUE TO HUTH LIBRARY

Sale of Rare Edition Will Begin at Sotheby's on November 14 and Continue Eight Days.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

THE magnitude and importance of the Huth Library can be realized now that the catalogue has been issued of the eight day sale of the first portion, which begins at Sotheby's on November 14.

So extensive is the library that the alphabetical order which has been adopted in arranging the thousand odd lots covers only the letters A and B. Added to these there is a special group of Shakespeare rarities, the sale of which will occupy the whole of the last day. Splendid examples of the four folios are here, the set including John Wilkes' copy of the first folio. But perhaps the chief glory of this section is the matchless collection of quarto plays, for which there has been keen competition at enormous prices in late years.

"Two Bookes of Epigrammes and Epitaphs," by Thomas Bancroft (1639), dedicated to "two top branches of Gentry, Sir Charles Shirley, Baronet, and William Davenport, Esquire," contains one of the first whole hearted acknowledgments of England's greatest dramatist. It is contained in the following epigrams:—

TO SHAKESPEARE.

Thy muses sugred dainties seem to us
Like the fam'd apples of old Tantalus;
For we (admiring) see and heare thy straines,
But none I see or heare those sweets attaines.

TO THE SAME.

Thou hast so us'd thy pen (for shook thy Speare)
That Poets startle, nor thy wit come neare.

Bibles and Byronic rarities will occupy attention during several days of the sale. The former, especially bulk largely in this portion of the library, there being more than one hundred rare examples with, as the chief prize, the famous Hopetoun Mazarin Bible, which fetched £2,000 ($10,000) twenty years ago. There are, moreover, several other examples of the Gutenberg press. The manuscripts are not numerous, but of the rarest interest and value.

Didn't Have To Be.

Puck:—New Suburbanite—I suppose this is pasteurized milk, my friend?

Village Milkman (witheringly)—Not so's ye kin taste it, I reckon, mister. In fact, I'll hand ye a five dollar note if ye kin prove any uv my cows wuz ever bit by a mad dog!

The Mote and the Beam Are Recalled by This Picture

A SNAPSHOT OF MR. AND MRS. WINSTON CHURCHILL ON A DOUBLE CANOE AT DIEPPE.

Photograph of Mr. and Mrs. Winston Churchill Published Broadcast in England, Where a Pastime Is to Hurl Maledictions on Heads of "Cheeky" Americans.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

AMERICAN newspaper men often have been attacked by the English press, but the American newspaper photographer is always the subject of the most vitriolic abuse over here, because of his alleged propensity to snapshot public men and society leaders when they are or are not looking.

When you are told that the picture which accompanies this brief article has been published in nearly all the leading illustrated newspapers of England you will chuckle and recall the story of the mote and the beam. It is a snapshot of the Right Hon. and Mrs. Winston Churchill in a double canoe at Dieppe.

In one of the newspapers which published this picture attention is called to the trials of Mr. Hilton, the English winner of the American amateur golf championship, who, it seems, was the victim of a flashlight photographer who tried to take a "snap" at him while he was in bed. The English critic, commenting on this, says that the cheek of the photographer is equalled only by the impudence of the American reporter who interviewed an English statesman visiting New York while the "mighty one" was taking his morning bath. The writer forgets that the reporter must have been invited to enter the bathroom.

Haunt of Byron Is Now No More

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

ANOTHER of London's historic landmarks has gone. Long's Hotel, No 16, New Bond street, was one of the oldest in London, and the most interesting by reason of its name and associations with the literary life of London of the early part of last century, and now it has closed its doors.

It was in this hotel that Lord Byron and Sir Walter Scott met for the last time in 1815. "He dined or lunched with me," wrote Scott, "at Long's Hotel in Bond street. I never saw him so full of gayety and good humor, to which the presence of Mr. Mathews, the comedian, added not a little. Poor Terry was also present."

The literary memoirs of the period contain many references to the hotel in the heyday of its splendor. There are some by Hazlitt, who, for instance, in a paper in the long since defunct Examiner, of June 1, 1818, implores the author of a play to "give us a taste of true refinement, instead of confining your abilities to teaching young gentlemen at Long's how to eat fish with a silver fork."

While there can be no doubt that at one time Long's Hotel was a great gambling and betting centre in the Regency, it was noted for refinement in comparison to Steven's, next door. Steven's, in the Regency, was the headquarters for officers of the army and men about town, and it is narrated that if a stranger came in wanting to dine he would be stared at by the servants and very solemnly assured that there was no table vacant.

A few years ago Steven's ceased to exist, but up to the last Long's preserved much of the character and "atmosphere" of the old fashioned London hotel of half a century ago. Its waiters were, for the most part, aged Englishmen, and there was attentive service rather than demonstrative incapacity.

OPEN AIR LIFE A BOON TO KING

British Monarch Greatly Benefited by Weeks Spent on the Moors.

KEEN FOR "SIMPLE LIFE"

After Return to London King George and Queen Mary Will Prepare for Departure to India.

[Special Despatch.]
LONDON, Saturday.

BEFORE returning to London King George has been enjoying a week's deer stalking at Balmoral, which he enjoys with all the true sportsman's eagerness. When the King returns to Buckingham Palace, London folk, it is said, will find a remarkable change in his appearance, for the open air life he has been leading has made him bronzed, and he has lost the overworked, tired expression which betrayed to all who came near him earlier in the summer the strain which his many and heavy duties entailed. The moors are a real playground for him.

The King certainly looks well after his health. When on holiday he thoroughly believes in the "simple life." The Lucullan repasts which of late years have tended to become the fashion at some shooting parties do not in any way appeal to the King, and the sumptuous displays which at times used to be prepared for him at some country houses he frankly regarded as a waste of time.

The luncheon served at his shooting parties this year have been ample as a meal, but simple, the bill of fare including such homely dishes as Irish stew, plenty of cold meats, simple puddings and the best of cheese and salads; but the King himself never wastes much time over lunch.

PREPARING FOR INDIA.

Returning to London the King will not stop long at the palace, for he and the Queen have invited a succession of small parties to York Cottage for shooting. Then will begin the final preparations for the royal departure for India. It has been suggested that the plans for the King and Queen's voyage to India may be modified in consequence of the war, if it lasts till they depart. It is pointed out that for the King and Queen to travel through the area of naval warfare would be extremely "inconvenient," to say the least. The Peninsular and Oriental steamship Medina, escorted by war ships, is to leave Southampton on November 9, and, according to present arrangement, is to call at Malta on the course through the Mediterranean. The risks of such a voyage are created by the notification of both Italy and Turkey that they are suspending the usual safeguards for navigation in the shape of lighthouses. If, therefore, the war is not over by the middle of November the plans for the King's voyage may have to be reconsidered.

For the first time in history, the Court Circular will be issued out of Europe, when the King and Queen go to India. The Circular is, of course, issued nightly from the royal residence at which the King and Queen happen to be stopping, but when they leave England it will be telegraphed from the Medina, and later from India.

GREATER PUBLICITY.

The King has had for some time under consideration a plan for the improvement of this official publication which shall give more particulars of what occurs about the court, and incidentally put an end to the many unfounded reports that are now put into circulation respecting the royal intentions and future movements.

King Edward reorganised the manner in which the Court Circular was sent out, and the present King has since introduced other improvements; but in general it remains the same as it was when Thackeray mercilessly satirised it, more than sixty years ago.

The departure of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught for Canada, with the prospect of their long absence from England, is being generally regretted in London, for their absence will be a real loss to society. Since the début of their two daughters the Duke and Duchess and their family have won a high place in the affection and esteem of society at large, and every season many of the most brilliant and successful entertainments and balls have been arranged entirely in honor of members of the Connaught family. Princess Patricia's popularity is universal, she being one of the best and keenest of dancers among the younger set, and the Duchess is always the most welcome guest at any house she goes to.

The Marchioness of Blandford has been stopping at Richmond with Lord Claud Hamilton, her brother, and his daughter, Mrs. Flower, during the early days of their bereavement. She has now left for Scotland to pay one or two quiet visits to friends there, and will be the guest of the Duke and Duchess of Sueetcuch at Langholm before returning to Park street for the winter.

The Marchioness of Blandford rejoices in the reputation of being one of the most ideal mothers-in-law in society. Of her son's wife, the Duchess of Marlborough, she is the fastest friend, and when the Duchess entertains on a large scale at Sunderland House Lady Blandford is always her right hand. The Marchioness was very privileged at the Court of Queen Victoria, for she was the only woman the Queen ever received who had divorced a husband.

The Earl and Countess of Granard have been stopping at Nuneham as guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Harcourt for the partridge shooting.

Procedure.

Puck.—Foreign Enemy—Then you think it is useless for us to attack the country by way of New York?

Assistant—Certainly! Our investigations tell us that it is impossible. First we would have to pass a trained army of customs inspectors, then a squad of quarantine officials, and what was left of us would be swept away by a picked delegation of reporters asking us how we liked the country.

ASQUITH'S SCHOOL DAYS

Recalled by Former Schoolmate of the Prime Minister of England—Some of His Characteristics

His political friends and foes alike are agreed that few men have achieved fame and honor in a more brilliant fashion than Mr. Asquith. All he has attained has been accomplished "off his own bat." As a youth he won a scholarship at the City of London School, and he has kept and educated himself ever since. The Premier entered the City of London School in 1864, when he was twelve years of age, and, as will be seen from the following reminiscences of Mr. Thomas Thwaites, of Barnet, who was at school with the Prime Minister, the latter soon began to give indications of his extraordinary capabilities.

"Within six months of his entry into the school," said Mr. Thwaites, "young Asquith had secured the Divinity prize and also the Latin prize. The following year he got the prize for general proficiency, and in 1866 the Classical Progress Prise; the next year the first Classical prize fell to him, as well as Sir William Titus's a scholarship. Then in 1869 and 1870 he was captain of the school, declaiming the fame of John Carpenter, the founder, in Greek, and gaining such prizes as the Latin Verse prize, English History prize, gold medal for general proficiency, and the Mowlem prize for English.

"It is surprising," continued Mr. Thwaites, laughingly, "that during the time Mr. Asquith was at school, if any boy thought of going in for some special prize he usually retired from the contest when he heard that young Asquith was also competing.

"Still, in spite of his brilliancy, we little dreamt that we were chumming with the future Prime Minister of England. It was not easy to imagine, in spite of young Asquith's brilliance in the schoolroom, that the boy who lived at Highbury and walked from there to the City, via Goswell Road, in order to save the bus fares which were so expensive in those days, would one day sit at the head of the British Cabinet.

"And Mr. Asquith himself has confessed that such an ambition never entered his mind; for he stated at a dinner given to him by the John Carpenter Club—that association of old boys of the City of London School who see to keep alive the memory of the founder—on the occasion of his being made Home Secretary, that occasionally on his way from school he would look with a 'sense of awe-struck solemnity at the Houses of Parliament and the members entering, little thinking of the part he himself would play there in the future.'

"I cannot say that young Asquith was popular. He was not good at games. He didn't like them. He seemed to stand aloof, and acquired the reputation of being what we term 'stand-offish.' Not because he was naturally unsociable, but simply because it was work, and work alone, which appealed to him. Boyish play was not part of his programme, and apparently he refused to force himself to be as other boys.

Very Tenacious

"I can picture him now—a small, rather square-headed lad, with a pronounced North-country accent and very taciturn manners, but whose speech, when he did let himself go, was very much to the point. There was one subject upon which he was very decided, and that was the great superiority of practically everything in the North of England to anything in the South. And as the majority of the boys of the school were from the South, this topic naturally led to very heated arguments. But young Asquith showed remarkable tenacity in sticking to his guns, and I have since heard that when, as a sixth-form boy, he became a member of the debating society as an advanced Liberal, he was even then strongly opposed to Women's Suffrage.

"Apropos of the doings of this debating society, I might mention that Dr. Abbott, the head master, has related that, as president of the society, he often attended the debates; but as his duties were practically nominal, and as time with him was very precious, it was his custom to take a batch of exercises from the schoolroom and correct these while presiding over the debates. But when Mr. Asquith entered the society he became so interested in the eloquence of the future Prime Minister that he found it difficult to concentrate his mind on the exercises, and, finally, whenever young Asquith held the floor, Dr. Abbot was obliged to resign himself to willing attention.

"The City School, now standing upon the Thames Embankment, looks a much more swell affair than the old building in Milk Street, but it is in the nature of things that it cannot hope to send forth many pupils destined to run a similar course to Mr. Asquith. Some of us old scholars may be Conservatives, but I don't care two straws what shade of politics we affect; in admiration of our old school fellow Tories and Liberals are at one."

TWO BIG CAMPAIGNS

Against Home Rule in Ireland and Disestablishment in Wales

There are two great "anti" campaigns going on at present. One against Home Rule in Ulster and another against Disestablishment in Wales, and both look very much like losing ventures. The defenders of the Welsh Establishment represent the Established Church in Wales, as a thoroughly national concern; while at the same time they are striving to excite English churchmen to join in an agitation against the Welsh national demand for Disestablishment on the ground that the Welsh Church is only a local branch of the English Church, and it would be most unjust, as they contend, "to single out for separate treatment four dioceses of the Province of Canterbury." In the campaign against Home Rule, it is urged that the measure has been twice defeated at the polls. At a Belfast meeting the other day one of the speakers said: "The English people have on two previous occasions given a most decided vote upon this question. They turned the Liberals out in 1886, and then later on, they were thoroughly beaten when they went to the country upon Home Rule."

One paper, however, replies to this as follows: "In 1886 it is true the Conservatives were returned to power, but official statistics show that though actual result in seats was a Conservative majority of 104, the majority warranted by voting strength was a Liberal one of 18. At the election of 1892 a government elected for Home Rule, or on a basis of Home Rule, as Mr. Balfour put it, was returned to power. The second Home Rule Bill followed in the same year, passed the Commons and was only defeated in the Lords. The next general election which resulted in a Tory victory did not take place till 1895, and was fought on different issues, Mr. Chamberlain's old age pension promise being one of them."

MARRIAGE SWINDLE

How a Man and Woman Made $10,000 in a Few Weeks

A man named Schilmann and a woman named Tururier, who passed as his daughter, have been sentenced to eight and to two years' imprisonment and to a fine of $100 in the Paris law courts for an amusing marriage swindle, out of which they had made $10,000 in the course of a few weeks. Schilmann advertised for a wife, and received several answers from middle-aged ladies. He wanted a wife, he explained, to be a mother to a grown-up daughter (this was Mlle. Tururier), and to give him $2,000 to put into a comfortable business in London. Schilmann, the prospective bride, and Mlle. Tururier set out for London, but the would-be bride invariably lost the other two on the journey, and always lost them after Schilmann had taken possession of her $2,000 "for safety." This little swindle was successfully carried out five times, as five disappointed brides gave evidence. A sixth fiancée was a female detective, who succeeded in unmasking the swindlers.

BACON AND SHAKESPEARE

Dr. Owen Searches for Evidence of the Authorship of Shakespeare's Plays

Dr. Orville W. Owen has not abandoned his search in the bed of the River Wye at Chepstow for the hidden manuscripts which, he is convinced, will prove to the world that Sir Francis Bacon was the author of Shakespeare's plays. "I shall resume operations shortly," said Dr. Owen. "I am more convinced than ever that I am on the right track, and if I can only get the permission of the Duke of Beaufort to dig near the historical castle walls, we shall there, I believe, find the buried manuscripts."

The excavations, it will be remembered, were abandoned for a time, mainly on account of the drought.

Famous Epitaphs

"The famous epitaph placed on the monument over her husband's grave by a woman up in Maine, 'Rest in peace until I join you,' has almost a duplicate in a sign on the door of a doctor's office in a downtown office building," says George A. Schneider. "This sign reads: '—— not absolutely abandon hope until you have seen me.'"

THE DUCHESS OF TALLEYRAND

Former wife of the Marquise de Castellane, and heiress to the Gould millions, whose lavish purchases of the famous grapes of Fontainebleau has been explained by the illness of her two-year-old son, the Duke de Sagan. Grapes were ordered for the little Duke, and his mother, the former Anna Gould, purchased vast quantities of them at $24 a bunch from the "wine stalks of the King" at Fontainebleau.

PUNISHED POOD RIOTERS

Sentences Imposed by the Court on Austrian Youths

The provisional criminal court imposed the severest possible sentences on the participants in the recent food riots in Austria. There were 23 defendants, mostly under 20 years of age, who received sentences amounting in the aggregate to ten years and seven months. The material charges against them were a slight wound to a policeman's ear, and the breaking of 18 street lamps. The average penalty for stone-throwing was one year's hard labor. A youth who shouted "Hurrah for Anarchy!" was sentenced to three months' hard labor, and a 14-year-old lad, for tripping up a policeman, to two years' hard labor.

Pays for itself in fuel saved

Don't allow a few extra dollars to prevent you from taking the perfect-cooking, sure-baking, easily-regulated Pandora in place of a cheaper stove. In a season or two Pandora will pay the difference in the fuel it will save—and it will keep on saving until it has paid for itself.

Pandora special flue construction makes fuel do double duty. Wide fire box is another fuel-economizer. The steel oven heats quicker than a cast oven, thus saving still more fuel. Further economizing features will be explained by the McClary Agent.

GAS ENGINES V. STEAM ENGINES

The Newest Means of Propelling the Great Dreadnoughts

In the future it is practically certain that the gas-engine will take the place of the steam- engine as a means of propelling our great ships through the water. Several of the warships in the British Navy are now fitted with oil as well as steam-engines, and their success has been astonishing.

The introduction of oil fuel is of great value from the naval standpoint: in the first place, it gets rid of the great difficulty of coaling at sea, and, in the second place, it enormously reduces the number of stokers carried. All the toil and strain of stoking is removed, and between an oil-fired and a coal-fired stokehold you have all the difference between an inferno and a holiday trip. No fires have to be cleaned out at short intervals. All the stoker has to do is to turn on or off his valves, supplying oil to the burners.

In the engine-room the change is as great. The gas-engine operates like the well-known petrol engine used to drive most motor-cars, the gas being mixed with air, and exploded in a number of cylinders. No smoke is given off, and there will be no funnels needed to carry off the fumes. Thus there will be no obstruction to the range of the guns and no vulnerable spot at which an enemy can aim.—Horners' Weekly.

TRAGEDY AT WEDDING PARTY

The meeting of two brothers who had been estranged from each other for some time resulted in a tragic wedding party the other day in Paris. To effect a reconciliation one of them, who was to be married, invited the other, at the request of his mother, to the wedding feast. The two brothers were reconciled, but the enmity soon reasserted itself, with the result that before the wedding feast was over the elder got up and tried to stab his younger brother. He cut him in the throat with a knife, and it was only with difficulty that the other guests succeeded in preventing him from committing murder. The result was that the bridegroom had to be carried to the hospital and his brother was sent to prison.

LIVING IN GERMANY

The Rise in the Cost of Necessaries Has Been Enormous

While Germany comparatively few years ago was one of the countries in Europe where living was cheapest, the rise in the cost of all the necessaries of life has recently been enormous and is telling severely on all classes in the empire except the very wealthy. Meetings of protest and suggestions are now being held almost daily in every town and city. The pressure, of course, is felt by the poorer classes, who must buy retail and in small quantities, but it is rapidly affecting the middle classes. A woman of the working class says that while two years ago she could keep herself, her husband, and his aged mother on $3 a week, she has now to spend nearly $6 for the same amount of food.

Take the case of bread alone. Last year the working classes got 6 pounds of bread for 10 cents, while now they only get 4 pounds for the same money. Other necessities have risen, some more, some less, but the result, on the whole, especially when the increased pressure of taxation is taken into account, is to arouse feelings that sooner or later are bound to find expression in tumults if not violence.

As to the causes and remedies, opinions differ. Popularly the rise is believed to be due to the new taxes imposed in 1909 and the pro-agrarian policy of the government. There is a general demand, therefore, for a diminution of the duties on foreign grains, for throwing open the frontier for the admission of Argentine meat, and in some quarters for a campaign against the cartels which correspond in Germany to the trusts of America. At the present moment each city is anxiously deliberating the local measures it can adopt to lessen the evil as it affects the poorer part of their populations.

SOMETHING NEW

"Fine day," observed a railway passenger to a seatmate.

"Yes."

"I say it's a fine day."

"And I agree with you," answered the other man, who was trying to read a newspaper.

"Be a lot of trouble with the crops, though, if the rainy weather comes along."

"Yes."

"It's all right, though, I think. Whatever happens is all right."

"Yes."

"I say, that was a good game at billiards last night?"

"Yes."

"I don't know anything about billiards myself, but I am told it's a fine game. I'd rather see good football. Wouldn't you?"

"Yes."

"Do you believe in the Suffragist movement?"

"Well——"

"Perhaps your wife is in sympathy with them?"

"Well——"

"Anything new in the paper this morning?"

"Yes. Man killed in a railway carriage."

"How?"

"He was talked to death!"

LEFT HIS CARD

"Hello, Chumley! Where did you get that black eye?"

"Oh! Only a lover's quarrel."

"You don't mean to say your girl did that to you?"

"Oh, no! It was her old lover, I mean."

BURGLARS' MESSAGES

Scotland Yard Detectives Never Solved a Certain One

It is a fact not generally known that professional "crooks" frequently use cyphers of their own invention in order to communicate with their confederates. Quite a number of these are preserved in the "Black Museum" at Scotland Yard, and all of them have been deciphered—save one.

This solitary exception, which has baffled all the experts, was found on a burglar named Macdonald, who was sentenced some time back at the Old Bailey to twenty years' penal servitude for the attempted murder of Detective-Inspector Hooper and other officers by shooting at them with a revolver while he was being taken in a four-wheeled cab to Euston Station in custody.

The Foreign Office, the Secret Service, and the Home Office experts, have all in turn tried their hands at it, but without success. Yet it is known to be a genuine cryptogram, and not a mere meaningless jumble of signs and letters.

Its construction must be very elaborate, for many of those that have been deciphered are of exceedingly intricate construction. One took six weeks to unravel. It was worth the trouble, however, for it revealed the clue to the hiding-place of $18,000 worth of stolen jewellery.

CANNIBALS STILL EXIST

Expedition Sets Out From Oxford for Goodenough Island

A remarkable expedition, headed by a scientific expert from Oxford university has just left London for New Zealand whence it will proceed direct to British Guinea. Goodenough Island, the most northerly district in the Dentrecasteaux Archipelago, which is the extreme south-easterly corner of British New Guinea has been selected at the headquarters of the expedition, and to this island the work of observation and exploration will be confined. The district has been chosen chiefly because of the fact that up to the present it has been absolutely untouched, notwithstanding the fact that it is the most accessible portion of Papua. Nothing at all is known of its people, who are believed to be an intermixture of the Melanesian and Papuan tribes. It is a well-known fact that cannibalism is practised on the island very extensively. There is one mission station on the coast, and occasionally a Government official pays a visit to the island, the interior of which, however, remains unexplored. Goodenough Island is of volcanic origin, 40 miles long and 30 miles across. The highest mountain is 8,000 feet, and it is believed to be the highest island of its size in the world.

WHAT IS MADNESS?

Never use the words "madness," "lunatic," or such obsolete terms, as they convey an entirely different meaning to what I hope to be able to show you is the real meaning of mental disorder. There is really no distinction between mental disorder and physical disorder. The distinction which has been made in the past is purely an arbitrary one, and one which, no doubt, has its basis upon superstition.

NEWS PARAGRAPHS ACROSS THE SEAS

Items of Human Interest from England, Ireland, Scotland and Wales

The death is announced of the Rev. Mother Mary Frances Healy, a native of Dublin, which took place at the Presentation Convent, George's Hill, Dublin. The deceased had been sixty-six years a nun, and had reached the age of ninety.

Irish in Workhouse Schools

At a meeting of the Newry Board of Guardians Mr. Murphy inquired if the teaching of Irish had been introduced into the workhouse school. It was far more important, he said, that they should maintain their individuality as a people by learning their native language, than wasting their time on vocal music and kindergarten.

Attacked by Wasps

A lady has had a terrible experience with wasps at Holywood, County Down. Some boys disturbed a nest of wasps. The insects swarmed out and attacked their tormentors, who beat a hasty retreat. The lady, unfortunately, passed at this moment, and was surrounded by a cloud of angry wasps, which speedily spread themselves on her face, head and hands, stinging her again and again. Half mad with pain and terror, the lady presently fainted.

New Temperance Movement

A "national forward movement in temperance" to commemorate the Coronation year was considered at a meeting of the Irish Temperance League in Belfast, Rev. Dr. McIlveen presiding. It is proposed to increase the membership of the juvenile temperance societies, and the Queen has become patron of the "million more scheme." The scheme was approved and recommended to the Churches and temperance organisations.

Leap from Blackfriars Bridge

Pushing a barrow load of sand up the incline on the south side of Blackfriars Bridge, Thomas Bartlett, a general dealer, living at Hertford Street, Kingsland, asked a passer-by to give him a hand. The man did so, and when the summit was reached, Bartlett, after remarking, "You have saved my life," leaped over the parapet into the river and was drowned.

Lazy Wife

At Warrington, Margaret Riley and James Riley, were charged with neglecting their children. Mr. A. Browne, who prosecuted, said the husband was not as much to blame as the wife, who had brought on such a sad condition of things owing to pure laziness. Drink was not the cause in this case. The husband gave his wife about $5 each week. The charge was withdrawn against the husband, and the wife was sent to gaol for one month.

Model Cottages

The village of Ashton, in Northamptonshire, has just been entirely rebuilt by Mr. N. N. Rothschild, the landlord. Ever ycottage in the village has been pulled down, and the new picturesque cottages erected are to be let to farm laborers at $25c. a week. They have five rooms, large gardens, hot and cold water, and baths. They are built of stone, with brown reed thatch from the Fen country. Only those employed on the farms on the estate are accepted as tenants.

Pulled a King from Bed

The attention of the War Office has been drawn to the case of George Rose, the oldest inhabitant of Woodstone, Peterborough, who has just celebrated his ninety-first birthday. He enlisted when seventeen years of age in the 89th Regiment, and in 1843 he volunteered to join the 54th Regiment to go to the Cabul war. During that campaign they were ordered to Secunderabad, and whilst there they marched out about 200 miles to capture the King of Kilburger. When the king was at length captured, Rose was amongst the number who raided the palace and extricated the Eastern potentate from beneath his bamboo bed, where he had hidden.

Mr. Carnegie's Birthplace

For some time the Carnegie Dunfermline trustees have been effecting improvements at the little dwelling where their founder was born. They have torn down the adjoining property, and they are repairing Mr. Carnegie's birthplace in keeping with its old-world aspect in order to preserve it for future generations. They have applied to the Dunfermline Dean of Guild Court for permission to erect certain outside premises for the use

"The Liver Pills act So Naturally and Easily."

Such a statement, coming from the cashier of a bank, shows what confidence responsible people have in these pills. Mr. A. L. Wilson after trying them wrote:

"I have used Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills and also your Anti-Pain Pills, on myself, with good results. The Liver Pills act so naturally and so easily that I scarcely know that I have taken a pill. Frequently being troubled with headache I take an Anti-Pain Pill and get immediate relief in every case."
A. L. Wilson, Sparta, Ill.
Mr. Wilson was for a number of years cashier of the First National Bank of Sparta.

Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills are different from others. Many kinds of liver pills are "impossible" after one trial on account of their harshness. Dr. Miles' Nerve and Liver Pills do not act by sheer force but in an easy, natural way, without griping or undue irritation. They are not habit forming.

A MERE FORMALITY

"Yes, sir," said the pale, youthful suitor; "I have come to ask for your daughter's hand. She is fair as lilies, sweet as honeysuckle, tender as a violet, charming——"

"Is that Mary you're talking about?" asked papa.

"Yes, sir. It is a mere formality, I know, this asking for your daughter's hand; but we thought it would be pleasing to you if it were observed."

Mary's papa stiffened.

"And may I inquire," he asked, "who suggested that asking my consent to Mary's marriage was a mere formality?"

"You may, sir," replied the young man simply. "It was Mary's mother!"

ROYAL WEDDING POSTPONED

Heir to Austria's Throne to Marry Princess Zita

The date of the wedding of the Archduke Charles Francis Joseph, the future heir-apparent of the Austro-Hungarian throne, and Princess Zita of Parma, which was originally fixed for October 4, the name-day of the Emperor, and postponed to the 23rd or 24th of October, has again been changed.

It is now stated that the marriage will not take place until the end of October. The Emperor will be present at the ceremony at the castle of the bride's family in Schwarzau.

It is on account of the fact that the repairs at Hetzendorf Castle, which will be the home of the couple after their marriage, have not been completed that the date of the wedding has been put back. The Emperor's wedding present to Princess Zita will be a diadem in brilliants, worth $18,000.

FINE FILLERS

"Johnny, you shouldn't have eaten those fancy cakes. They were placed only on the table to fill up."
"Yes, ma. That's what I ate them for."

JIU-JITSU NO USE

A cricket club formed a gymnasium for the use of its members during the winter months, and an instructor was engaged to teach jiu-jitsu. Recently one of the cricketers turned up with a bandaged head, and said some youth had inflicted the injury.
"What!" exclaimed the jiu-jitsu instructor. "You mean to say you let a youth knock you about like that! Why didn't you try jiu-jitsu?"
"I couldn't."
"Nonsense! There's no conceivable situation to which jiu-jitsu cannot be successfully applied. Show me where he gripped you."
"I'm sorry to say he didn't grip me anywhere. He dropped a brick on my head from a third-floor window."

TOO BAD

Borrow:—"Until now I have never had to ask you for a small loan."
Money:—"And until now I have never been obliged to refuse you."

SHOCKED BY A SAILOR

A passenger on a Transatlantic liner had an experience recently which was calculated to make her believe that a seaman is not apt to waste many thoughts on his personal troubles.

The seaman who brought the traveller to this opinion had, the second day out, a fall which resulted in a bad cut on the head. She was most solicitous in her inquiries as to his welfare when she saw the captain that night, and would undoubtedly have continued her sympathy had not a rough sea called to mind her own suffering.

Four days later, however, when she emerged, white and weak, from her state-room, she suddenly remembered the poor sailor. In the course of the day she encountered him, with a strip of plaster on his forehead.

"How is your head?" she asked kindly, as he passed by her bent on some duty.

"West by south, ma'am," was the reply.

The Peerless Peninsular
a durable cast-iron range with modern conveniences

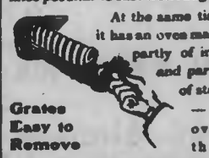
You don't want to use a range as a step-ladder—not as the ordinary thing—but you do want a strong, well-built range. This picture is given here to show that the oven door — a weak spot in most ranges—is a firm, strong piece of construction in the Peninsular and it is typical of the whole make-up of this durable range.

Some people prefer a cast-iron range but want one or two features usually found only in steel ranges.

The Peerless
is designed for just such people.

It has the perfectly-fitting doors and parts, the firm, substantial body and the cosey, homelike appearance peculiar to cast-iron ranges.

Low Closet for Pots and Pans



Easy to Remove Grates

At the same time it has an oven made partly of iron and partly of steel — an oven that will heat quickly and evenly all over.

It has a large oven, two inches deeper than any other range of the same size, just large enough to cook four pies at once.

It has a drop oven door, which is not usual on a cast-iron range.

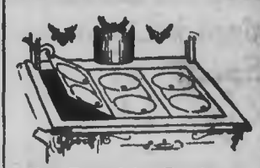
These are all things that you can see—very important things, but not more so than the things you cannot see—the interior construction, which decides whether or not your pies will burn, whether your oven will twist and bend, whether it will be perfectly tight so as to keep out dust and smoke, whether it will wear.

These unseen points you can be sure of when you buy a Peerless Peninsular, or in fact any Peninsular range.

Fifty years of building stoves — honest stoves — are behind every range that bears the name "Peninsular." That name says the materials are good — the flue arrangement is good—the oven is built to heat evenly—the range will wear.

All modern conveniences have been embodied in the Peerless, too.

It may be had with a hot water reservoir and a steel warming closet or not, as desired. The warming closet has a drop door like the oven, making it easy to pull out dishes and adding double shelf room when needed.



Top Raised for Broiling.

There is a Peninsular range to suit every purse and to please every taste in range architecture.

"The Cost"
illustrates some of the more popular lines and explains why Peninsular ranges cost less in the long run than others. Don't buy a range before reading this book. It's free.

the first glimmering intelligence in the child, there is expression of law, let there be taught respect for it and obedience to it. It is the royal road to virtue, to good citizenship, it is the only road.

We know that music is pleasant, and home is not home where there are no songs or sweet harmonies; but a knowledge of the piano will not help a woman discharge her wifely duties, and a smattering of French or an ability to waltz gracefully, will do but little towards preparing a palatable dinner for a husband when he comes home hungry.

• • •

Society at the present day demands that girls shall be what they call accomplished; and to fulfill this demand the mothers of Christendom teach their daughters that a knowledge of all that belong to life's duties at home is not one of the requirements, that manual labour must be consonant with drawing-room cultivation. And so their lily hands slip idly over the piano keys; they waltz in the most approved style; simper a little French or German, quote poetry—and society says they are accomplished. Doubtless they are, and by-and-ly, as all modern fashionables do, they win a husband.

• • •

Let us say to you, young man, that pluck wins more battle than luck. Wishing is the easiest way in the world to get a poor living. Looking for the fortunate star to rise is like standing on the ocean's strand waiting and watching for wealth-laden ships to come over the sea that never "put out." Wishing brings a small income, and the taxes on it are enormous.

• • •

Profanity never did any man the least good. No man is the richer, the happier, or wiser for it. It commends no one to any society. It is disgusting to the refined; abominable to the good; insulting to those with whom we associate; degrading to the mind; unprofitable, needless and injurious in society. Young man don't be profane.

• • •

When a man has established a home has a wife and children, the most important duties of his life have fairly begun. The errors of his youth may be obliterated, the faults of his early days may be overlooked, but from the moment of his marriage he commences to write an ineffable history; not by pen and ink, but by deeds, by which he must ever afterwards be reported and judged.

• • •

Setting a young man afloat with money left him by his relatives is like tying a bladder under the arms of one who cannot swim; ten chances to one he will lose the bladder and go to the bottom. Teach him to swim and he will not need the bladder. Give your child a good education. See to it that his morals are pure, his mind cultivated, and his whole nature made subservient to the laws which govern man, and you will have given what will be of more value than the wealth of the Indies. You have given him a start which no misfortune can deprive him of.

A TALK ON RHEUMATISM

Telling How to Cure This Painful Malady

This article is for the man or woman who suffers from rheumatism who wants to be cured, not merely relieved — but actually cured. The most a rheumatic sufferer can hope for in rubbing something on the tender, aching joint, is a little relief. No lotion or liniment ever did or ever can make a cure. The rheumatic poison is rooted in the blood. Therefore rheumatism can only be cured when the poisonous acid is driven out of the blood. That's why rubbing and liniments and outward applications are no good — they can't reach the cause in the blood. Any doctor will tell you this is true. If you want something that will go right to the root of the trouble in the blood every time take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. They make new rich blood which drives out the poisonous acid and cures rheumatism to stay cured. This is a solemn truth which has been proved in thousands of cases, and the following is a striking instance. Mrs. W. H. Elnor, Sarnia, Ont., says: "I feel it my duty to recommend Dr. Williams Pink Pills as they completely cured me of rheumatism after I had been almost an invalid for three years. I doctored with two skilled doctors and took electric treatment, but without benefit. On going to a third doctor he recommended mineral baths as the only thing that would help me. After taking this treatment for some time I felt that I was really growing worse instead of better, and I began to think there was no cure for me and that I was doomed to be a helpless sufferer. For some months I discontinued all treatment and then I was advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. After taking a few boxes I could notice a distinct improvement, and I continued taking the Pills for several months when the cure was complete. That is some two years ago, and I have ever since been perfectly free from the trouble. I would therefore advise anyone afflicted with rheumatism to take Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, as they certainly made a remarkable cure in my case."

These pills are sold by all medicine dealers or may be had by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

CRIPPLED BY RHEUMATISM AND KIDNEY TROUBLE 10 YEARS!

Morrisey's No. 7 Cured him. Other Doctors unable to help.

RANDOLPH, MASS., May 15, 1911.

"I suffered from Rheumatism for the last ten years, and at the suggestion of a friend I decided to try your No. 7 Tablets. Before I had taken one dozen I could notice a change—and as I always had a bad pain across my kidneys I found to my great delight the pain was going by the time I had finished the first box. I used several boxes, and my Rheumatism gradually left me. I gave a box to a friend to try, and he is getting well very fast. No. 7 is a Great Remedy, and was the only thing that would help me. However, before using it I had tried everything I ever heard of, besides several good doctors, and all without success. I hope every sufferer will read of my cure, and try No. 7 if they want quick and sure relief."

John P. Healey,
General Merchant.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

HUNTED BY A WALRUS.

The Big Bull Got Quite Sociable Before He Was Done For.

In George Borup's "A Tenderfoot With Peary" appears an exciting incident of walrus hunting. During a raid upon a herd of fifty walrus asleep on a pan "it was blowing some, and the choppy waves made the shooting look as if the guns had spiral barrels." The ineffective target practice produced these hair raising developments a few seconds later: "Suddenly a giant bull rose out of the water just along side of Weshar koupsi. He threw his harpoon, but as the barb came off he might as well have heaved a lead pencil. The walrus gave a derisive grunt, dived, and a second later shot out of the water on the other side, deluged us with liquid and came down slap bang on the gunwale of the boat opposite me.

"By this time Weshar koupsi was high in the air and out for an altitude record. Instead of throwing his harpoon he threw his soul into his yells and just spat in the brute's face. The other huskies were trying to back water or hit him over the head with the oars, nearly sideswiping me and incidentally short circuiting their cussing at Weshar koupsi, the walrus and everything in general.

"All this time the walrus was sitting alongside of me, asking if there were any more at home like Weshar koupsi. It was easier to pull his whiskers or smash his mug with my fist than shoot. If I held the gun to my shoulder the muzzle would stick beyond his head, so, firing from the hip, I gave him the entente cordiale."

GETTING THE FACTS.

His Second Story Probably Differed From the First One.

Long experience as a consulting attorney has given Mr. Mooney a judicial habit of mind. He never accepts the facts at par value, but always reads those facts into the rear office and drops acid in their eyes. The other day a friend rushed in, warm and red.

"Mooney," said the friend excitedly, 'I've been insulted. Hinks just met me and called me all sorts of names. We've had trouble over that partition matter, you know. He said I was a pettifogger and a thief and a scoundrel and a perjurer and a wire haired thug."

"Um!" said Mr. Mooney, sitting farther down in his chair and looking at the speaker over his glasses. "Um! And what do you propose to do about it?"

"What do I propose to do about it? Why, I was so astounded at the moment that I could make no reply at all. But, now that I have somewhat recovered myself, I have determined to go down to Hinks' office and knock his block off. I'll beat him to a quivering froth."

"Um!" said Mr. Mooney, slipping down a notch. "Um! So would I if any one called me the names that Hinks called you. But before you go suppose you sit down with me for a moment."

The indignant friend took a chair.

"Now," said Mooney, dangling his eyeglasses, "what are the facts in the case?"—Cincinnati Times-Star.

No Caste in Snores.

The cause and cure of snoring concern all classes, says the London Chronicle. We have record that both the house of lords and the workhouse have suffered from it. There was a former Duke of Norfolk who fell into the habit of sleeping audibly in the lords, and it happened that he was hard at it on one occasion when a bill concerning the parish of Great Snoring, in Norfolk, came before the house. The roar of laughter with which the bill's title was greeted awakened the duke and relieved his fellow peers. At the other end of the social scale we have the poor law commission minority's commendation of the ingenious workhouse master who divided the old men at night so that the snorers and the deaf men slept in one ward and the rest in another.

AN EARLY EXPLORER.

Late Henry Y. Hind's Labrador Journey Was a Memorable One.

Mr. Henry Y. Hind, the famous explorer, who died a year or two ago in Nova Scotia, left Quebec on June 16, 1861, on board the steamer Arabian for Moisie, on his mission for the Canadian Government to explore the interior of the Labrador peninsula, says The Quebec Telegraph. He was accompanied by his brother William, who had joined the expedition for the purpose of making sketches and water color drawings of scenery. Indians, and any novelty in the vegetable or mineral world, which it might be desirable to transfer to his portfolio. Mr. J. F. Gaudet and Mr. Edward Calay were appointed by the Crown Lands Department of the Canadian Government to accompany Mr. Hind as surveyors. He also took with him from Quebec, five French-Canadian voyageurs to serve as guides.

The Moisie River had never previously been explored by white men, though a portion of it had been traveled by the missionaries to the Indians. Mr. Hind's attention had been first drawn to the Moisie as a gateway to Labrador, by Abbe Ferland, of Laval University, who showed him a chart constructed by seven Montagnais Indians at the request of Pere Arnaud, the zealous Oblat missionary to the Montagnais Indians of the interior, who is still, after more than fifty years' labor among them, ministering to the members of the tribe at Bersimis. The chart exhibited the route followed by these Indians from Hamilton Inlet on the Atlantic coast, up Esquimaux River, a continuation of the Ashwanipi, to a great lake in the interior called Petshirupau—thence by an unbroken water communication through the Ashwanipi River and a lake of the same name to near the head waters of the west branch of the Moisie, which they reached by crossing a narrow divide, and thus descended to the Gulf of St. Lawrence. According to the Indian chart, the Ashwanipi flows through five degrees of longitude, traversing the elevated tableland of the Labrador peninsula in a direction roughly parallel to the north coast of the Gulf of St. Lawrence. Mr. Hind described the chart in question as a curious and interesting illustration of the remarkable capabilities possessed by these Indians to delineate the general features of a country through which they have passed, and as far as he was able to compare it with his own surveys, it was found singularly exact and accurate.

The report of Mr. Hind's exploration of the valley of the Moisie fills two large volumes, containing as it does, not only an account of the country great deal of detailed information about Indian tribes of the interior, the Montagnais and the Nascapees. Some of the sketches of Indian life made by Mr. William Hind and published as illustrations to the report are extremely interesting. The exploring party ascended the Moisie to a point about one hundred and twenty miles due north of the mouth of the mouth of the river, after encountering great difficulties, for in many instances high precipitious cliffs hem in heavy rapids, which have to be poled up. Indian cannibalism in comparatively modern times was satisfactorily established on more than one occasion by Mr. Hind, and in some instances on the evidence of Pere Arnaud, though the good missionary, who is very much devoted to his Indian converts, many of whom he has separated from polygamous alliances, declares positively that the eating of human flesh was never resorted to by them as a matter of choice, but only from stern necessity, when threatened with death from hunger.

A Modest Official.

Astonishing as it may seem, there is one man in Toronto so modest that even when he was invited to lunch with the King he refused to let a newspaper reporter publish that fact.

Probably, almost certainly, he was the only man in the city to be so honored. He is related to the Lord Mayor of London, and the latter sent him an invitation to the Lord Mayor's dinner to the King, which was part of the coronation program.

Quite by accident, a reporter on a Toronto daily learned of the invitation. He sought out the invited man, who happens to be in a rather prominent civic position, and asked for further information. To his amazement the modest one refused to even let him publish the bald fact.

"Well, all I have to say is, that if it had been some other officials who had received such an invitation, no time would have been lost in sending typewritten notices, with full particulars and photographs, to all the papers in town," said the scribe as he walked away.

But the very modest man merely smiled. And because he is really and truly modest, his name is withheld in this little tale.—Canadian Courier.

Victoria nd Her Tourists.

The Victoria Daily Colonist had an optimistic editorial not long ago. The editor remarked that in the near future tourists would spend $20,000,000 in Vancouver Island. Eighty thousand visited Victoria last season.

The railways seem to be paying particular attention to the Coast. The C.P.R. has a Chalet hotel in mind for Cameron Lake. That company will construct a trail up Mount Arrowsmith, and in the picturesque hilly district about this mountain a cabin or two. The Canadian Northern is steering past Cowichan Lake, where there is some magnificent scenery, including a cataract 1,500 feet high.

All this activity is in the neighborhood of Victoria, and the city expects to benefit from it.

Dukes Now?

As the Canadian Pacific's fleet are all "Princesses," the Grand Trunk vessels are all "Princes,' and it is said that the coastal service to be formed by the Canadian Northern out of Port Mann, B.C., will be named after "Dukes." Royalty and nobility will surely be well represented by the liners of the Pacific Coast.—Canadian Century.

Maud—Charlie is so poetical. When I accepted him he said he felt like an immigrant entering a new world.

MR. R. R. HALL UNANIMOUSLY NOMINATED TO CONTEST WEST PETERBORO' FOR LEGISLATURE

Enthusiastic Liberal Mass Meeting Was Held This Afternoon at Which the Representative of the Liberal Party to Contest the Coming Election Was Unanimously Chosen ----Mr. Hall's Acceptance Heartily Acclaimed.

A well-attended mass meeting of the Liberals of West Peterborough, in which both city and country were well represented, was held in the Liberal committee rooms, this afternoon, for the purpose of nominating a candidate in the general elections.

Mr. J. J. Hartley, president of the West Riding Liberal Association, occupied the chair, and briefly stated the object of the meeting, which was to nominate a candidate to contest the representation of the riding in the general elections, prematurely brought on by Sir James Whitney. He was sure that with united action and with a good, aggressive candidate the West Riding could be handsomely won for the Liberal party.

On motion of Mr. G. A. Gillespie, city, seconded by Mr. Thomas Graham, Reeve of Smith Township, Mr. R. R. Hall was unanimously nominated and in a brief address accepted the candidature.

CHINESE GOVERNMENT SUPPRESSING THE NEWS ---DISASTERS REPORTED

Special Wire to the Examiner.

PEKIN, CHINA, OCT. 21.—The newspapers and prominent native citizens are calling loudly upon the Government to publish the full facts of the Imperial reverses as it is felt here that disastrous news has been received by the Government from the outlying provinces this morning, but not given given out. The news flowing through from the disturbed districts from unofficial sources, is extremely alarming. One report says that four gunboats of the Imperial Navy, on the big river were blown up by traitorous marines, who left their ships and joined the revolutionists, and that Admiral Suhchen Ping and one thousand men were killed. It is stated, too, that the revolutionaries' guns command the cities of Canton and Chang Sha and that the fall of both these cities is imminent. The foreign legations here are holding a meeting to consider the financial aspect as it affects their nations. On the whole the situaion is more serious than ever to-day.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENTS IN THE MURDER CHARGES

Special Wire to the Examiner.

BOSTON, OCT. 21.—Further sensational developments were made today, when Rev. C. V. T. Richeson, charged with the murder of his former sweetheart, nineteen-year-old Avis Linnell, met William Hasen, the Newton druggist, who declared that Richeson had purchased a quantity of cyanide of potassium from him a week ago Tuesday. Hasen walked at police headquarters and, facing the accused, told the events preceding the tragedy. He said that Richeson walked into his store and said: "I've got a dog at home that is creating a disturbance; she will be a nuisance unless I can kill her soon." The druggist, who has known Richeson for years, suggested chloroform, but the minister said he wanted something that will work quick." The druggist then gave him potassium enough he said to kill three dogs. Just as he was leaving, Richeson said: "It must seem mysterious to you about my buying this, but you can keep a secret." The landlord of Richeson says he has never owned a dog.

TORONTO STUDENTS IN WILD RIOT WITH POLICE

Special Wire to the Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT 21.—Following Toronto University field day and theatre night, there was one of the wildest student demonstrations last night in the history of Toronto, when several hundred students from various educational institutions here, were engaged with the police for possession of Queens' park, where university buildings are located. The affair developed from an attempt on the part of a contingent of students to enter and make disturbance at Annesly Hall, the woman's residence of Victoria Methodist College. The city police were called in to drive them off and met with stout resistance. Both sides were then reinforced about one o'clock and the police drew revolvers in some cases where the mob got threatening. There was a succession of charges with drawn batons through the university grounds by the police, and many students' heads were cracked. There will be disorderly charges and the expulsion of several Ontario students engaged in the encounter.

ST. GEORGE'S SOCIAL EVENING WAS A GRAND SUCCESS

A social evening under the auspices of St. George's Society was held last evening in the Sons of England Hall, at which over three hundred people were present. Although the society has only been in existence for a few months, such has been the good work done by the officers, and the energetic way in which they have put forward their claims before their fellow countrymen, that a large proportion of the English population of Peterborough are now members. Many cases of real need have been brought to the notice of the Relief committee and in every case, without exception, help of some kind has been given them.

Mr. W. Guy, the general president, occupied the chair and introduced the various entertainers to the notice of the audience. The programme was as follows:

Pianoforte solo—Miss Jay.
Song—Mrs. Wells, (encore.)
Recitation—Miss Edith Pryce.
Song—Mr. Deakin.
Song—Mrs. B Read (encore.)
Ventriloquial sketch—Mr. Cole.
Recitation—Mr. Dohn (encore.)
Address—Mr. W H. Pretty.
Comic Song—Mr. Nicholls (encore.)
Song—Mr. Harrison.
Duet—Mrs. Read and Mr. Deakin.
God Save the King.

A vote of thanks to those taking part was proposed by Mr. Stocker and seconded by Mr. Pretty, who also proposed that a vote of thanks be accorded the ladies and gentlemen who kindly provided the refreshments for the evening

GAME IS OFF; NO SPORTING EXTRA TO-DAY

Raining Harder Than Ever at Shibe Park To-day and Giants and Athletics Will Have to Wait Until Monday.

FAVOURS NEW YORK

Special Wire to the Examiner.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 21.—Rain fell heavier than ever in Shibe Park to-day, and, as a result, the fourth game of the world's series was again postponed until the first clear day. The fans here and in New York are naturally greatly disappointed over the repeated failure of the weatherman to make good and this feeling is shared by the Athletic players and management. The delay greatly favours the Giants, as with nearly a week's rest they feel they will come back like a new team. Mathewson is fit and ready to work any time and it is thought the team has got over its rattled condition, and will be in mid-season form when called upon.

Owing to the fact that there is no world's series game this afternoon, there will be no sporting extra of the Examiner to-day. However, the Examiner will have full reports of the rest of the games of the worlds series when ever the teams get together.

FINGER WAS CRUSHED

A painful accident befell Mr. George Peters of Parnell street yesterday afternoon. He was engaged in carting with a team and vehicle belonging to the Peterborough Fuel and Cartage Co., and when attempting to close the doors at the rear of the car, he got his fingers jammed in them. It is feared that a finger will have to be amputated.

Mr. John McCarney, an Employee of Adam Hall, Victim of a Very Painful Accident Yesterday

RESTING EASILY

Mr. John McCarney, a moulder in the employ of Adam Hall & Sons, was the victim of a very painful accident yesterday while at work in the company's foundry. He was carrying a ladle of molten metal, and tripped over something on the floor. In his fall the molten iron was thrown over him, very seriously burning his shoulder and abdomen, and scorching his face and neck. Dr. Frederick was called in and attended to his injuries. Mr. McCarney is resting more easily to-day, but will be confined to his house for some time.

He will have the sincere sympathy of his many friends.

HORSE WAS REFRACTORY

His Honour Judge Huycke, while out motoring in Apsley this week, met with an accident, that necessitated his being confined to his home for a few days. He was endeavouring to persuade a refractory horse to pass the car, which was standing on the side of the road, when the animal knocked him down. His injuries, however, were confined to a severe shaking up and he is able to be out and around to-day.

DOCTOR'S PRESCRIPTION TO CURE ECZEMA

The most advanced physicians of this country and Europe are now prescribing a wash of Wintergreen, Thymol and other soothing and healing ingredients for the cure of Eczema, Psoriasis and all other forms of skin trouble. This compound is known as D.D.D. Prescription.

Dr. Holmes, the well known skin specialist, writes: "I am convinced that the D.D.D. Prescription is as much a specific for Eczema as is quinine for malaria. I have been prescribing the D.D.D. remedy for years."

We ourselves vouch for the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema and absolutely know that it will take away the itch the instant you apply it.

Drop into our store and get posted on this wonderful remedy for Eczema and the other skin troubles. Or write the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. P.E., 49 Colborne street, Toronto, for free sample bottle. They will be glad to send it immediately. McDermid and Jury and E. L. Payne.

A YOUNG BOY SHOT

Willie Robinson of Keene Is Seriously Injured by Accidental Discharge of 22 Calibre Rifle.

BULLET IN GROIN

About 1.30 o'clock yesterday afternoon while Willie Robinson, son of Mr. W. Robinson, Keene, was going towards his home, from the Village in company with a young lad named Hamilton of St. Catharines, who, with his father, is spending the week at Mr. Ashburn's duck lodge, a "22" rifle, carried by Hamilton, was accidentally discharged into the groin of his companion. He was immediately taken to Dr. McWilliams' office, where the bullet was probed for, but so far as can be learned, without success. He is in a serious condition, but unless complications set in, not thought to be dangerous.

OLD HER TO REST BUT SHE COULDN'T

BUT MRS. CHEFF FOUND A CURE IN DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS.

She Suffered from Rheumatism, Neuralgia and other Symptoms of Diseased Kidneys—Dodd's Kidney Pills made her Strong and Healthy

PEVERIL, VAUDREUIL, CO, QUE Oct. 20.—(Special)—One more of the tired, pain-wrecked women of Canada has found relief and new life in Dodd's Kidney Pills. She is Mrs. Jos. Cheff, of this place, and she never tires of telling her neighbours of her wonderful cure or singing the praises of the good old remedy that brought it about.

"I suffered from Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Violent Headaches and Palpitation of the Heart," Mrs. Cheff states. "My back ached. I was always tired and nervous and I had weak spells. My doctor told me to just rest, but that was just what I couldn't do, till reading of the cures of others led me to try Dodd's Kidney Pills.

"From the first dose they helped me. I soon left my bed and started to do my ordinary housework.

"I took in all twelve boxes of Dodd's Kidney Pills, and now my health is excellent. I recommend Dodd's Kidney Pills to all suffering women."

Thousands of Canadian women will tell you that Dodd's Kidney Pills are the one sure relief for suffering women.

STUDY OF THE MOON

The first meeting for the season of the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society will be held on Tuesday evening next, Oct 23rd, in the Collegiate Institute, and an interesting programme has been arranged for the occasion. A report of summer observations will be given, and there will be a lecture beginning the study of the moon, which will be continued through the season. The address will be profusely illustrated. A cordial invitation is extended to all wishing to hear this lecture or the others in the series. There is no admission charge, and everyone is invited.

COMPLETION OF NEW GRAIN ROUTE WILL MEAN MORE TRAINS FOR PETERBORO'

Expected That This City Will Get Much Better Service From the East and That Through Trains to the West Will Come Over This Route Because of the Saving in Time and Better Grades.

The announcement that the Canadian Pacific Railway has the entire steel laid on its new line from Coldwater to the Toronto-Ottawa line, at Bethany, is the latest announcement in the completion of still another important stretch in railway transportation facilities in Ontario. It will take two months or more to complete the ballasting of this new line, and there is reason to believe that it will then play an important part in the grain carrying trade from Georgian Bay to the Seaboard.

The completion of the Peterborough-Victoria Harbour branch of the C.P.R. means more to Peterborough than most people imagine. The fact that trainloads of grain from Western Canada will pass through Peterborough may not count for very much, but in the passenger service, which it is stated will soon be established, Peterborough will occupy an improved position.

It is pretty generally admitted by officials of the C.P.R. that many of the through passenger trains which now go by way of Ottawa and North Bay will run through Peterborough and take the new Coldwater line. It is much shorter than any other line to the West, and the grades are much more favourable to more rapid transit. An addition of two or more passenger trains each day passing through Peterborough will certainly give us a better passenger service with Montreal and other eastern points.

The local passenger service on this line should be of benefit to Peterborough and Peterborough merchants. The village along the route of the new Coldwater line for some distance out will have more direct communication with Peterborough than heretofore enjoyed by them.

What Peterborough now wants in transportation facilities is connection with the Canadian Northern, Toronto-Ottawa line, and a railroad running north in the back portion of Peterborough County, so that the hundreds of acres of good hard-wood timber, still standing, can be manufactured in finished products right here in Peterborough.

BRANCH OF THE ARMY SERVICE CORPS LIKELY TO BE ESTABLISHED HERE

Peterborough is Fast Becoming a Military Centre---Growth of the City is Shown in the Manner in Which the Size of the Militia Corps is Being Increased---Some Interesting Garrison Items.

It is pretty generally believed that Peterborough will shortly become an important military centre. There are several substantial reasons for believing this. The geographical position that Peterborough occupies in this relation to this military district, the possessing of such splendidly-appointed new armouries as adorn Central Park square, and the fact that the city is the chief industrial and commercial centre between Kingston and Toronto, surrounded by no better recruiting ground in the Province, all point to the assumption that a very few years hence will see Peterborough occupying a prominent position in the militia life of Ontario.

The Peterborough Garrison.

Few cities of its size in Canada, outside, of course, of those cities in which branches of the permanent forces are maintained, can boast of having more military units than Peterborough. We have a good, live city regiment in the 57th, Peterborough Rangers, the 24th Battery of Canadian Field Artillery, and a squadron of the 3rd Prince of Wales Canadian Dragoons. The headquarters of the latter regiment are, as a matter of fact, at Peterborough.

In addition to this there is a prospect of there being located here at a very early date, a company of the Canadian Army Service Corps. The Canadian Army Service Corps is a branch of the Militia new to most Peterborough people, but it plays an important part in the organization of all military camps. The idea of placing a company of this branch of the active Militia in Peterborough would tend to show that Peterborough may be looked upon as a military centre, with its own Army Service Corps to cater to its requirements. The fact that a company of the Army Service Corps is not already in operation in Peterborough is due to the absence of men with sufficient enthusiasm. There is reason to believe, however, that before long the establishment, in so far as officers are concerned, will be completed and the unit will be on a smoothly running basis. It will be a substantial addition to the local garrison, consisting of one major in command, one captain, three lieutenants, ad about 97 non-commissioned officers and men. The establishment provides for about 15 riding and 30 draught horses.

A Camp of Instruction.

With the establishment of a branch of the Army Service Corps at Peterborough, it should require only a little exertion to have an annual camp of instruction at Peterborough. A splendid brigade camp could be organized, consisting of the 16th Regiment of Prince Edward County, the 40th Regiment of Northumberland, the 46th of Durham, the 45th of Victoria, the 10th Brigade Canadian Field Artillery, and the 3rd Dragoons.

The fact that the Minister of Militia of Canada is Colonel Hughes, from this district, should make it comparatively easy to land a camp of instruction at Peterborough. It would not only tend to increase the military enthusiasm of the city, but it would mean considerable to the merchants and others, who would supply the camp with provisions, while, as a rule, soldiers spend a good deal of the camp pay before leaving for home.

The Rifle Range.

Another factor that is bound to prove stimulating to the military spirit of Peterborough is the establishment of a new rifle range. The money for this has already been voted, the delay in the matter being due entirely to the fact that it was found very difficult to secure a suitable site. A site has at last been chosen in Otonabee, and has been approved of by the Militia Department. It is expected that active work on the ranges will be commenced in the course of a few months. One of the greatest drawbacks to having a military camp of instruction at Peterborough has been the fact that no rifle range was available for rifle practice. There will be no drawback in this respect now, and, with a branch of the Army Service Corps, it remains only for the citizens themselves to get busy and make Peterborough the training ground for the active Militia of this district.

UNION BANK WILL BE OPENED NEXT WEEK

The Union Bank will open some time during the next week. This was the information received from an unofficial source to-day by an Examiner reporter. The bank was ready for occupation nearly a week ago, in fact the fixtures were expected on the 14th inst., but were delayed. The fittings will arrive before Tuesday, according to information received, and the bank will be opened some time during the latter part of the week. There was considerable delay in getting even the prism glass for the building, the rush of business is so great. All the plumbing, lighting, etc., is now completed.

MEETING OF LIBERALS TO-NIGHT.

Liberals and Liberal supporters are reminded of the meeting to be held to-night for purposes of organization in the Liberal quarters, over the office of the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company, George street, near Brock. It is to be hoped that there will be as large an attendance as possible, as matters of moment will be considered.

THE VALUE OF SMALL SAVINGS.

If a young man, fifteen years of age were determined to save three car fares a week, and to pay the 15 cents thus saved every week until he was 60, to the Canadian Government for the purchase of an Annuity, the result of his thrift would be that from and after 60, he would receive $25.18 every three months so long as he lived. If he died before he was 60, all that he had paid in, with three per cent. compound interest, would be refunded to his heirs, and if he died just before his first instalment of Annuity fell due his heirs would inherit $771.70. A postcard sent to the Superintendent of Canadian Government Annuities, Ottawa, giving your age last birthday, will secure you information as to what an Annuity will cost.

ALL MAIL THE HERALD.

The Montreal Herald is to be very heartily congratulated upon having been able to celebrate its hundredth anniversary by the laying of the corner stone of a splendid new building. The Herald has well deserved the long life that it has spent in doing national service, and still deserves the future career of usefulness and success which, as at this time, lies open to it under more favourable material auspices. The Herald is a sane, solid, newspaper, that may well serve as a model in these respects, as in the respect of its enterprise and genuine newspaper quality to the journalism of Canada. The Examiner, as a lad of three score, congratulates the centenarian, and wishes the Herald continued success.

THE FORTUNES OF WAR.

It is said that the position of High Court Judge, left vacant through the death of the late Justice McMahon, is offered to the Hon. Mr. Foy, Attorney-General of the Province of Ontario. This position would have certainly have gone to Mr. Daniel O'Connell, of Peterborough, if the Liberal fortunes of war had gone his way. If Mr. Foy declines to accept the position, it is said that the Judgeship will be given to Mr. Haughton Lennox, member for South Simcoe, as a quid pro quo of his resigning his seat in favour of Hon. W. T. White, Mr. Borden's Finance Minister. If Mr. Lennox commends himself for a judgeship by virtue of his legal qualifications, he can reasonably be given the place, but trafficing in superior court judgeships in playing the political game—to simply create a vacancy for a seatless cabinet minister, is not quite seemly.

MR. SPEAKER SPROULE.

Dr. Sproule, ex-Grand Master of the Orange order, and M.P. elect for South Grey, is to be the new speaker of the twelfth Parliament, and now, even the "Nationalist" members of Mr. Borden's cabinet will have to mind their p's and q's, especially with Sam Hughes, another enthusiastic Orangeman on "sentry-go" as Minister of Militia. His appointment as Minister was gall and worm-wood to his Nationalist colleagues, but they tolerated him, because he carries a gun, and besides he is only one to three. But evening the odds by making Dr. Sproule the second, is more than the Nationalist trio in the cabinet can be expected to stand. When somebody "shies" into the parliamentary ring a proposal to give Separate schools in Manitoba, as is suggested in some quarters, we may expect doings. As a speaker, Dr. Sproule should be well qualified, especially as to the law and routine requirements of the office. He has represented East Gray continuously in Parliament since 1878 and in parliamentary experience is a very veteran. Dr. Sproule has had a good training. He has come into conflict on points of order or proceedings in his 33 years in the house, perhaps more times than any other member of the house. He will no doubt feel ill at home in the chair of the speaker, an official who, on the lucus a non lucendo principle, cannot speak at all. Dr. Sproule is perhaps the most multitudinous speaker in the house and perhaps, on an average has addressed "Mr. Speaker" more times than any other member of the House not of the government. In the index of Hansard, which records every time a member speaks, and the subject, Dr. Sproule's name extends over 4 1-2 pages of index, while the record of Mr. Borden's speeches and remarks only occupies a modest 3 1-2 pages. Dr. Sproule in the speakers chair, will tend to shorten the debates, for the simple fact that he cannot take part in them.

LEVELLING THE ODDS.

It is compromise all round, in the matter of Mr. Borden's exercise of his powers as premier. He compromised with his big Ontario support of 73 out of 86, by offsetting the appointment of three Nationalist cabinet ministers, by the appointment of Col. Sam. Hughes as Minister of Militia. Of course, numerically speaking, three to one is hardly a fair division of honours and spoils; but there is a delicate compliment in the implied estimate of one good Orangeman being equal to three off-side French-Canadian Nationalists. This, however, didn't seem to satisfy, and the balance of power was somewhat restored by nominating Dr. Sproule, ex-Grand Master, as speaker of the House. But this little expedient did not aparently please the Nationalist master of the administration, Mr. Bourassa. Still another compromise was suggested, and now to offset the offensiveness of Dr. Sproule in Nationalist eyes, a Nationalist is made deputy speaker, in the person of Mr. P. E. Blondin. Mr. Blondin is a typical representative of the English-eating Nationalist. He is a Nationalist firebrand. His speeches in the Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election were bitter appeals to race prejudice; and his reference to the English as "the tormenters of our constitutional liberties" and the declaration that "we have had enough of England and the English" will be remembered as delicate qualifications for presiding over a Canadian parliament, founded upon the spirit of that of the mother of parliaments. The British Born, rallied and herded in Peterborough and elsewhere to save and secure the predominance of British institutions, should be well pleased with the result of their patriotic marking of their ballots. The good Britishers of Ontario, the super-loyalists, can't stand an ex-Liberal—an English speaking Protestant—as minister of finance. He has to be a strap-holder in the parliamentary trolley car because no Conservative member will rise and give him a seat. But they seem to be able to swallow Mr. Borden and three anti-British cabinet members and an anti-British, English-hating, deputy-speaker, as running mate for Dr. Sproule. The situation would tickle the risibilities of a horse.

SIR JAMES WHITNEY'S "AMERICAN IDEALS.

The Liberal press seems to be relieved, to a large extent, of the party duty of criticising Mr. Borden, and especially Sir James Whitney, by the Toronto Telegram, a very thorough-paced Conservative journal. Here is how the Telegram talks of Sir James:

Alas, Sir James Whitney strayed far from British standards when he insisted that Liberals who left their party for their country's good should have their virtues recognized by the sward of a portfolio to one of their number.

The Americanisation of Sir James Whitney's political ideals began in his contribution to the work of cabinet-making at Ottawa and continues in Sir James Whitney's proposed application of THE RECALL SYSTEM to a section of the Ontari Railway and Municipal Board.

Sir James Whitney almost purposeless that elects judges to the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board as truly as American communities are the constituencies that elect judges to the courts of the Republic and the States threof.

Sir James Whitney almost purposes to recall Messrs. Kitson and Ingram, the judges who have dared to disagree with James Leitch, K. C.

The democracies of certain American States propose to recall judges whose decisions disagree with the ideals and interests of the plain people.

Ontario is in process of being converted to Sir James Whitney's own new-found admiration for non-British, even anti-British, standards of political action. If Sir James Whitney applies the star-spangled recall system to Messrs. Ingram and Kitson the time may come when Ontario will apply the same system to the chairman of the board, whom Sir James Whitney evidently does not purpose to recall. Let Sir James Whitney hasten to arrest his tendency to depart from British precedent.

The Telegram should not be disappointed. Sir James Whitney's 'Amurrican" ideals are legitimately come by. An United States President is absolute—a Czar—during his term of office. Sir James is by nature something of a bull-dozer—and office has strengthened this delightful character istic. And in his assumption of absolute power in Ontario is only an adoption of American ideals, in this regard. He has Cabinet colleagues as a slight concession to British custom and precedent; but he takes the position that he is the "whole tip," whatever that is. What he says goes; and the very fact of his saying it, makes it right, irrespective of its being right.

Inefficiency Of Bi-Lingual Schools In Province Of Manitoba

Teaching of English Declared to be "Imperfect and Inadequate Where Not Practically Null and Void."

(Manitoba Free Press)

The main trouble with the bilingual schools in this Province is that they are not bilingual. If they were, in actual fact, bilingual, they would not be, as they are, open to the grave objection that they are failing to render the service for which, as part of our public school system, they are in existence. What is said here is said of the bilingual schools generally throughout the Province. Exception must be made of the school in St. Boniface, in which a notable degree of efficiency is maintained. If the bilingual schools elsewhere in Manitoba came generally within measureable distance of the standard of efficiency in that school they would form a useful part of the Province's public educational system; instead of which, they are failing to provide the children attending them with the instruction which in the interests of the country it is of the first importance they should be provided with.

There is no need of argument in support of the proposition that the ability to speak and read and write English is an essential part of the educational equipment required by every individual on this continent, if he is to have a fair chance in the battle of life. Nor is there need of argument in support of the proposition that the best interests of the future development and welfare of the country at large requires that every individual shall have at least a primary education, including the use of English. In actual practice, the English-French, English-Ruthenian and English-Polish public schools in this Province are French-English, Ruthenian-English and Polish-English; in the case of most of them the word "English" might about as well be omitted from the description, inasmuch as such teaching of English as there is is inefficient and perfunctory, the teachers not being competent to teach English efficiently, and the non-English language being the language of the school. The teaching of English holds an altogether subsidiary place, and, indeed, in many cases, is regarded as of quite negligible importance.

It is found difficult to secure teachers thoroughly competent and effective in both English and French, or in English and Ruthenian, or in English and any other language. And, in actual practice in the average bilingual schools, the teacher is at home only in the non-English language, which is the language of the school. It ought to be required, instead, that if the trustees of any school cannot secure a teacher who knows and uses both languages well, they must engage a teacher who knows and uses the English language. Under the existing system it is the teacher's knowledge and use of the other language that is made the all-important qualification. It should be the other way round. The indispensable qualification should be the knowledge and use of English.

The system of inspection of these schools is wrong. It is a system designed to secure the teaching of the non-English languages, rather than the teaching of English. There should be special English inspectors of all these schools whose duty it would be to subject every teacher in every such school to a test to determine his or her competence to use English and teach it; and there should be full reports in regard to the manner in which the teaching of English is carried on.

Under the law, as it stands, if in any public school in Manitoba there are ten children who speak French, or any other language than English as their mother tongue, their parents are entitled to demand that their teaching shall be in that language, the teaching of English being done bilingually. But that provision of the law must be interpreted as requiring that the teaching of English must be adequate, and as making this the essential requirement. In the so-called bilingual schools throughout Manitoba the teaching of English is, on the contrary, imperfect and inadequate, wher it is not practically null and void.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Nationalists are to be "in the swim" without the help of the navy.

A judgeship has been offered to Mr. Foy. He should first qualify by catching Dr. Beattie Nesbitt.

If Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister, doesn't soon find a seat he will know how to sympathize with Noah's dove.

A Port Hope apple packer has been fined for what is practically forgery—labelling inferior apples as "No. 1." This is an offence, not only against law and morals, but against brotherhood. It tends to cast imputation upon his honest fellow packers and injure their good name.

The Toronto Telegram (Conservative) blames Sir James Whitney for his neglect of the development of New Ontario. This is unreasonable. How could he be expected to take any interest in a region he declared worthless—disparaged as "the land of the stunted poplar?"

If, says the Monetary Times, some of the hundreds who, with a wink, say they know where Dr. Beattie Nesbitt is located, would earn two hundred dollars, he might be brought to the bar of justice. A stain on the escutcheon of the Ontario attorney-general would also be removed.

With three Nationalists occupying seats in Mr. Borden's cabinet, and with another Nationalist firebrand sharing the seat of good, honest Orange Dr. Sproule, speaker, the Hon. Col. Sam, Minister of War, will have to keep his Ross rifle beside his desk when the House meets.

STATESMAN OR SHUFFLER?

(London Advertiser)

So far as we know, the London Free Press is the only Conservative paper in Ontario that has indorsed the Nationalist demand for a referendum on the navy question. The others are studiously avoiding the subject, or courageously denouncing the very suggestion of a plebiscite. Says the Hamilton Spectator:

"There is no occasion for a plebiscite or referendum on the navy question; there is need for a real navy policy for Canada, and the Spectator looks to Mr. Borden to produce such a policy at the earliest possible moment."

The Ottawa Journal says a plebiscite on such a question would be a departure from the British practice of responsible government, and would plunge Canada into a worse turmoil than anything on record. It adds:

"If, as is quite likely, the result of a plebiscite should be either to block Canadian action altogether, or to give more than half the people a right to say that less than half are imposing something on the majority which the majority do not want, there would be the dickens to pay."

The Laurier Government took a straightforward course. They said to the country: "We believe the time has come when Canada should relieve the mother country of some of the burden of Imperial naval defence. We propose to build a navy to protect Canadian shores and trade routes, and to go to the aid of the mother country in her hour of need. We have adopted a law to that effect. We have begun to create naval bases on both coasts; we have purchased two cruisers and we have called for tenders for four more, and for six destroyers. This is our policy; we shall stand, or fall by it."

If Mr. Borden resorts to a plebiscite he will say in effect: "I decline to take the initiative in any policy of Imperial naval defence. I may have my own views, but I refuse to risk office for them. I will not fight for principle, but will throw all responsibility upon the electorate."

The first course is that of a statesman The second would be that of a trimmer and a coward. Mr. Borden must make his choice.

CANADA'S GREAT SACRIFCE.

(The Globe.)

The misrepresentations that brought the Conservative party into power in Canada are coming home to roost. Right on the heels of Mr. Borden's troubles inside and outside his Cabinet are the stupidity frank confessions of his British Tory allies as to the tremendous pecuniary sacrifice that Canada has made in rejecting the reciprocity agreement with the United States.

At a British Tory meeting held in London on the 17th instant to celebrate "the victory for Imperialism" at the Canadian elections one of the leaders of the tariff reform movement on which Canadians are asked to rely for compensating advantages in the form of a British preference, made the following important admission:—

"The greatest bribe," said Mr. Page Croft, M.P., "which had ever been offered to a young nation was that which the United States offered to the Dominion. To the whole agricultural community and to many other interests there was an enormous pecuniary gain in the proposals which the United States made, but to the glory of the commun'' let it be said that the soul of the nation had triumphed."

How will the Borden press reconcile this candid declaration with their recent election distribes against the reciprocal trade relations in natural products with our southern neighbour?

Those who pin their faith on Mr. A. J. Balfour as the apostle of Chamberlainite preference must first explain away the constant intrigues of the Unionist whole-hoggers for his removal from the leadership. Even The World will not suggest that there is any man in the party capable of filling his place. Why was it necessary for one of the speakers to utter veiled threats against Mr. Balfour at this tariff reform thanksgiving service if the Unionist leader is sound on tariff reform? But a more important question for Canadians is: What compensation will they receive in return for their rejection of "the enormous pecuniary gain" held out by the reciprocity agreement with the United States? We have challenged The World to produce its scheme of preference, but it studiously evades the practical issues involved. Mr. Chamberlain's original proposals and the arguments on which they were based have long since been abandoned. Taking the latest tariff reform proposals in the form in which they are supposed to favour Canada most, a simple calculation places the net annual profit at slightly over half a dollar a head of the total population of the Dominion. Is it for this Canadians have rejected what, on the admission of Mr. Borden's British supporters ,would have proved to be an "enormous pecuniary gain" to our country?

Some confusion still seems to exist in regard to the hours during which books may be obtained at the library, and it may be as well once again to state that whilst the reading rooms are open to the public between the hours of 9.30 a.m. and 10 p.m., the stack room is only open from 2 p.m. to 9 p.m. It was a choice between closing up the library entirely during the process of cataloguing or giving the public a limited service, and the Board decided on the latter course. As soon as practicable the regular hours of opening and closing the stack room will be reverted to, and due notice will be given in the papers to that effect.

An anonymous donor, resident in this city, has presented to the library a beautiful copy of Rafael's Madonna, the original of which hangs in the Royal Gallery at Dresden. The picture, which is a costly one, has been presented to the library in the hope that other well-wishers of the institution may be moved to do likewise, and, by gifts of statuary or paintings, enable the Board of Directors to beautify the building in a style befitting its importance and the dignity of the city in which it is situated.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON QUESTIONS

OCT 22nd. 1911.
(Copyright, 1910, by Rev. T. S. Linscott, D.D.)

The Foundation of the Second Temple Laid. Ezra iii: 1-iv: 5.

Golden Text—Enter into his gates with thanksgiving and into his courts with praise. Ps. c: 4.

(1) Verse 1—How long had they likely been in the land when this general gathering at Jerusalem took place?

(2) Which should have the right of way, or first place, our own business or that of the church?

(3) When the people as "one man," give up their business to attend to religious gatherings, what is the effect upon their general prosperity?

(4) Verse 2—Why is there a special obligation upon intellectually and financially strong men, to take a leading part in church work?

(5) Verses 3-6—What was the spiritual effect in those days, of the observance of the ceremonial law of Moses?

(6) Would God have planned for so much ceremony and ritual for an educated and spiritually enlightened people? (See Isa. 1: 11-16.)

(7) When and why was the Mosaic ceremonial law abolished?

(8) What is the sacrifice which every Christian is under obligation to offer up daily?

(9) Verse 7—Should money given to build churches be regarded as an investment, and may we expect any financial returns?

(10) Verses 8-9—What practical lessons may we learn from the way these men organized, and from the vigor of the leaders in seeing the organization was effective?

(11) Verses 10-11—What is the practical effect of a proper ceremony for special church services, such as the laying of a foundation stone, or the opening of a church?

(12) Would it be a good thing for the church to re-establish band music in its services? Why or why not?

(13) Point out its appropriateness and say what psalm they sang together.

(14) Should there be room and opportunity for spontaneous shouts of praise as in this case, in the most carefully prepared church ceremony?

(15) In political and other meetings, the people are encouraged to show their appreciation and express their feelings; why should it not be the same in religious gatherings?

(16) Verses 12-13—Why did some of these people shout for joy and some for sorrow.

(17) About how many years was it since the former Temple was burned?

(18) Were those that sorrowed and those thta rejoiced both right? Give your reasons.

(19) Chap. iv Verses 1-5—Why did these enemies of the Jews offer their services to help build the Temple?

(20) Should help ever be received for the church from those who are not religious?

(21) What motive did these people have in trying to frustrate the building of the Temple? (This is one of the questions that may be answered in writing by members of the club.)

(22) What is our duty when we are opposed in our Christian work?

Lesson for Sunday, Oct. 29th, 1911. A Psalm of Deliverance. Psalm lxxxv.

SEWING CLASS

The Sewing Class in connection with the George Street Methodist Church met on Thursday and, in future will meet every Thursday afternoon throughout the winter in the church parlour to sew for the poor and needy.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President—Mrs. George Curtis.
Vice-President—Mrs. T. Rutherford.
Second Vice-President—Mrs. A. Allison.
Secretary — Mrs. W. H. Cunningham.
Treasurer—Mrs. W. J. Devins.

PARTRIDGE PLENTIFUL

Mr. Wallace Wood, who has been holidaying at Keene for the past week, reports the partridge plentiful. He has been quite successful. Yesterday he and Mr. Montgomery shot a porcupine, which must have weighed in the neighbourhood of thirty-five pounds. Mr. Wood will return to Toronto Monday.

POST CARD COLUMN

MT. JULIAN WHARF.

To the Editor of the Examiner

Dear Sir,—Those interested in the erection of the wharf at Mt. Julian are very much dissatisfied with its size. We were led to believe that this dock, when constructed, would be of a size sufficient to enable the boats to have the required accommodation, as well as those doing business at the lakes. Now, we find, that the wharf is under way and the plans have been so modified that the wharf is to be about half the size that it was originally intended to be. $3,500 was appropriated for this particular work. It does not look as if $3,500 was going to be expended upon it. Perhaps the Superintendent of the canal, who is undertaking the work, would make an explanation that would be satisfactory to all.

Has the "new broom" been used to sweep off a part of the length of the wharf? Economy is all right in its place, but it is not in its place to deprive the people of the conveniences which the public money is properly devoted to procure. Money expended to do things right is well spent, but money spent to make a botch job is wasted.

Yours truly,
MOUNT JULIAN.

RICHARD HALL & SON LIMITED

SERMON ON THE SIGNS OF THE SECOND COMING

"The Coming of the King" as Foretold in Prophecy From Eden Down---Signs of Its Approach, of Which Appearance of False "Teaching" is One.

An Esteemed Correspondent sends the following abstracts from a sermon delivered by Rev. D. J. Burrell, D.D., of New York City on the subject of "Where is the promise of His coming?" from the text, II. Peter, 3 & 4. The correspondent desires to call particular attention to the latter part of the extract in regard to "false teachers," and the fulfilment of prophecy re when the abomination of desolation is being introduced into the Holy Place:

The word here rendered "coming" is parousia, literally "as drawing near" or "being alongside." It is the technical word which was used by the sacred writers to designate the second coming of Christ. In the early Church a deep emphasis was laid upon this doctrine; and there is reason for profound regret that the edge of expectancy has been permitted to wear off.

The "Golden Thread" in Scripture

First, the promise in the Scriptures, running all through them like a golden thread. The first prophecy in the Old Testament is "the protevangel" at the gate of Paradise, in that prophecy there is a distinct reference to the final triumph of the Seed of Woman over the power of sin. And thenceforward there is a continuous line of prediction with respect to the parousia. It is traceable in the Levitical system of Messianic rites and ceremonies, as well as in the prophetic books.

You may read the same promise in Daniel's vision of the image with head of gold, breast of silver, thighs of brass, legs of iron and feet of clay. Babylonia. Medo-Persia. Greece. Rome; they come and go. And, lehold, a stone hewn out of the mountain without hand smites the image so that iron and brass and silver and gold are reduced to dust and swept away like the chaff of the summer threshing-floor. Let Daniel himself interpret it: "The God of Heaven shall set up a Kingdom which shall never be destroyed: it shall consume all these kingdoms and shall stand for ever."

If the Old Testament speaks with no uncertain sound the New Testament is clearer still. There are approximately a thousand allusions in the teaching of Christ and his Apostles to this return of the King. In the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth chapters of Matthew we have what is familiarly known as the parousia discourse of Jesus: andwhatever of uncertainty there may be as to its interpretation in detail and particular, there is no room whatever for any uncertainty as to the promise which it contains of his coming to reign gloriously in this world of ours. The teaching of the Apostles is of the same tenor. Paul and Peter, James and John were all looking for his appearing in the clouds of heaven. The Book of the Revelation would be a mere dream book, a panorama of meaningless visions, if the parousia were left out of it.

The Christians of the early Church took Christ and the Apostles at their word, and awaited His coming with joyful expectancy. In trying times of persecution the hope of his appearing was their strength and support. Their customary greeting morning and night was Maranatha, "The Lord cometh!"

Signs of its Near Approach

Second, the silencing of open and avowed infidelity. At the beginning of the last century the air was rent with the vociferations of Thomas Paine and Voltaire and Jean Jacques Rousseau. There was not a nation in the world which did not have its brave cohort of infidels who stood forth impiously shaking their clenched fists at God. The last of the old guard were Bradlaugh in England and Ingersoll in America; and they have gone their way.

Third, the appearing of false teachers within the Church. "When the Son of Man cometh, shall he find faith on the earth?" The disciples were repeatedly and most earnestly warned that in the last days false teachers were to come who would deceive the very elect. They were admonished that there must first be "a falling away" before Christ could come to his own. II. Thes. 2: 3-4. In his great parousia discourse he announced that one of the signs of his coming would be "the abomination of desolation, spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing in the Holy Place."

If there ever was a time when "the abomination of desolation" was introduced into the Holy Place, it is surely when the integrity of the Scriptures is denied, the veracity of Christ impugned, his divine birth called in question, and every fundamental doctrine of his teaching exposed to derisive doubt. That time is now. If infidelity has ceased to fulminate its impieties outside of the Church it is largely because the same work has been undertaken by men in canonicals. The Trojan horse has been wheeled within our walls. Shall we lose heart by reason of that fact? Not at all! If a hundred millions of professing Christians were to be led away by false teachers into the wilderness of unbelief there would still be four hundred millions on earth professing the name of Jesus and presumably true to their consecration vows. And that would be twice as many Christians as there were a century ago! The great promise holds true. And, what is more, the signs indicate that its fulfilment may not be afar off.—From last number of Christian Herald.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

Sometimes I wonder how anyone ever dares to get married.

And that sometimes is after reading in the magazines and newspapers some of the articles about the impossibility of being happy though married.

"Why I am not married," "Why my wife Left me," "Why I wouldn't marry my husband if I had my life to live over again," "Why I beat my husband with the frying pan every morning," "How to keep up appearances even if you hate your husband"—I quote from memory so these may not be entirely exact, but I assure you they are very similar to the titles of the magazine articles with which we are constantly bombarded.

And every time a newspaper writer runs out of other material she takes a long breath and proceeds to warn her readers of some snag in the matrimonial river that even the most skillful pilot has a bare chance of avoiding. I know, you see, for I do it myself.

And the trouble with most of these warnings and prophecies is that they are true. But one of the greatest lessons that life gradually teaches us in that no one truth is the whole truth, and that one thing may be true and that another almost opposite may also be true.

And that applies to the question of matrimony as well as to any other.

Of course there is no doubt at all that marriage is not the rosy mountain top existence which courtship paints it.

But what of that? Was ever any pleasure, any undertaking, the spotlessly perfect thing anticipation painted it? And yet would one wish on that account to have hung back from all pleasures and all the undertakings?

To be sure, one must bring infinite tolerance and forbearance to the marriage relation in order to make it a happy one.

But what of that? Is there any family relation—brother and sister, father and son, mother and daughter—but requires tolerance and forbear to make it happy? And yet one would not wish on account of that to be a recluse or a hermit.

Do you know I haven't a doubt that the woman who tells us in the magazine article why she wouldn't marry her husband if she had her life to live over again would probably go back to him if she had a third life after the second.

Now, perhaps you think I'm overestimating the effect of all this magazine and newspaper talk.

Perhaps I am. And yet I have heard more than one girl say, "Why I positively am afraid to get married. You read so much about divorces and married people being unhappy.

You forget, you see, that the reason one reads so much more about unhappily married people than the other kind is that everyday happiness makes tame reading and that newspaper readers would be dissatisfied if instead of a spicy piece about Mr. and Mrs. So-and-So, who are trying to see who can divorce the other first, they should find a list of people who are happy though married in their morning paper.

Cheer up, young people. Much of life that seems complex when you talk too much about it grows simpler when you come to living it.

Cultivate forbearance and tolerance, get the habit of letting each day take care of its own troubles, and a disposition not too expect too much and I have not a doubt but that some day you and the other half of you may stand on the crest of the hill singing that sweet old folks' love song—

"John Anderson, my jo, John,
We clamb the hill thegither,
And monie a cantie day, John,
We've had wi' ane anither
Now, we maun totter down, John.
But hand in hand we'll go,
And sleep thegither at the foot,
John Anderson, my jo!"

SPLENDID CONCERT IN ST. ALPHONSUS' LYCEUM

Miss Grace Smith, English Pianist and Other Artists Heard to Great Advantage in an Enjoyable Programme.

MEDALS PRESENTED

Those who attended the grand musical recital in St. Alphonsus Lyceum last evening were afforded a musical treat when Miss Grace Smith interpreted some of the works of a number of the old masters.

Miss Smith hails from London, Eng., and her playing last evening more than maintained the reputation the English have gained that they are generally musical. Pre-eminent among the numbers were the works of Frederic Chopin. Who could not listen with rapture to the music of the immortal Chopin, when rendered by such a talented artiste as Miss Smith? Chopin was, by birth, a Pole, and though living for the major portion of his life in France, the characteristic wildness of the Russian music asserts itself in certain passages. Sometimes tender and sympathetic, sometimes majestic, the music of this composer always shows magnificent strength and the artiste never allowed a moment of weakness in her playing, but handled the whole with a masterly hand.

Mr. Frank Whitehouse delighted the audience with his violin selections, his interpretation of the famous "Intermezzo" from "Cavalleria Rusticana" being exceptionally fine. Messrs. Harold Lee and Albert New were much appreciated for their vocal contributions. As usual, they sang with great expression, richness of tone. The musical numbers were interspersed with orchestra selections, ably rendered by the St. Mary's Convent Orchestra. During the interval medals and testimonials were presented to the following Convent students:

The following received testimonials of the Toronto College of Music:

A "Whirlwind"

Mr. Karl Lehmann, Inter-State Field Secretary of Christian Endeavour, to Give Address

Mr. Karl Lehmann, Inter-state Field Secretary of Christian Endeavour, will speak, especially to young people, at the evening service at St. Andrew's Presbyterian church to-morrow. Mr. Lehmann is spoken of in the highest terms as a speaker and as a man. Descriptions used of him are "whirl wind" and "consecrated dynamite." He will also speak at the rally of the Young People's Societies to be held in St. Andrew's church on Monday evening.

OFFICIAL VISIT

Paid by District Deputy Grand Master to Corinthian Lodge

An interesting event took place at the meeting of Corinthian Lodge, A. F. and A.M., when the District Grand Master of Otonabee District No. 20, Wor. Bro. John Crane, paid an official visit to the lodge and watched the work being put on. There was a large attendance of members of Corinthian Lodge.

A PRESENTATION

The home of Mr. Bert Gillespie, 168 Hunter street, was the scene of an interesting event last night, when a number of his intimate friends gathered around to wish him God speed and prosperity, on the eve of his departure for his new field of labour in the West. Mr. Gillespie, who has been a valued employee of the Peterborough Hardware Co. for the past five years, has severed his connection with that firm and will leave shortly for Edmonton.

The following address, which was presented, speaks for itself:

Mr. Bert Gillespie.

Dear Friend,—When, in response to the "call of the West," you decided to join the great army of those who are Empire building in the vast new country, you may not have thought of the vacancy you are leaving behind you, and the way you will be missed by your many friends. As the time of your departure draws near however, we, who are left behind, begin to realize that we are going to lose you from our midst; and we feel that we cannot allow you to go without some expression of our good will, and to wish you God speed on your journey and prosperity in your new home.

As a token of our good wishes, and a reminder of the pleasant hours spent together in the past, we ask you to accept this little gift which, we trust, will often awaken kindly memories of those whose names are inscribed below: W. J. Gamble, A. G. Hagerman, T. A. Record, H. W. Coon, T. A. Kerr, A. H. Gamble, J. E. Middleton, Stan. Taylor, W. Patterson.

Following this a beautiful fountain pen was presented to Mr. Gillespie, after which a social evening was spent.

NO INDIGESTION OR STOMACH DISORDER

No Gas, Heartburn, Sourness or Dyspepsia Five Minutes Later

Why not get some now—this moment, and forever rid yourself of Stomach trouble and Indigestion? A dieted stomach gets the blues and grumbles. Give it a good eat, then take Pape's Diapepsin to start the digestive juices working. There will be no dyspepsia or belching of Gas or eructations of undigested food; no feeling like a lump of lead in the stomach or heartburn, sick headache and Dizziness, and your food will not ferment and poison your breath with nauseous odours.

Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents for a large case at any drug store here, and will relieve the most obstinate case of Indigestion and Upset Stomach in five minutes.

There is nothing else better to take Gas from Stomach and cleanse the stomach and intestines, and, besides, one single dose will digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all your food the same as a sound, healthy stomach would do it.

When Diapepsin works, your stomach rests—gets itself in order, cleans up— and then you feel like eating when you come to the table, and what you eat will do you good.

Absolute relief from all Stomach Misery is waiting for you as soon as you decide to take a little Diapepsin. Tell your druggist that you want Pape's Diapepsin, because you want t become thoroughly cured this time.

Remember, if your stomach feels out of order and uncomfortable now, you can surely get relief in five minutes.

INTERESTING LECTURE BY THE REV. JAMES ROLLINS

"Prince of the Sea" Proved to be an Agreeable Surprise ---Event Was a Well-Merited Success

National in scope, immeasurably educative and interesting, was the lecture given by Rev. James Rollins, B. A., in St. Andrew's church last evening. A pleasurable surprise was in store for those who were unacquainted with the identity of the character which was appropriately referred to as "A Prince of the Sea." Around this designation, the lecturer skillfully wove a lucid and instructive biographical sketch of one of the greatest maritime explorers that the world has ever known, namely, Christopher Columbus. To the average Canadian, whose knowledge concerning the strenuous life of this great adventurer, is chiefly confined to that which was gained through the medium of the Public school books, the discourse given by Rev. James Rollins last night would disclose some startling revelations. In it was revealed the strong character of the man who, under diverse circumstances, sought to discover a new world.

Mr. Chisholm, of the Normal school teaching staff, made a very able chairman. In his opening remarks, he referred to the absence of a programme, which difficulty was easily surmounted by allowing the programme to develop itself.

A musical number on the organ was rendered by Mr. Treneer. This was followed by a solo by Mrs. Dickson Hall, both of which were rendered in a very able manner.

The speaker of the evening, Rev. Jas. Rollins, was then formally introduced by the chairman.

In his opening remarks, the speaker dealt with the early life of Columbus, telling of the hardships which confronted the early life of the young mariner. Born in the year 1435, he inherited love for the sea. His first impressions of life were those in which were infused the glories of the mighty seas. His father, noting the strong maritime inclinations present in his son, sent him to a college, where he could gain knowledge concerning the mysteries of navigating the mighty deep.

He commenced his career as a sailor when but fourteen years of age. The next few years of his life was an eventful period, full of vicissitudes, and one in which the fundamental phases of the great life work of this young navigator began to assert itself.

It was about this time that Prince Henry of Portugal became possessed of a strong desire to find new markets overseas, so as to enable him to extend his commercial enterprises. He commenced by calling science to his aid, but without avail. Shortly after this our hero appeared on the scene, and took up his abode at Lisbon, and at the age of thirty-five he married a lady of the convent. After a time he approached the Royal family, with a view to securing funds to fit out an expedition that would enable him to realize his fondest hope—the discovery of a new world, which he believed to exist. This was finally accomplished, and on August 3rd, in the year 1492, he set sail, in command of three vessels and 120 men. After a hazardous journey of about 40 days, he set foot on the American continent, hoisted the flag and took possession of the country in the name of his sovereign. The tale of the vicissitudes and hardships which he endured at the hands of his mutinous sailors, together with the nerve racking anxiety of travelling over strange seas, would fill many volumes.

At the close of the lecture a hearty vote of thanks was extended on behalf of the Ladies Aid, under whose auspices the lecture was conducted, to Rev. Mr. Rollins, and as a fitting climax to a splendid evening's entertainment a beautiful selection on the organ was rendered by Mr. Treneer.

Death Of Mr. Thos. Menzies

The many friends in Peterborough of Mrs. R. S. Davidson and Mrs. K. G. Lech will sympathize with them in the sudden death of their eldest brother, Mr. Thomas Menzies, which took place on Thursday, October 19th, at Kingfisher, Oklahama. Mr. Menzies, who was a son of the late Thos. Menzies, formerly of Peterborough, was so far as appearances went, apparently in perfect health, when he was suddenly taken ill with heart failure and passed away. Tom, as he was known when in Peterborough, has many young friends here who will all regret to learn of his sudden death. Mr. Menzies was in his 36th year. What makes the occurrence even more sad is the fact that his mother, Mrs. Thomas Menzies, who has just returned home from a visit to her daughters in Peterborough, is quite ill herself.

The funeral will take place from the home of Mr. Menzies sister, Mrs. George H. Laing, Kingfisher, Oklahama.

$3.50 Recipe Free, For Weak Kidneys

Relieves Urinary and Kidney Troubles, Backache, Straining, Swelling, Etc.

Stops Pain in the Bladder, Kidneys and Back

Wouldn't it be nice within a week or so to begin to say goodbye forever to the scalding, dribbling, straining, or too frequent passage of urine; the forehead and the back-of-the-head aches; the stitches and pains in the back; the growing muscle weakness; spots before the eyes; yellow skin; sluggish bowels; swollen eyelids; leg cramps; unnatural short breath; sleeplessness and the despondency?

I have a recipe for these troubles that you can depend on, and if you want to make a quick recovery, you ought to write and get a copy of it. Many a doctor would charge you $3.50 just for writing this prescription, but I have it and will be glad to send it to you entirely free. Just drop me a line like this: Dr. A. E. Robinson, K1810 Luck Building, Detroit Mich., and I will send it by return mail in a plain envelope. As you will see when you get it, this recipe contains only pure, harmless remedies, but it has great healing and pain-conquering power.

It will quickly show its power once you use it, so I think you had better see what it is without delay. I will send you a copy free—you can use it and cure yourself at home

LARGE GROUP PICTURE

In connection with the large group picture of children, which will appear in the Christmas edition of the Examiner, it may be mentioned that the picture of every child photographed at the Roy Studio from Jan. 1st to Nov. 15, 1911, will be shown. It has been found necessary to limit the time to Nov. 15 in order that the ensemble can be carefully prepared. It will be the most unique group ever published in the Examiner. Parents should see that their children are photographed at once at Roy's in order that their portraits may be reproduced in the Examiner.

FUNERAL OF MR. JOHN SAWERS

The remains of the late Mr. John Sawers, of London street, were interred in the Little Lake cemetery at 2.30 to-day. Many were in attendance to show a last mark of esteem to Mr. Sawers, who was beloved by all, and the floral tributes were both numerous and beautiful.

The Rev. Robt. Pogue officiated, assisted by the Rev. Mr. Sawers. The pallbearers were: Messrs. W. J. Greene, Jos. Stewart, Robert Mulligan, Thomas Lang, H. Sherwood and Dr. Morrow.

KNOCKED DOWN BY A HORSE

A small boy, who gave his name as Stanley Laing, was knocked down by an express rig at the corner of George and King streets this afternoon, sustaining a bad cut on the forehead as a result. The affair, which was purely accidental, was witnessed by a number of bystanders, who quickly rushed to the boy's aid, expecting to find him seriously injured. Their fears were unfounded, however, and the lad was able to proceed to his home in the west end unaided.

JEWS ARRESTED ON CHARGE OF FRAUD

Chief Thompson, of the Police Department received the following telegram this morning, which practically explains itself.

Belleville, Ont.

Chief Constable, Peterborough, Ont.

I hold a warrant for the arrest of Harry Stocker and Louis Stocker, Jew shoemakers. Left here this morning, charged with defrauding creditors. See Canadian Express Co. May be at S. Fienburg's, 187 Simcoe street. Hold and wire. Will send for them.

(Signed) JOHN NEWTON.
Chief Constable.

The two men in question were arrested this morning at the place mentioned in the telegram, 187 Simcoe street. They are alleged to have defrauded the Express Co. in some manner at Belleville. The facts are unknown to the local officers of the company. A box, delivered to them from Belleville was delivered by the Canadian Express Co., and it is supposed that has something to do with the case. The parties are lodged in the cells at present.

WHEEL CAME OFF

A farmer's waggon, loaded with market produce, came to grief on Charlotte street this morning, when the rear wheel came off. A portion of the contents of the waggon was distributed over the highways, but willing helpers were soon on the scene. A nut from a nearby blacksmith was secured and the wheel replaced, together with the contents of the waggon.

OBITUARY

WALTER H. JOHNSON.

A bright and promising young life was cut short last evening, when Walter, the only son of Mr. Henry Johnson, of 166 Hunter street, east, passed away at the early age of fifteen years.

The deceased was born in Montreal but came with his parents to Peterborough County five years ago settling at Young's Point. The last two years have been spent in the city. He was a student at the Collegiate Institute and a member of St. Paul's church. His illness only extended over a period of one week, and his end came as a severe blow to his parents, who have the sympathy of a wide circle of friends. Death was due to appendicitis.

The funeral will take place at 2 o'clock on Monday, at the Little Lake Cemetery.

MR. JAMES FARLEY.

There passed away in the House of Providence yesterday, an old and well known resident, in the person of Mr. James Farley.

The deceased, who had reached the ripe age of seventy-nine years, was born in Ireland. He came to Canada at that time when a famine spread over Ireland, and thousands immigrated to Canada. It was in that same year that so many perished in a wreck when crossing the ocean. Some time ago he owned a nice farm in Douro.

Mr. Farley was widely known in Peterborough and district. He leaves a wife to mourn his loss.

The funeral will take place at 3 o'clock to-morrow to St. Peter's Cathedral and from thence to St. Peter's cemetery for interment.

FARMERS ARE BUSY

The beautiful balmy weather is bringing the glad smile to the long-drawn-out countenances of many a farmer. That they appreciate the weather man's good graces is evidenced by the vim with which they are attacking their fall work. On all sides are to be seen indications of agricultural activity, which is augmented by the fact that the season is far advanced and the amount of work to be done before the arrival of Jack Frost is considerable. One North Monaghan agriculturist told The Examiner this morning that the majority of the farmers in his section were behind with their season's work and were now working overtime in an endeavour to catch up.

The drought during the early part of the season, the early appearance of the thresher, and the ripening prematurely of the fall crops, such as clover seed, buckwheat, etc., are some of the reasons ascribed for the conditions as outlined above.

"How do you size up the crop situation as it concerns your locality?"

"Well, I think it is about the average," he replied; "I have heard some complaints about the scarcity of hay and coarse fodder, but I think as a general thing the prospects are good, and no difficulty will be experienced in getting through the winter. Potatoes are a scarce commodity but very few farmers will be compelled to buy."

OSLER RIGHT; YOUTH SUCCEEDS AGE

Gray Hair Is First Sign of Age. Harmless Remedy Restores to Natural Color.

Osler isn't the only man who turns down old age. In the business world the "young man" is always the one who picks the plums. It is an age of "new thought," "new talent," etc., and the old man is passed by in the race.

One of the first signs of coming age is the appearance of gray hairs. When you see them, act promptly. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy will correct this sign, which so often deceives people into thinking that age is really upon them. It is a well-known fact that Sage and Sulphur will darken the hair. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur combines these old-time remedies with other agents, which remove dandruff and promote the growth of the hair.

The manufacturers of this remedy authorize the druggists to sell it under guarantee that the money will be refunded if it fails to do exactly as represented.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists.

Don't "Nag" a Man Because He Drinks

It Only Makes His Nerves Demand More Liquor

It is quite easy fr a milk-and-water man who will never create any great "STIR" in the world to behave well, but it ISN'T easy for the nervous, excitable, energetic, ambitious man who wants to DO THINGS. His brain is ALWAYS WORKING—he is out in the world meeting people—he is trying ot keep RIGHT in the CENTRE of the path that leads to SUCCESS.

But he generally overdoes it. There is JUST ONE pitfall in the path that the very impetus of his energy carries him into; just ONE DEADLY ENEMY of success that his nervous ambition makes him an EASY victim for—that is DRINK. And with drink, success, business achievement and judgment receive a DEATH BLOW.

Alcohol weakens the brain and the body—thereby physically and mentally unfitting the drinker for good business, and, unless he can stop drinking it, the end is FAILURE.

PRESTON EAST DOME

The marvelously rich strike of gold made on the Bridges' Claim, within a few feet of the Preston East Dome line, and which runs directly into that property, is one of the most sensational occurrences in mining operations in the Porcupine District.

The man who made this wonderful discovery, personally recommends the purchase of Preston East Dome at any price below 50 cents a share. The fact that he, himself, acquired 350,000 shares by private sale is the most striking proof of his faith in the great value of this find to the Preston East Dome property.

We advise its purchase for an immediate and substantial rise. The stock is moving rapidly to higher levels. You can make money by purchasing now.

IN FAVOUR OF REBELS

Battle at Hankow a Decisive Victory For the Revolutionaries—Disaffection Continues to Spread.

MANY DESERTING

Pekin, Oct. 21.—It is apparent here that the Imperial Government knew the result of the battle at Hankow between its forces and the rebels for more than twenty-four hours before it became public here. Reports of the rebel victory gradually leaked out during the day, but the first positive account of the defeat of the Imperial troops was delivered to the Foreign legations last night by the Associated Press. It created a profound impression.

The success of the revolution has been considered here to hinge upon the result of the first encounter, as its moral effect would be far-reaching in China, as probably nowhere else would be the case, when the fugitive Imperialists reach the main army, which is mobilizing near Sin Yang Chow, the news of the repulse, it is believed, will utterly demoralize the troops, while on the other hand the news as it goes along the Yangtse River probably will result in further important adhesions to the rebel cause.

The foreign legations here believe that yesterday's news from Hankow and Yan-Nan will mean that the provinces south of the Yangtse and also some on the north side of the river sooner or later will secede.

The Government acknowledges that there is a serious situation in Chang-Sha, Province of Hu-Nan, which it is believed in Pekin means that Chang-Sha has joined the revolt.

Foreigners whose business it is to study China think that the northern provinces, which are not deeply affected by sedition, may rally around the Manchus. Everything, however, seems to depend on an immediate and successful advance by Minister of War Yin Tchang, who now commands 20,000 men within one hundred miles of Hankow, but only the Foreign Ministry pretends to enjoy confidence in his promised attack.

Already Yin Tchang is issuing proclamations in which he is offering pardon to all who desert the rebel standard, and it is believed he will rely on proclamations and negotiations, fearing or being unable to move his army.

At midnight last night a report from Yin Tchang was published in the official gazette. It does not refer to Wednesday's fight at Hankow. It says the twenty-second regiment arrived at Hankow Sunday, and that the rebels attacked twice, but were repulsed, and that three rebels were captured. His spies report that the rebels are preparing for a defence of Wu-Chang and Hankow. Many desertions from the rebel ranks are reported. Yin Tchang says he has made Sin-Yang-Chow his temporary headquarters, and will proceed southward after the arrival of the fourth division of the troops.

An edict which also is published sanctions Yin-Tching's proposals, and says it hopes he will lose no time in suppressing the rebels. Another edict expresses compassion for the people in those provinces, which are suffering from drought and rebellion, and orders 200,000 taels from the late Empress Dowager's hoard to be paid to Yuan Shi Kai, who will arrange for its distribution among the distressed people.

Red Cross In Field.

Hankow, Oct. 21.—During Wednesday's battle the Red Cross for the first time in history put Chinese workers in the field. The Red Cross has not yet obtained recognition by the Imperial troops, and consequently many of their wounded who were left on the field, were killed and mutilated by civilians who are in sympathy with revolt. The foreign nurses remained on the battlefield to take care of the wounded despite the advice of the consuls that they leave. The mission hospitals have now become Red Cross stations.

Many of the down-river towns report disturbances. A newspaper correspondent found at a railway station in the midst of a deserted camp, three frightened Chinese, who asked him to escort them to Hankow. The presence of foreigners is considered protection wherever there are revolutionists.

Strike to Uphold Union.

Schenectady, N.Y., Oct. 21.—Because the Schenectady Railway Co. refuse to recognize the local union of the Amalgamated Street and Railway Employes' Association of America, which has been organizing about three weeks, the employes struck.

Several thousand sympathizers thronged the streets, and a few arrests were made. The employes have no other grievances.

Want a Colony For Tramps.

Winchester, Ont., Oct. 21.—The Provincial W. C. T. U. decided to organize a new department in connection with children's work, and Mrs. McLaughlin of Hamilton was appointed honorary secretary.

A resolution was passed memorializing the Ontario Government, requesting them to provide a provincial colony for tramps.

Abandoned His Flight.

Pasadena, Cal., Oct. 21.—Aviator Fowler abandoned his proposed transcontinental flight yesterday afternoon. His manager wanted him to return to Los Angeles and make a flight over the Hippodrome there on Sunday. He refused to do so.

English Steamer Sinks.

Hamburg, Oct. 21.—Two English steamers collided in the mouth of the Elbe during a fog yesterday.

One of the vessels sank and the other stranded.

BLOCKING REFORM

United States Judges Must be Controlled Says Roosevelt During a Speech at New York Civic Function.

CHILD EMPLOYMENT

New York, Oct. 21.—The judiciary of the United States must be brought within the control of and answerable to the well-thought-out judgment of the people, in the opinion of Theodore Roosevelt, who spoke last night on "The Conservation of Womanhood and Childhood," before the civic forum. This control, in Mr. Roosevelt's judgment, should be, "exercised more cautiously and in different fashion than the control by the people over the legislator, and the executive, but the control must be there."

Control of the judges, Mr. Roosevelt said, was but half—although by far the more important part—of a program which should be carried out for the proper conservation of manhood, womanhood and childhood. The first half of the program, he said, consisted in placing upon the statute books of the nation and the various states, legislation to remedy existing defects.

The ex-President spoke at length of what he termed "crying abuses connected with child labor." He referred to the need of laws to prevent the employment of children as young as ten years in the canneries of this state, and to other legislation for the protection of children.

"I most emphatically believe that we have been wise in giving great power to our judges, including this power of judicial interpretation of statutes to see whether they conform with the fundamental law of the land. But I also most firmly believe that like any other power, this power can be abused, and that it is a power with which the people have merely temporarily parted and not one which they have permanently alienated.

"Used cautiously and moderately and only in the clearest cases, it is fraught with the utmost good to the body politic. Used recklessly, wantonly and foolishly, where the case is so doubtful that the judges themselves may be divided nearly equally on the two sides, it results in very great evil, as it has resulted again and again in this State of New York, and it may result in even greater evil, for it may, in the end, cause such a revulsion in the minds of the people at large as to result in totally taking away this power from the judges—action which I should deplore.

"During the last twenty-five years the courts here in New York, helped, I am sorry to say, once or twice by the supreme court of the nation, have thrown what have at times proved well nigh or altogether insurmountable obstacles in the path of needed social reforms.

"It is, I believe, an advantage to have fixed in this court the power to state that a legislative act is unconstitutional, but only provided that the power is exercised with the wisdom of self-restraint. If the courts continue to use it with the recklessness that has too often been shown in the past it is almost inevitable that efforts will be made to amend it. It is a rank absurdity to hold that the violation of the constitution is evident in a case where the present chief justice of the United States and enough of his colleagues to come with in one of a majority, of a court holding strongly the opposite view.

"I believe that the only ultimate safety for our people is in self-control; not in control from the outside. I do not believe in snap judgments. I do not believe in permitting the determination of a moment to be transmuted into a permanent policy, but I do believe that the serious, sober, well-thought-out judgment of the people must be given effect; I do believe that the people must ultimately control its own destinies, and cannot surrender the right of ultimate control to a judge any more than to a legislator or an executive."

Check Emigration Figures.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—A system will be established for a record of emigration, not only to the United States, but to other countries, and the figures will be used in checking over the next census returns.

The presence of Sir Wilfrid Laurier in Premier Borden's office yesterday morning started the report that they were conferring in regard to acclamations for the new Ministers, and Messrs. Fielding and Graham, defeated Ministers. It is learned, however, that they simply discussed the status of the private secretaries of the late Ministers.

To Divide Supreme Court?

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—In Government circles a proposal is mooted to divide the Supreme Court of Canada into two sections, east and west, though there is much doubt as to whether it will be carried out.

Hon. Robert Rogers, Minister of Interior, is one of those who favor the proposition as designed to lighten the cost of litigation to the west.

Beresford Sails For England.

Quebec, Oct. 21.—The Empress of Ireland sailed from Quebec at 3.30 o'clock yesterday with about 800 passengers. Among the first-class passengers were Lord Charles Beresford, Sir Robert Green, Price and Lady Price, Hon. W. W. Vivian, Hon. Violet Vivian, Hon. Dorothy Head, Right Rev. W. W. Perrin, Count and Countess Vialle de Salagas.

'Phone Cases on Monday.

Ottawa, Oct. 21.—The Railway Commission will hold a sitting in Toronto on Monday, Oct 23, when important complaints concerning the telephone service and rates, held over from last weeks' session, will be heard.

THE ARABS HELD FORT

Defended Benghaze Long After the Turks Had Fled—Both Sides Lost Heavily in the Fighting.

A STUBBORN RESISTANCE

Tripoli, Oct. 21.—In the fighting at Benghazi Thursday between the Italians and Turks and Arabs there were numerous casualties on both sides. When finally the Italians rushed the trenches, the Arabs made a strong resistance, while the Turks fled. The Italians took many Arabs prisoners.

The Italian fleet under Rear-Admiral Aubrey bombarded Benghazi Thursday and landed 4,000 men, who, after a brisk battle, occupied a portion of the town. The greater part of the troops, however, camped on the beach Thursday night.

The expeditionary force instructed to occupy Benghazi arrived in the roadstead Wednesday morning, convoyed by the Italian battleships Vittorio Emanuele III., Roma, Napoli and Regina Elean, the cruisers Amalfi and Etruria, five smaller warships and two torpedo boat divisions.

Rear-Admiral Aubrey sent an officer with a white flag to the Turkish commander demanding surrender of the town. The Turkish commander promptly refused, and subsequently was notified by the Italian commander that unless he changed his mind and capitulated before 6 o'clock the town would be bombarded at that hour. No reply having been received, the bombardment began at the hour set. The shelling of the fleet continued until 9, when a detachment of sailors and troops was debarked. Other landing parties followed. The first Italians to come ashore were received with a sharp rifle fire from the Turks. The Italians bore themselves well and established a position near the water's edge, and stood the Turkish fire. They were rapidly reinforced from the fleet and later in a forward movement the Italians took the barracks in the village of Sidi by assault. They also took and held a part of Benghazi.

Altogether 4,000 men were landed. Late in the day temporary quarters were established on the beach.

Queen's Scholarships.

Kingston, Oct. 21.—The results of the fall theological examinations at Queen's were posted Friday afternoon as follows:

Matriculation scholarships—The David Strathern Daw, value $75; George Telford, B.A., Scotland.

The Dominion, founded by Walker Lawson, value $70; J. W. North, Ann Arbor.

The Buchanan, founded by Rev. Alexander Buchanan, Stirling, value $65; P. L. Jull, B.A., Brantford.

D. A. Ferguson obtained second-class standing in church history, while T. N. Caldwell secured the same standard in New Testament.

Separation of Queen's.

Kingston, Oct. 21.—The bill for the separation of Queen's University from the Presbyterian Church, which is to come before the next session of the Dominion Parliament, will provide for a settlement upon the theological faculty of $200,000, as its share of the endowment fund, and for building, fuel, light, and attendance.

The General Assembly Commissioners are holding out for the transfer of the old arts building, now occupied by the faculty of theology, but the trustees do not want to give so much as that. The trustees promise, however, to erect a building for theology within five years.

Verdict of Suicide.

Parry Sound, Oct. 21.—A verdict of suicide was returned by the coroner's jury enquiring into the death of Miss Violet Smith at Dillonport, late yesterday afternoon.

There were no marks of violence on the body, so the jury concluded she had taken her own life while in a despondent mood.

Insurance Agent Fined.

Toronto, Oct. 21.—For issuing fire insurance policies on behalf of companies not registered in Ontario, Wm. McD. Douglas, an insurance agent in Cochrane, was fined $20 and costs in each of six cases. Mr. Douglas admitted the charges against him, but pleaded he was unaware that he was violating the law. The companies in question are the Cosmopolitan Insurance Co. and the Metropolitan Insurance Co. of Pennsylvania.

Attorney-General Foy stated yesterday that he would be glad if any person would communicate with his Department at once.

Got the Wrong Ashes.

Kingston, Oct. 21.—An uncanny disclosure was made at Cataraqui cemetery, when the supposed cremated remains of David W. Trotter of Long Beach, Calif., were about to be interred. Friends of Mr. Trotter had received a small case by express and had taken it to the cemetery, where a burial service was to have been said when it was discovered that the wrong case had been sent. The label intimated that the steel box contained the ashes of Mrs. Ophelia Farrinton, aged 82.

Will Sue the City.

Brantford, Oct. 21.—Local merchants are talking of bringing action against the city for the tearing up of Front street corner here by the railway company, where a $16,000 crossing is being laid. Traffic has been shut off and merchants claim they have been occasioned loss owing to the inactivity of the city council in having the work expedited.

6 Cecil Armstrong, Y.M.C.A., Peterborough.
7 Alex. Murdock, Peterborough.
8 Beresford Hamilton, Lakefield Preparatory school.

These are the entries so far in the Examiner Thanksgiving Day road races. W. Willis, who is among the senior runners, writes that he is in fine shape and is very ambitious to beat Smoke and carry off the trophy. He has been training faithfully. With his long list of victories in the Old Country and in Canada, Willis will be a dangerous contestant. His last race here was on Labour Day, when he won the five mile race at the Trades and Labour Council meet in commanding fashion.

Morris Montgomery has been a starter in a number of the Examiner races and has been training for some time for the Thanksgiving Day event. This year's race will bring his younger brother, Scott, as a contestant, and he has been doing good work in training.

Sidney Knott is an English runner who may have to be counted upon.

It will be seen that among the junior entries is one from the Lakefield Preparatory school in the person of Beresford Hamilton. The "Grove" school has a habit of turning out clever athletes and their representative this year will undoubtedly be worthy of the traditions of the school.

POTATOES ADVANCE

Usual Prices Prevailed in Other Lines of Produce at Market To-day

There was a large attendance on the market this morning, and a splendid stock of first class garden truck and mixed farming produce was exhibited. The demand for vegetables was very great, and the supply was equally large. There was an advance of from 15c to 25c in the price of potatoes, and from information received from some of those who had the potatoes for sale, the price may go still higher. They claim that the supply of this product is not as great as was thought, and there will be a shortage, if only the supply of farmers in the vicinity of the city is resorted to. The usual prices prevailed in other lines of product. The pork market opened at 12c and 13c, but dropped a cent before the market was over. The following are the quotations:

Butter—29c to 30c according to the quality.
Eggs—29c and 30c was asked but few sales were made at this price.
Ducks—$1 per pair or 60c each.
Chickens—70c per pair.
Geese—$1.25.
Citrons—15c each.
Snow apples—25c per pk.
Green Tomatoes—20c per pk.
Pumpkins—10c each.
Onions—35c per pk.
Cauliflowers—10c each.
Carrots—20c per pk., and 80c per bag.
Beets—20c per pk.
Potatoes—$1.40 and $1.50.
Sage and savoury—5c per bunch.
Cabbage—5c and 7c per head.
Pork—11c and 12c.
Lamb—12c and 13c.
Pigs—(six weeks) $5 per pair.
Baled hay—$5c per cwt.
Loose hay—$14 ton.
Farmers' hides—9c.
Live hogs—$6.00.
Dressed hogs—$8.50 (nominal quotation.

DELIGHTFUL EVENING SPENT

A very delightful evening was spent at St. Paul's church last night, when the Presbyterian "Normalites" and the members of the Springville Presbyterian Church assembled in the Sunday School rooms, and, after listening to a splendid programme, proceeded to cultivate the social side, while a dainty luncheon was served, the male portion of the assemblage officiating very acceptably as waiters.

The Springville congregation was well represented, as were the Normal students, and all received a most hearty welcome by Rev. Mr. Pogue and the officers of the church.

Rev. Dr. Marsh presided as chairman, and in a short introductory speech, expressed his gratitude on behalf of the congregation of the Springville church, for the hearty welcome they had received, and hoped that the time would come when the Springville people would have the opportunity of welcoming them to their church for a similar purpose. He said that as the time was rapidly passing, and a fairly long programme was in store, he would not occupy the time, and introduced the first item on the programme.

The programme was as follows:
Piano duet—Miss McKee and Miss Stark.
Address—Mr. Sanderson.
Vocal solo—Mrs. Perrin.
Recitation—Miss Clark.
Vocal duet—Mrs. and Mr. Jas. Fowler.
Address—Mr. F. Wilson.
Instrumental solo—Miss Ferguson.
Reading—Iris Mowatt.
—Violin solo—Mr. Wilson.
Instrumental duet—Miss Cathsart and Miss Morrow.
Recitation—Robt. Whitfield.
Instrumental—Rev. J. Marsh.

Every number was greatly appreciated by the audience, who showed their enthusiasm in no uncertin manner. The artists are to be congratulated upon their success, as every number on the programme was exceptionally well given, and in nearly every case an encore was received.

At the close of the programme, refreshments were served and an enjoyable evening was spent by all. The feature of this part of the evening, was the guessing contest, where a list of questions was distributed around, the answers to which were indicated by parts of a tune played on the piano.

On account of the long drive, the Springville people departed early and what proved to be a most enjoyable, and in every way, sociable, evening was terminated in the usual manner.

SKIN SOFT AS A CHILD'S

"I was a great sufferer from eczema and salt rheum for years," writes Mr. John W. Naas, Lunenburg, N.S. "Five years ago three boxes of Dr. Chase's Ointment cured me and the old trouble never returned. My skin is soft as a child's now, and I shall always say a good word for this Ointment."

OTONABEE COUNCIL

The Otonabee Council met on the 16th of October. The committee appointed to interview the local parties interested in the road on the 10th line north of the C.P.R., which the promoters of the rifle range asked to have closed (the said local parties object to the closing of the road) recommended that no action be taken until the Dominion Government settle with the said parties.

On motion the Collector's Bonds were approved and accepted. On motion $80 was appropriated to repair the road to River View Park on condition that Ward 5 granted $40. E. Devell, Commissioner.

The following accounts were passed: Jas. Bryce, shingling hall, $124; painting and repairing $59.91; J. M. Drummond, attending judge's Court of Revision, $19.54; Geo. Hall, drawing culverts, $3; Wm. Devlin, picking stones off roads, 75 cents; H. Hair, cedar, $21.46; M. Y. Crowly, gravel, 13.08; Wm. O'Leary, $12.40; Indian department, $5.28; D. Kelly, $7; D. Hayes, $4; D. McCarthy, $4.20; drawing culverts, $7.50; P. Enos, gravel, 24 cents; John Dickson, $3.88; John Webster, $12.20; John Thun, $7.10; Wm. Hogan, repairing pipe at 6th line water tank, $1; A. McDonald estate, plank, $8.20; E. H. Campbell, envelopes, 20 cents.

Council adjourned to Nov. 20th.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner,—

Dear Sir,—I see a letter in last evening's Examiner written by Mr. Percival G. Webb, assailing me for having shown a moving picture in the Royal Theatre, of which he as a British subject, did not approve. Now I think Mr. Webb is ignorant of the manner in which films are shown in Ontario or he would not write such a letter about me.

For Mr. Webb's information as well as for the benefit of every one who takes pleasure in visiting the moving picture shows of this city, I just wish to state that no picture can be shown in Peterborough or in any place in Ontario, unless it passes the Board of Inspection, composed of three members, appointed by the Whitney Government. I would be pleased if Mr. Webb would write Mr. Whitney drawing his attention to the matter, as it is evident he believes some one is not doing their duty and the responsible party is the Ontario Government.

Now, if the Ontario Government sees fit to pass such a picture, how is the poor show man to deal with the matter? I do not profess to have the knowledge of the Board appointed by the Governmen, and I would advise Mr. Webb to take the matter up with them.

Every picture shown in my house since July 1st last has passed the Censor Board appointed by the Government. The Government is responsible to the public for everything shown. The film exchange pays a license of $500 per year and 50c fee for every film examined, so yeu see we have nothing to do but show the pictures, the Government taking the responsibility for all they pass.

The Board passed the picture referred to, and they are responsible.

Yours truly,
M. PAPPAS,
Royal Theatre.

Peterborough, Oct. 20, 1911.

Editor Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I noticed a letter in last night's Examiner from one P. G. S. Webb re an anti-British picture shown at the Royal recently. I hope Mr. Webb will blame the Ontario government, instead of Mr. Pappas, as the former are supposed to endorse all the pictures shown in Ontario. I think, however, there has been a mistake made by the Picture Trust in sending this one to Ontario, as they naturally want to please their patrons. The one in question was probably intended for Quebec. Mr. Webb's political allies down there would not object to it.

Yours truly,
BRITISH BORN.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was surprised and disgusted when I read in your paper that the corner of Brock and Water streets had been recommended as the best sight or location in the city for the new City Hall. The party that recommended this must be short-sighted, and thinks that Peterborough is not going to grow. There are certainly far better and more central sites for a City Hall, and my opinion is that a City Hall should be on the main street and as central as possible. Why not alter the building at the corner of Charlotte and George? This could be made into a fine City Building, and there is plenty of room to extend it along Charlotte street east if it is required, and the city owns this land and will not have to go into the land business and buy more. This building could be made an ornament to our city with its fine tower and the clock illuminated, and every one coming into the city by both railways would see it, and it is best site or location in the city for if this could not be utilised to advantage, then build it in the centre of the present Market Square, and build cement walks to it and sod the rest. It could be made a very pretty site, and move the market down to the river at the foot of Charlotte st.

There is also the Bradburn lot at the south of the Custom House, which is central. Let us remember that Peterborough is destined to be a big city, and that we want a City Hall built in keeping with such a progressive city, and don't think of hiding our new City Hall under a bushel and putting it in such an out-of-the-way place as the one selected.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space.—I remain, yours truly,
WELLWISHER.

AS GOOD AS A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are little ones. They are as good as a doctor; are absolutely safe and can always be relied upon to drive away any malady arising from derangements of the stomach or bowels. Concerning them Mrs. O. A. Wheeler, Northlands, Sask., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets an invaluable medicine. I live twenty miles from town and doctor, so am glad to have so reliable a medicine at hand. I consider the Tablets a real necessity in the home and shall never be without them. They have kept my baby well and have made him a bonnie baby." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EARL GREY HOME.

He Is Given a Welcome by Corporation of Liverpool.

Liverpool, Oct. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Earl Grey, accompanied by Ladies Sybil and Evelyn Grey, were given a royal welcome on their arrival here yesterday. They were received by the Lord Mayor of Liverpool, wearing his chain of office, Harold D. Bateson, chairman of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce; Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Mackinnon, general officer commanding the western command;. Gen. Bingham, whose son has been acting as A.D.C. to Earl Grey in Canada; and W. J. Doll, general manager of the Allan Line. His Excellency, invited to give a public message, said:

"It is impossible to be too sanguine as to the future development of Canada. It is a splendid country. It is going ahead as fast as anyone could desire. The more it increases in strength, the greater will be the accession of strength to the Empire.

"I am glad to be back in England after seven eventful years. They have been seven happy years in a land of open sunshine, and, although I am glad to be back among those who are carrying on practically singlehanded the whole burden of the British Empire, I confess I was sorry to leave the Dominion.

"As to the Canadian climate, I can only say that I thoroughly enjoyed it, whether in summer or winter, and I am not sure that before the present winter is over I shall not wish to be in Canada again."

Earl Grey and family later journeyed to London by special train, in which was reserved a royal saloon, decorated with choice flowers, the gift of the Canada Club, the Allan Line, and the C. P. R.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

North York school teachers opposed the use of the rifle by public school boys at a meeting yesterday.

Mrs. James Stacey of North Dunwich was crushed between a thrashing engine and separator, and killed.

Mrs. Ferris of Port Colborne made a plucky defence when attacked in her home by a masked burglar, and finally drove the man off.

The town of Derna was bombarded on Oct. 18 by the Italian squadron. The forts were destroyed before the Turkish flag was hauled down.

Rev. Dr. Gorham A. Gifford died yesterday in Stratford. In the passing of Dr. Gifford, Stratford has lost an honored citizen and a pioneer Methodist.

George Whisken, aged 12, a son of Edward Whisken, was seriously injured by being run over by a coal cart at Kingston. His right thigh was crushed.

Exeter's new passenger station was totally destroyed by fire about two o'clock yesterday morning. When the fire was discovered the building was a mass of flames. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A valuable horse, owned by Alexander Quinn, farmer of Fermoy, near Kingston, dropped dead, and the post mortem showed that the animal had been poisoned with arsenic and paris green. An arrest is expected.

The lighthousekeeper on Pie Island, near Fort William, was found murdered, and a couple of dead Indians lying nearby led to the belief that the redmen killed the keeper for the sake of some wood alcohol in the light house, and, drinking the liquor, died as a consequence.

Lennox Not Retiring.

Barrie, Oct. 21.—Haughton Lennox, M.P. for South Simcoe, says there is no justification for a published report that he might vacate his seat in Parliament to make way for Hon. W. T. White, and go on the bench, adding: "Neither is my retirement from public life in sight, as suggested; and whenever, from any cause, that event occurs, the free people of South Simcoe will themselves, as in the past, select their representative."

Wanted In Toronto.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—Civings Shaffer, secretary of the Richelieu Securities Co. of Buffalo, was discharged by Magistrate Fraser yesterday afternoon on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences from W. J. Campbell of Niagara-on-the-Lake, but he was immediately re-arrested by Chief Kimmins upon request of the Toronto police, who want Shaffer on a charge of fraud.

G. T. P. and Its Employes.

Winnipeg, Oct. 21.—At the Trades and Labor Council Thursday night a resolution was passed urging the Federal Government not to make grants to the Grand Trunk Pacific in the building of a National Transcontinental Railway until the company agrees to grant employes the same treatment as to hours, wages and other conditions as other railroad companies in the same locality.

Advanced Price of Milk.

Brantford, Oct. 21.—Brant County milk producers have decided to advance the price of milk at the dairy from 13 to 15 cents per gallon. Following this the retailers met here Thursday night and advanced the price from 6c. to 7c. per quart. The producers say the scarcity of food is responsible for the raise, which goes into effect Nov. 1.

Assaulted His Father.

Kingston, Oct. 21.—James Devine, while under the influence of liquor, attacked his father, James Devine knocked him to the ground and brutally assaulted him. Magistrate Farrell imposed a fine of $20 and costs or two months. The father gave evidence against his son, who has been in the Police Court on several occasions.

Snow In Northwestern States.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 21.—Snow has been falling since seven o'clock in North Dakota and northern Minnesota, says a despatch last night.

Bolivia Customs Increase.

La Pas, Bolivia, Oct. 21.—The Bolivian Chamber of Deputies yesterday passed a bill increasing customs duties fifty per cent.

Carvell Holds His Seat.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 21.—There will be no recount in the Federal election in Carleton County, the judge deciding the application by the Conservatives to be faulty.

Dear Sir,—I noticed a letter in last night's Examiner from one P. G. S. Webb re an anti-British picture shown at the Royal recently. I hope Mr. Webb will blame the Ontario government, instead of Mr. Pappas, as the former are supposed to endorse all the pictures shown in Ontario. I think, however, there has been a mistake made by the Picture Trust in sending this one to Ontario, as they naturally want to please their patrons. The one in question was probably intended for Quebec. Mr. Webb's political allies down there would not object to it.

Yours truly,
BRITISH BORN.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—I was surprised and disgusted when I read in your paper that the corner of Brock and Water streets had been recommended as the best sight or location in the city for the new City Hall. The party that recommended this must be short-sighted, and thinks that Peterborough is not going to grow. There are certainly far better and more central sites for a City Hall, and my opinion is that a City Hall should be on the main street and as central as possible. Why not alter the building at the corner of Charlotte and George? This could be made into a fine City Building, and there is plenty of room to extend it along Charlotte street east if it is required, and the city owns this land and will not have to go into the land business and buy more. This building could be made an ornament to our city with its fine tower and the clock illuminated, and every one coming into the city by both railways would see it, and it is best site or location in the city for if this could not be utilised to advantage, then build it in the centre of the present Market Square, and build cement walks to it and sod the rest. It could be made a very pretty site, and move the market down to the river at the foot of Charlotte st.

There is also the Bradburn lot at the south of the Custom House, which is central. Let us remember that Peterborough is destined to be a big city, and that we want a City Hall built in keeping with such a progressive city, and don't think of hiding our new City Hall under a bushel and putting it in such an out-of-the-way place as the one selected.

Thanking you Mr. Editor for your valuable space.—I remain, yours truly,
WELLWISHER.

AS GOOD AS A DOCTOR IN THE HOUSE

Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in every home where there are little ones. They are as good as a doctor: are absolutely safe and can always be relied upon to drive away any malady arising from derangements of the stomach or bowels. Concerning them Mrs. O. A. Wheeler, Northlands, Sask., says: "I have found Baby's Own Tablets an invaluable medicine. I live twenty miles from town and doctor, so am glad to have so reliable a medicine at hand. I consider the Tablets a real necessity in the home and shall never be without them. They have kept my baby well and have made him a bonnie baby." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

EARL GREY HOME.

He is Given a Welcome by Corporation of Liverpool.

Liverpool, Oct. 21.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Earl Grey, accompanied by Ladies Sybil and Evelyn Grey, were given a royal welcome on their arrival here yesterday. They were received by the Lord Mayor of Liverpool, wearing his chain of office, Harold D. Bateson, chairman of the Liverpool Chamber of Commerce; Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Mackinnon, general officer commanding the western command; Gen. Bingham, whose son has been acting as A.D.C. to Earl Grey in Canada; and W. J. Doll, general manager of the Allan Line. His Excellency, invited to give a public message, said:

"It is impossible to be too sanguine as to the future development of Canada. It is a splendid country. It is going ahead as fast as anyone could desire. The more it increases in strength, the greater will be the accession of strength to the Empire.

"I am glad to be back in England after seven eventful years. They have been seven happy years in a land of open sunshine, and, although I am glad to be back among those who are carrying on practically singlehanded the whole burden of the British Empire, I confess I was sorry to leave the Dominion.

"As to the Canadian climate, I can only say that I thoroughly enjoyed it, whether in summer or winter, and I am not sure that before the present winter is over I shall not wish to be in Canada again."

Earl Grey and family later journeyed to London by special train, in which was reserved a royal saloon, decorated with choice flowers, the gift of the Canada Club, the Allan Line, and the C. P. R.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

North York school teachers opposed the use of the rifle by public school boys at a meeting yesterday.

Mrs. James Stacey of North Dunwich was crushed between a thrashing engine and separator, and killed.

Mrs. Ferris of Port Colborne made a plucky defence when attacked in her home by a masked burglar, and finally drove the man off.

The town of Derna was bombarded on Oct. 18 by the Italian squadron. The forts were destroyed before the Turkish flag was hauled down.

Rev. Dr. Gorham A. Gifford died yesterday in Stratford. In the passing of Dr. Gifford, Stratford has lost an honored citizen and a pioneer Methodist.

George Whisken, aged 12, a son of Edward Whisken, was seriously injured by being run over by a coal cart at Kingston. His right thigh was crushed.

Exeter's new passenger station was totally destroyed by fire about two o'clock yesterday morning. When the fire was discovered the building was a mass of flames. The origin of the fire is unknown.

A valuable horse, owned by Alexander Quinn, farmer of Fermoy, near Kingston, dropped dead, and the post mortem showed that the animal had been poisoned with arsenic and paris green. An arrest is expected.

The lighthousekeeper on Pie Island, near Fort William, was found murdered, and a couple of dead Indians lying nearby led to the belief that the redmen killed the keeper for the sake of some wood alcohol in the light house, and, drinking the liquor, died as a consequence.

Lennox Not Retiring.

Barrie, Oct. 21.—Haughton Lennox, M.P. for South Simcoe, says there is no justification for a published report that he might vacate his seat in Parliament to make way for Hon. W. T. White, and go on the bench, adding: "Neither is my retirement from public life in sight, as suggested; and whenever, from any cause, that event occurs, the free people of South Simcoe will themselves, as in the past, select their representative."

Wanted In Toronto.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 21.—Civings Shaffer, secretary of the Richelieu Securities Co. of Buffalo, was discharged by Magistrate Fraser yesterday afternoon on the charge of obtaining money under false pretences from W. J. Campbell of Niagara-on-the-Lake, but he was immediately re-arrested by Chief Kimmins upon request of the Toronto police, who want Shaffer on a charge of fraud.

G. T. P. and Its Employes.

Winnipeg, Oct. 21.—At the Trades and Labor Council Thursday night a resolution was passed urging the Federal Government not to make grants to the Grand Trunk Pacific in the building of a National Transcontinental Railway until the company agrees to grant employes the same treatment as to hours, wages and other conditions as other railroad companies in the same locality.

Advanced Price of Milk.

Brantford, Oct. 21.—Brant County milk producers have decided to advance the price of milk at the dairy from 13 to 14 cents per gallon. Following this the retailers met here Thursday night and advanced the price from 6c. to 7c. per quart. The producers say the scarcity of food is responsible for the raise, which goes into effect Nov. 1.

Assaulted His Father.

Kingston, Oct. 21.—James Devine, while under the influence of liquor, attacked his father, James Devine knocked him to the ground and brutally assaulted him. Magistrate Farrell imposed a fine of $20 and costs or two months. The father gave evidence against his son, who has been in the Police Court on several occasions.

Snow In Northwestern States.

Minneapolis, Minn., Oct. 21.—Snow has been falling since seven o'clock in North Dakota and northern Minnesota, says a despatch last night.

Bolivia Customs Increase.

La Paz, Bolivia, Oct. 21.—The Bolivian Chamber of Deputies yesterday passed a bill increasing customs duties fifty per cent.

Carvell Holds His Seat.

St. John, N.B., Oct. 21.—There will be no recount in the Federal election in Carleton County, the judge deciding the application by the Conservatives to be faulty.

In a Terrible Hurry.—In a certain barber's shop in Glasgow some little time ago a man was sitting in a chair. He was in a terrible hurry to catch a train. The boy who was lathering him was slowly going backward and forward with the shaving brush, and the man's temper was fast breaking bounds. "Hurry up, Tommy!" he exclaimed. But still the boy went no quicker. At last the man could stand it no longer. "Keep your brush still, my lad," he shouted, "and I'll wag my head."

"In the Help Wanted" Column—of the Examiner, will be seen an advertisement of the Women's Domestic Guild, of Montreal, who are advertising the arrival on October 30th, November 12th and 28th of carefully selected and capable Old Country domestics. Those in Peterborough, who are in need of house help, will be sure of capable and reliable domestic help, if they will write to the Guild, 71 Drummond Street, Montreal, or 47 Pembroke street, Toronto.

Relating their Trials.—It was on one of the Clyde steamers. Some of the passengers were relating their experiences of fogs. "Yes," said the old salt; "I've seen some pretty thick fogs in my time. Why off the coast of Newfoundland the fog was sometimes so thick that we used to sit on the rail and lean against it! We were sitting one night, as usual with our backs up against the fog, when suddenly the fog lifted, and we all went flop into the water. A bit thick, wasn't it?"

Christian Endeavour Societies' Rally.—A rally of the Young Peoples' Christian Endeavour Societies of this city, will be held in St. Andrew's Church, on Monday evening, the 23rd of October. The chair will be taken at eight o'clock by the Rev. Mr. Rollins. The meeting will be addressed by Mr. Karl Lehmann, one of the leaders of the Christian Endeavour Union of the United States. Special music will be rendered during the evening. An offering will be taken to defray expenses. On Sunday morning, October 22nd, Mr. Lehmann will occupy the pulpit of the Murray St. Baptist church, and in the evening that of St. Andrew's church.

Did You Ever Think?—That when you attempt to get the dirt out of your carpets by sweeping, that you only drive it down into the pile to become alive with vermin, and therefore make your house very unsanitary. The modern way of cleaning is to use the Vacuum Cleaner system. The Automatic Hand and Electric Vacuum Cleaner, we sell, is the best, by test. Let us explain the superiority of the double-tank screening system over the ordinary machine. Electric, $110; Hand, $25.00, with complete set of tools; both fully guaranteed. TASK IS NOT EASY

Italians Are Meeting a Bitter Resistance in Tripoli

A COSTLY SURPRISE

Berlin, Oct. 23.—A special despatch to The Lokal Anseiger from Tripoli, by way of Malta, reports a sanguinary fight on Thursday night near the city of Tripoli. The Turks surprised the Italians, who were caught between two fires. The warships were unable to give any assistance. Fifteen Italian soldiers were found dead in the trenches. A large pile of uniforms belonging to Italian soldiers later was discovered in a field, which leads to the belief that the Italian casualties were much more serious than admitted. Many dead and wounded were transported to the warships. The authorities, however assert that only one man is missing.

The same correspondent says that the Turkish garrison at Benghasi is offering vigorous resistance to the Italian troops, and is being aided by the Senussi tribesmen. The landing of further troops has been hindered by a storm.

Criticizing the Premier.

Rome (via the frontier), Oct. 23.—Both at home and abroad the employment of seemingly excessive forces by Italy in its Tripolitan campaign has come in for criticism, and it is pointed out that this policy does not seem to be compatible with the expressed intention of Italy to avoid bloodshed.

Premier Giolettl, it is explained by Government officials, is following the same course in this war as he followed in his home policy. At the first threat of disorders it has been his policy to mass sufficient police and troops to make resistance impracticable. The Premier has not forgotten Italy's defeat in Abyssinia, and he holds that any excessive caution is justified.

His wish has been to make the occupation of Tripoli certain, without risk and with the avoidance of the horrors of war. The show of force, he believes, will impress the Turks sufficiently to retard them from offering serious resistance.

Where is the Phial?

Boston, Mass., Oct. 23.—In their efforts to clear up the circumstances of the death of Avis Linell, the Hyannis Sunday School teacher and music student, with whose murder Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson is charged, the police have been unable thus far, it is said to locate the poison receptacle.

When the girl took the dose of cyanide of potassium which caused her death, she was in the bathroom of the Young Women's Christian Association Home on Warrenton street, and though the house was searched immediately after her death by order of the medical examiner and later by the police, the receptable which had contained the poison, before she had poured it into a cup to drink, cannot be found.

Invitations May Be Curtailed.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Considerable speculation, not to say apprehension, prevails in social circles in Ottawa as to the conditions governing at Rideau Hall under the regime of the Duke of Connaught. There is a somewhat widespread feeling that the invitation list for state and social functions there may be submitted to a process of elimination. Nothing official or semi-official on the subject is obtainable, but something along the line indicated seems highly probable.

THREE MEN CHOSEN.

Darrow Says McNamara Jurors Will Be Selected by Jan. 1.

Los Angeles, Oct. 23.—A jury in the McNamara murder trial by Jan. 1, 1912, was the prediction made on Saturday by Attorney Clarence Darrow, chief of counsel for the defence.

With no court session Saturday, opposing counsel took opportunity to finish up the work of the first complete court week in the trial of James B. McNamara for the murder of Charles J. Haggerty in The Los Angeles Times explosion.

Attorney Darrow's statement was based, he said, partly on progress made thus far, which shows three talesmen in the box, subject to peremptory challenge, but more upon the opposition manifested by talesmen to infliction of the death penalty on circumstantial evidence or i.. some instances, under any conditions.

"It is getting harder all the time to get a jury in a murder case, according to my experience," said Mr. Darrow. "The defence expects that this sentiment will form a considerable obstacle."

The state has already made public some of its direct evidence in the case, including the statement made by Ortie E. McManigal, implicating the defendant, and is known not to be dependent on circumstantial evidence altogether, but District Attorney Fredericks has taken the position that the people are entitled to a jury which will convict entirely upon circumstantial evidence if a case beyond reasonable doubt is made out, and Judge Bordwell has sustained that position.

Official Arrested.

Paris, Oct. 23.—Gen. Toutee, commander of the Algerian force in Morocco, has sent a telegram to the Minister of War, saying he has caused the arrest of M. Destailleur, the French commissioner, who has had in charge the regulation and control of the Algerian-Moroccan frontier. Because of his refusal to permit an investigation of his accounts, Mr. Destailleur and several other men, including the Caid of Oudja, are charged with illegal collusion. Other despatches received here from Algiers declare that the arrest of M. Destailleur is due to a contraband trade in arms and official smuggling over the frontier.

Banker Gets Five Years.

Pittsburg, Oct. 23.—Jacob W. Hill, a prominent banker of East Brady, Pa., was sentenced on Saturday to five years in the federal prison at Leavenworth, Kas., for violation of the banking laws. He was charged with making false returns to the controller of the currency. Hill declared he was not responsible for the wrecking of the First National Bank of East Brady, of which he was cashier, and had he been given time he could have saved the institution. The bank failed in 1907.

Snow In Texas.

Dallas, Texas, Oct. 23.—Snow, the earliest in the history of that section, has fallen over the panhandle of Texas and northwestern New Mexico for the past 24 hours. At Amarillo, where flowers were blooming and trees yet covered in summer verdure, the sight was novel and unprecedented. The remainder of the state is blanketed by a heavy rain with the temperature registering 50 degrees. The forecast for to-day is frost all over the state, except in the extreme south portion.

Killed by Fall.

Toronto, Oct. 23.—While removing a shutter from a second storey window of his residence, 381 Markham street, on Saturday, James E. Bizzey lost his footing and fell to the ground, sustained a fractured skull. Medical aid was summoned at once, but he died several hours later.

The body will be removed to Montreal, where it will be interred in the family plot. A widow and four children survive. He was a member of the I. O. O. F.

"Holy Ghost" Ship in Port After Fearful Privations

LEADER IN GAOL

Portland, Me., Oct. 23.—As the climax to months of hardships, during which he and his little band of followers at times suffered from hunger and thirst as their yacht Coronet was buffeted about by sea and wind, the Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us Society of Shiloh, was brought to this city last night in the custody of the county authorities.

His arrest was made on a writ in a civil suit brought by Mrs. Florence N. Whittaker, wife of one of the Holy Ghost and Us leaders, who alleged that she was illegally detained aboard the Kingdom, formerly one of the Sandford fleet. She was released on habeas corpus proceedings in June, 1910, and since then the authorities have been awaiting the appearance of Sandford within the jurisdiction of the state, that they might place him under arrest.

When Sandford was brought ashore from the Coronet, which swings at anchor off the quarantine station, a wrecked and disabled craft, he was accompanied by the husband of the woman at whose instigation he was arrested, the Rev. A. A. Whittaker. The latter came ashore that he might assist in arraigning bail for his leader.

Last night two men were brought ashore from the Coronet by the health authorities and placed in a local hospital, both suffering with scurvy. Seven others, six men and one child, died of the same disease and were buried at sea during the past few months, according to statements made by members of the crew. Many others have had touches of scurvy.

Not a sail of her original suit of canvas was left whole and there was a foot of water in the cabin when the Coronet entered the harbor and dropped anchor off the quarantine station yesterday. Her flying jibboom, both her jibs and foresails were carried away in recent storms, and her mainsail was split to ribbons. The pumps were being worked continually.

In the vessel's larder there was not a loaf of bread and no fresh meat had passed the lips of any of the religious seafarers for many days. So exhausted and weakened were the crew and passengers that it is doubtful if they could have kept their craft afloat for many days.

The Coronet has been at sea since June 27, when she sailed from a Haytien port, and was last reported on Sept. 27, when she was sighted by the steamer Lapland, flying signals which indicated that she was short of provisions. The Lapland sent relief and then proceeded. At that time the Coronet was off Cape Sable. For the last week the staunch craft has been beating her way along the coast, her crew despairing her ability to reach port.

On board were fifty-five people, including Rev. Mr. Sandford and his wife and five children. Besides the thirty-one survivors of the wreck of the barkentine Kingdom, there were twenty-four persons who were on the Coronet when she left Maine waters. The party included eleven children, ranging in ages from four to sixteen years, and just nineteen able-bodied men.

Worn by the terrible hardships of months at sea, half-starved and with faces emaciated, it was a ghastly looking company of seafarers which confronted the boarding party at quarantine. For seven days the men and women have been working incessantly at the pumps, in reliefs of three watches and this terrible labor in their weakened condition had reduced even the strongest of the crew to mere skeletons as compared with former selves.

While they worked at the pumps, man and woman prayed incessantly. In the storm every small boat was smashed to kindling wood, and if the yacht had foundered, the Shilohites would all have perished without a chance to save themselves.

The Coronet, which more than twenty years ago defeated the schooner-yacht Dauntless in a race from Sandy Hook to Queenstown, has been battered by many seas since she left Portland in 1911. When asked where she had been, the sailing master, H. F. Witham, replied: "Everywhere." He said later that they had been to the Holy Land, but had spent much time in the tropics, spreading the faith of their sect.

LEONARD HEADS N. T. R.

St. Catharines Man Gets Important Job—Senators Appointed.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—Announcement of four appointments was made by Premier Borden following Saturday's meeting of the Cabinet.

Reuben E. Leonard, St. Catharines, to be chairman of the National Transcontinental Railway Commission.

Hon. Senator Landry, to be Speaker of the Senate.

Alphonse Lariviere, to be Senator from Manitoba.

Adam Carr Bell, to be Senator from Nova Scotia.

The Leonard appointment is of course the most important. It has been made after much consideration and consultation and makes the first instance in years a big federal office has had to man.

R. E. Leonard has accepted the post as a matter of public duty, the ten thousand dollar salary being small consideration to a man whose annual income exceeds the half million.

Mr. Leonard is a graduate of the Royal Military College and stands high among Canadian engineers. He has a wide experience in railway construction and operation, having had much to do with the building of the C.P.R. short line, the New York Central and other lines. Latterly he has been best known in connection with the Coniagas mine and the smelting industry at Thorold.

The negotiations leading up to Mr. Leonard's appointment were conducted by Hon. Frank Cochrane.

A. C. Bell takes the Senatorship held by the late Senator Comeau of Digby, N.S. He is an old Parliamentarian and was Conservative candidate in Picton in the last election.

J. A. C. Lariviere enters the Senate in place of the late Senator Chevrier. He also is one of the Conservative old guard who of late years have failed to come back by way of the ballot box.

Senator Landry gets the Senate Speakership, because he is the only French Conservative Senator eligible, and the Senate Speaker must be French now that Dr. Sproule is to preside in the Commons.

WILL STAND BY VOTE.

Bourassa Says Nationalists Want Plebiscite on Navy.

Montreal, Oct. 23.—Although Hon. F. D. Monk did not put in an appearance at the Raivelle demonstration in Chambly yesterday, Mr. Henri Bourassa was present and made a very interesting statement in view of recent happenings at Ottawa.

He was a little scandalized to see the Liberal papers blaming Mr. Borden for taking Col. Sam Hughes into his Government and making good old Dr. Sproule Speaker when these same Laurier men were only too glad to get Sam Hughes' support when they wanted to violate the rights of the minority in the West.

He claimed that the platform of the Nationalist group was that laid down by Sir John Macdonald when at Quebec in 1864 the then Conservative leader had said there must be no victor and vanquished, no inferior or superior race in Canada. Then he felt Mr. Borden was too honorable a man to want to repudiate his policy supporting Monk's plebiscite resolution, supported by Col. Hughes and all his friends.

"Let Canadians be asked if they want to maintain their strict autonomy as loyal Canadian and loyal to the flag and sovereign. Do they want secondly to contribute directly to the imperial navy or do they want to build a navy here which will be Canadian in times of peace and British in times of war," he said. Whichever decision the majority reaches it will be loyally accepted by the Nationalists.

REBELS HOLD THE PASS

They Have Cut Off 3,000 Imperial Troops, Says Report

LOYAL FORCES FLEEING

Pekin, Oct. 23.—Gen. Yin Tchang, the War Minister, who is in the neighborhood of Sinyongchau, in Honan Province, has completed the mobilization of 20,000 men, but the opinion is held here that he has no intention for the present to begin an advance against the revolutionaries holding the towns of Wuchang, Hanyang and Hankow.

The Provinces of Honan and Tupeh are divided by a high ranges of hills, through which the only pass for many miles is traversed by the railway. It is reported that this pass is held by the rebels, who have posted many guns. They are supposed to have cut off 3,000 imperial troops, who are fleeing northwards from Hankow.

The Government first mentioned Kwangshui, which is on the south slope of the hills, as the place of Yin Tchang's mobilization, but evidently the War Minister has been content to assemble his forces on the north side of the hills. The pass is believed to be impassable by the troops under Yin Tchang. Whether he will reinforce them is questionable because of the growing feeling that it will be necessary to retain all available forces as near to Pekin as possible.

It is stated significantly that Yin Tchang intends to perfect his organization before advancing against the rebels holding Hwangchow, which is some miles below Hankow at the narrowest point of the Yangtsekiang.

A reliable report has reached here that on the morning of Oct. 18, the third brigade of Government troops arriving at the Liuchiamiao stations, were fired upon by the rebels with thirty-six field guns, whereupon the whole brigade stampeded to the north. The provincial troops hastened to their aid, but without avail. The imperial troops were in a state of consternation, and the rout could not be checked.

The same advices add that the brigade had no option but to return to Sinyangchau and await reinforcements. Liuchiamiao is about 65 miles to the northeast of Kwangshui, and it is therefore evident—if the report of the rout is true—that the Government does not hold Kwangshui.

Dead Man Identified.

Hamilton, Oct. 23.—The body at the unknown man, who was killed on the T., H. & B. Railway tracks Friday evening, was identified Saturday afternoon as that of Abraham Lee, an Englishman, who for the last six years and at the time of his death boarded with Mrs. Cahill, 199 East Ferrie street.

Lee had worked at the Sawyer-Massey plant as a painter for about five years, but more recently and until a few days ago had been employed at the Otis Fensom Elevator Works.

Friday morning the unfortunate man left Mrs. Cahill's house about 8.30 to look for work, and was not seen alive again by any of his acquaintances. His subsequent movements are unknown, and his friends know of no reason why he should have been in the locality where his death is supposed to have occurred.

Same Family.

Syracuse, N.Y., Oct. 23.—A unique wedding in which a widow of ten children, became the bride of a widower with ten more, took place yesterday afternoon in the Church of the Assumption, where Mrs. Margaret Webber was married to Joseph Reinman, both of this city. The wedding ceremony was performed by Father Ambrose, pastor of the church. Some of the children of both principals are married. The bride's youngest is six. Her husband's youngest is eight. They will live in a new house just completed at No. 504 Spring street.

U. S. Soldiers at Quebec.

Quebec, Oct. 23.—Battery C. Militia Volunteers of Massachusetts, arrived in town yesterday morning by special train from Lawrence, Mass. The battery left Lawrence, Mass., on Friday night and arrived yesterday morning. The battery numbers about 90. The battery paid a visit to St. Anne de Beaupre yesterday, and also had a trip around town.

Pastor Created Scandal.

Kansas City, Mo., Oct. 23.—Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, held in Boston on a charge of murdering Miss Avis Linnell, was pastor of the Bethany Baptist Church in this city from 1901 until 1904, when he resigned by request, following the sensational disclosures of three young women, each of whom accused him of being engaged to her.

Abandons Canada.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—The last incident of the reciprocity campaign occurred Saturday, when E. H. Patchin, who has been in charge of the now defunct bureau of The New York Herald, left Ottawa for Washington. Among those at the station were Consul General Foster and Hon. Mackenzie King.

Sweet-Toothed Burglars.

Hamilton, Oct. 23.—Burglars who are thought by the police to be amateurs broke into the office of the Aylmer Canning Co. on Mary street Saturday morning and made away with about $1 worth of stamps and the contents of several cans of preserves. Entrance was gained by breaking a window glass. No effort was made to get into the safe.

Shot Hit Prince's Ship.

New York, Oct. 23.—A London cable Saturday morning said: News has leaked out of a sensational incident which occurred off Portsmouth on Tuesday, when the battleship Hindustan, on which the Prince of Wales is serving, was struck by a shot from her sister ship, Colossus, while engaged in target practice.

The Hindustan was stationed near the target to note the affect of the firing, when during a slight mist a six-pounder shell from the Colossus plunged aboard on the after deck. Being plunged the shell was harmless after falling, but narrowly missed a seaman, who was the only person on that part of the deck. The prince was below at the time.

Reduced to Weekly.

Quebec, Oct. 23.—La Vigie, which has been published as a French Liberal morning paper since the latter end of 1909, announced in its issue of Saturday morning that it would hence forth appear only as a weekly. The paper states that when it became a daily its promoters looked largely to the future and upon a rapid increase in the population of Quebec. Unfortunately things have not grown as fast as it expected, and, in addition, recent developments have not been of a nature to create encouragement.

Six Workmen Injured.

Montreal, Oct. 23.—Six workmen were buried under bricks, mortar and other debris when a portion of a building on St. Dominique street, which they were engaged in demolishing, collapsed at 2.30 p.m. Saturday.

Three of the men were taken to the General Hospital, where they must remain several days to recover from the cuts and bruises resulting from their fall.

The following are the injured, who had to receive hospital attention: Antonio Rossa, 1885 St. Andrew street; Louis Romano, 2235 St. Andre street; Sam Soblosky, 660 St. Dominique street.

What Did He Mean?

Hamilton, Oct. 23.—An early visit of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught to Hamilton is intimated in a letter received by Mayor Lees Saturday morning from the new Governor-General's secretary. The date of the visit is given as Nov. 31, but as that month has only thirty days, some uncertainty exists as to the date meant. It is thought, however, that the royal couple will be here on Nov. 30. The reception committee of the City Council will start immediately to prepare an elaborate program of entertainment for Their Royal Highnesses.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

Yet there was something terrifying to her in the mere fact that Ganley could remain closeted with that autocratic functionary for so long, whether the time was being spent in bribe-passing or in imbibing aguardiente flavoured with Jamaica rum and dried mint-leaves.

Her fear fell away from her, however, when she saw Ganley come out of the stateroom door again. His face was dark and troubled, and to the guardedly watching woman his tread seemed heavy and spiritless.

She explained the episode to McKinnon, an hour later, when he casually strolled below and slipped unobserved into her cabin, as they had arranged.

"I don't think even Ganley could placate a beast like Yandel," explained the operator. "It would be like trying to wheedle yourself into the good graces of a grizzly. And he's been drinking—drinking abominably. It would be worse than trying to pet a boa-constrictor. He knows how to navigate a ship, and that is all."

"But if Ganley should put the whole case before him, and make the bribe a sufficiently big one? Suppose he waits until the last, and then simply buys him over?"

McKinnon shook his head.

"He's not the buyable kind, or he would have been bought before. And then he's against everything—he simply lives by fight and friction and opposition."

"But think of his power!"

"I don't think we need to, when we remember he's nothing but a whisky-tippling and saturnine misanthrope."

"Still, couldn't he be bought over, if the bribe were made big enough? As big as Ganley could afford to make it?"

"I don't pretend to knowledge as to what a man will do when he's tempted enough," answered McKinnon, as he fixed his absent and studious eyes on the troubled woman. "But something instinctively tells me Captain Yandel is not going to be our danger-point." He was silent for a moment or two, for her question had sent his ever-active mind off on a new tangent.

"I must be the one to temporize with him and keep him guessing until it's too late!"

"But it would only make things worse, in the end."

"Could they be any worse?"

"Perhaps not, but can you expect Ganley to trust you now?"

"I don't think he quite understands, yet. And I'll go to him and give him back his revolver. It's no use to me—and I've noticed he carries a second gun."

"But you, yourself?" interposed his companion. McKinnon watched his pocket.

"I've had to carry this, now and then, even before this trouble. But we can't lose anything by keeping in touch with him. And there's always a chance of my wireless picking up something."

"Suppose Captain Yandel has spoken to him of the scene in your room?" asked the girl, apparently disturbed by some new thought.

"Which scene?"

"When you told him I was your—your wife," she explained, with heightened colour.

"I'm sorry I had to stoop to a trick like that," said the other, with unexpected humility. It will make it so much harder, later," she ventured.

"I'm sorry," was all he could say. Her face suddenly coloured with a deeper flush at the thought that he had misinterpreted her.

"By later I mean all that we may have to go through before we are off this ship."

"Then escape from this ship is to be counted the end of everything?" he asked.

"No, no," she murmured, "the beginning."

"Could it be the beginning I am hoping for?"

She drew back from him and looked about her, as though she had suddenly reawakened to their immediate surroundings.

"Neither of us has the right to hope, until we are free."

"But we will be free—we are free!"

"Not until we have escaped from Ganley and all he stands for."

"Ganley, then, is our first bridge," he cried, with sudden energy.

"Yes—our first bridge!"

"Then before we cross that bridge I'm going to test a girder or two!"

CHAPTER XVII.
THE PROFFERED CROWN

The Laminian's wireless operator sat in his room, three hours later, with his door hooked back against the wall-plates and his window curtains gently flapping. From its unpainted shelf droned and hummed his dry-battery electric fan. A seaman passed by under the awning, carrying in his hand a cluster of deck-lamps. From the open ventilator-heads came the discordant sound of steel shovels grating on the steel, occasional slam of a furnace door the throb and pulse of the unvarying engines. Otherwise it was very quiet: sea and sky met in a world of unbroken peace which the passing of so incongruous a thing of steel and steam disturbed for only a moment, agitated foolishly, yet for only a heart-throb or two.

Then high above the quiet deck sounded out an even more incongruous noise, the nervous, tense staccato of the wireless "spark." It seemed like some underworld god of speed striking out titanic chords; it was like some ghostly fingers playing on a harp of haste. McKinnon sat between his four flashing white walls and sent his Hertzian waves arrowing out over the lonely acres of the Caribbean, hurling his coil's mysterious and imponderable force against the engulfing isolation of the sea. Then came a space of silence and again the blue-coloured sprite danced and jigged at the masthead.

As McKinnon had secretly hoped that sustained rattle and roar of his "spark" brought to his pen door the huge and white-clad figure that had been meditatively pacing the bridge deck.

"Could you take a message for me if you're in touch with anything?" asked Ganley from the doorway.

"The operator put down his ear-phones and motioned for the other man to enter.

"I thought I had something then," he explained, "but it's only static breaking through!"

"What's static?"

"Lightning-flashes, somewhere beyond the skyline. I can hear 'em go like a roll of drums that bend up to what we call a cough or sneeze."

"Perhaps you're not in good running order," ventured Ganley, eying the apparatus as a street cat might eye a canary behind its cage bars.

"It's working as smooth as oil," answered McKinnon, adjusting his receiver again and listening for a minute or two. "But we're too far away from things. We're drifting too far away from a white man's world."

Ganley sat down with his slow and ponderous deliberateness. McKinnon found it hard to say just what he wanted to say, for the weight of their last encounter was still heavy on his spirit.

The other man seemed to understand the source of his embarrassment. He sat back, at last, and diffidently remarked: "You had something to say to me?"

McKinnon reached a long thin arm over to the back of his operating-table.

"Yes, I'd forgotten to give you back this gun of yours," he said, as he held the revolver out to its owner.

Ganley took it diffidently, turned it over in his fingers, puckered his heavy lips, and casually dropped the gun into his side pocket. Then he looked up at the other man.

"That was pretty ugly talk you got about me the other night" he began, sliding low in his chair until his attitude was nothing more than a nonchalant lounge. "I suppose you swallowed it whole—everything that attractive young woman said?"

It cost McKinnon an effort to hold himself in, but the only line of procedure in warfare such as this, as he had learned, was the indirect one.

"I don't believe everything I hear," was his answer, as he assumed an equally indifferent position.

"I guess most stories 've got their two sides," remarked Ganley, largely.

"This woman, though, claims you're nothing more than a gun-runner," the younger man carelessly reminded him.

"Well, I am," suddenly declared Ganley, with his little deep-set eyes squarely on the other man's. "Can't there be two sides to gun-running?"

"The law side and the outlaw side I suppose," suggested McKinnon.

Ganley stared at him, a little heavily, a little impatiently, as the beetling iron-grey eyebrows worked ruminatively up and down.

"Look here, son, I want you to understand this situation! These bodega-hugging, labour-loathing fire-eaters down here have got to have their theatricals. And youve got to have somebody set the stage and supply the coloured lights for 'em. And if one man doesn't 'tote in the fireworks, another damned soon will."

"And toting in the fireworks is your business?"

"That's my business! I keep supplying them with the nicest little pin-wheels that money can buy. They've got to have 'em, no matter where they come from. So I'm keeping their show going, and I'm making them pay for it good and plenty."

"You only supply the fireworks?"

"Not always; but ain't even that enough? It's revolutions and revolution-talk that run their cafes—for you'll notice these little distractions always start in the cities, where there's plenty of vino blanco and spare time. There's not a republic down there that's able to eat right, if it hasn't got a boundary dispute to take up its spare time, or a junta-fed patriot to keep handing out rebel proclamations. They live on 'em. And I keep their vaudeville going for 'em."

"But hasn't this particular calling its particular dangers?" McKinnon casually inquired.

"That's part of the game! There are even men down there who'd go so far as to call me a law-breaker. If that's what I am, I'd like to know what you'd call those Yankee concession-hunters and wire-pullers and bribe-givers who burrow around for underground contracts and then run squealing to Washington like a stuck pig every time a peon slaps a banana car with a machete! No, sir, that's my market, and I'm going to hold it. I'm going to climb on to that Guariqui gang's pay-car and hang the complete sign over its dashboard!"

"But isn't this man De Brigard getting there ahead of you?" ventured McKinnon, watching for the effect of that softly exploratory probe.

"I guess I'll be in time for a little of the fun," answered Ganley, guardedly. The other was compelled to acknowledge there was something primordially massive about this uncouth Caribbean king-maker. There was something titanic and persuasive about this self-confessed filibuster of petty republics. His very audacity was a ponderable asset. The sheer force of the man could still appeal to some substratum of romance in the other's none too emotional state of mind.

Some trace of this feeling must have shown itself in McKinnon's half-smiling glance, for a new confidence crept into the tones of the man so closely watching him.

"I've been in many tight places, he placidly declared, folding his arms over his great chest. "And I've got out of 'em, every time, just as I'm going to get out of this one!"

"But where's the hole, this time?" mildly inquired the operator.

"Not bein' dead sure I've got you on my side," said his candid enemy.

"But you have got me!" protested the other.

"Then why haven't you been sayin' so?"

"I can't say so openly! I've got to watch myself and go slow," equivocated McKinnon.

"But what's the use o' falling between two stools? Why not swing in with the right side, nip and tuck, while you've still got the chance?"

Ganley was on his feet by this time, standing over him.

"See here, you're no piker. You're quick, and you're clever.

"You're not afraid of a big thing, just because it is big. I've got n wires laid, and I'm going to knock that Locombian government off its feet, if it costs me half a million to do it. I'm goin' to blow it higher'n Gilroy's kite. They've got chronium mines down there worth more'n a million. I'm going to clean out that Guariqui gang and I'm going to do it good when I do it. That's my country down there," and he waved a great ape-like arm toward the south-west, "and a week from now'll see it made into a white man's land."

McKinnon peered up at him, wondering if by any chance the man had indeed persuaded himself of the justness of his cause.

"I tell you you've got to swing in with us," Ganley was blandly declaring. "You haven't any show. This work is going to be done quick and done quiet."

"But how about leaks?"

"There's not going to be any leaks. I've got my plan for that."

"What plan?"

Ganley laughed his short and mirthless laugh.

"A little plan to keep things quiet. The one and only thing we don't want is interfertnce. It's our fight, and once we win it there'll be no trouble. We're a nation then, damn it, the New Liberal Party. We're a government of our own, and we can go back and patch up outside quarrels when we see fit."

"But what will you do with the Laminian? How about our captain, for instance?" McKinnon asked.

"I'll give him more than aguardiente to worry over!" declared the gun-runner, with a snort of contempt for that saturnine ship's master. "Oh, I've got this thing figured out as close as a sum in arithmetic. Some night this week our men are to surround their little two-by-four capital. Tuesday morning, by daybreak, if our guns and stuff are all landed, they'll begin to cannonade. By Tuesday afternoon we'll be advancing on the Palace itself. By Wednesday night we'll have Duran and his gang shelled out or our own men shoved in. By sun-up on Thursday we'll have Duran deposed and the new government declared, an hour after those Palace gates come down, with our own men in office. There's no use my beating about the bush with you any longer. It's all got to come. And I don't want you workin' against us. I know you're game enough; and I like your style. I don't want to see you cuttin' your own throat. And if you see us through for the next two or three days I'll do the right thing by you."

"How the right thing?"

"I'll deed you over a third interest in the Parroto chromium mines, and make you Minister of Telegraphs for the new republic, with a salary of six thousand dollars in gold!"

Some momentary spirit of romance of vast issues and strange dangers, of hazards and risks in far-off corners of the earth, seemed to hover about the hot and stuffy little cabin.

"I mean it," went on Ganley, as placid and persuasive as before. "I'll tie myself down to it. And that hill-town of Guariqui is going to be a mighty livable little city when we do it over!"

"It's not Guariqui I'm afraid of," was McKinnon's evasive answer. He was thinking, not so much how some spirit of youth and adventure less sophisticated than his own might be shinned and intoxicated by such prospects as these, but just how he was going to discover Ganley's undivulged plan for keeping Puerto Locombia clear of all outsiders.

"Then what are you afraid of?" demanded Ganley.

"It's so big," complained the other. "So big for me, I mean!"

Ganley laughed, a little scornfully.

"Then take a day or two off and get used to it. Sleep on it, and let me know how you feel about it tomorrow or next day. Is that satisfactory?"

"Anything you say," McKinnon answered.

The other man rose heavily to his feet, crossed slowly to the door, and turned back to stare absently about the crowded little room.

"You'll be with us all right," he said, without emotion.

But instead of going below, after bidding the operator good-night in his suave and deep-throated guttural, he slowly and meditatively paced the bridge-deck, idly blinking up at the stars above the mastheads and out over the rail at the dark sea on either side of them.

CHAPTER XVIII
THE COAST OF MISCHANCE

It was two days later that the Laminian swung in toward the coast of Locombia. Her rust-stained bow, under the lash of the sweeping trade-wind, lifted and dipped again in a sapphire-coloured sea streaked with yellow wind-rows of drift-weed. The hot sun blistered the painted woodwork; the air was like a backdraft from an opened furnace.

The wind freshened, as the day wore away, whipping spray along the bleached decks and humming through the tight-strung aerial at the masthead. It brought with it occasional driving showers that pelted on the sodden canvas and steaming woodwork.

McKinnon, in his cabin, laboured in vain over his tuning box and responder. He had held Ganley off for another few hours, hoping against hope that something might still be picked up. The gun-runner had not accepted this enforced delay with a good grace; there could be little more hope for quibbles or equivocations in that quarter.

McKinnon, stooping to overlook his dynamo, felt that he had at last reached the end of his rope. The Princeton was still beyond his call.

When he stood up again he mopped his face with a handkerchief, and irritably summoned a steward and for the second time sent down to the engine-room asking how he was expected to operate his coils on less than a hundred volts.

Teacher Cured of Barber's Itch

Tells of Cures Among His Pupils That Were Remarkable

Raw, Inflamed, Itching Skin is Soothed and Healed by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Barber's Itch is a form of Ringworm, which, when once started, is most annoying and unsightly, and most difficult to cure. Barbers often refuse to shave anyone having this disease, for fear of passing it on to other customers.

But you can cure Barber's Itch and keep the skin wonderfully soft, and healthy by applying Dr. Chase's Ointment. Just read what this teacher has to say about the healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment.

Mr. Chas. C. Poirier, Upper Caraquet, N. B., writes: "Two years ago while teaching at Shippegan I caught Barber's Itch. A friend told me Dr. Chase's Ointment would cure me, as it had him. When I went for a box I thought it dear, but when I found how good it was I thought it cheap.

"Not only was I cured by that single box, but it also cured two of my pupils, and this too quickly to be believed. One of them, a girl, had a running sore on the chin, which the doctor had tried in vain to cure. The other had a sore on the ear; water running out of it all the time. I can certify to the cure of these cases."

Wherever there is itching skin or a sore that refuses to heal you can apply Dr. Chase's Ointment with positive assurance that the results will be entirely satisfactory. The soothing, healing power of this great ointment is truly wonderful. 60c a box, at all dealers, or Edmandson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto.

How the Scientist Helps the Cook

THIS sounds like extremes meeting, doesn't it? But they do meet, and they meet right on your breakfast table when you are eating Tillson's Rolled Oats.

Thanks to the scientist, Tillson's Rolled Oats are absolutely clean and wholesome. Thanks to the scientist, Tillson's Rolled Oats are so prepared that they reach you with their full aroma and flavor.

Thanks to the scientist, Tillson's Rolled Oats are thoroughly cooked in 15 minutes—no more—and are then easily digestible. That is because they are rolled so thin.

Your cook will like Tillson's Rolled Oats because they are so easily prepared. You will like them because they are so appetizing and delicious.

A suggestion: Instead of cream and sugar, try milk and a sprinkle of salt on your porridge. Salt, you know, aids the digestion.

PEOPLE'S PULPIT.

Sermon by CHARLES T. RUSSELL Pastor Brooklyn Tabernacle.

GOD'S STANDARDS TO BE UPRAISED

Day of the Lord at Hand—Reign of Sin and Death in the Eve of its Power.

London Tabernacle, Lancaster Gate W., Oct. 22.—Pastor Russell spoke here twice yesterday to large audiences. We report one of the discourses which treated on the difference between human and Divine standards of measurement. He said in part:—

When we were children the days were longer and the years seemed interminable. The holidays of the year stood out before us prominently, but seemed seldom to recur. Gradually all this changed as we reached the zenith of our energy. Now the days chase each other and we marvel at the brevity of life. How God regards time we might not know if He had not revealed the matter in His Word. As we read, "A thousand years in Thy sight are but as yesterday," and "A day with the Lord is as a thousand years." Our minds assent—it must be so! And God's people are blessed in proportion as they are able to take the Divine viewpoint of life and all of its affairs.

From the Divine standpoint, then, we see that the six thousand years of earth's history, from Adam's day until now, are merely the work-day portion of a great week whose Seventh Day or Sabbath of a thousand years is "the day of Christ," "the last day," the day of judgment" or trial for the world; the day in which "every knee shall bow and every tongue confess to the glory of God"; the day in which "the righteous shall flourish and the evil-doers shall be cut off in the Second Death"; the day during which God will "pour out His Spirit upon all flesh," as He now grants it to His servants and handmaidens.

In the Divinely arranged custom of the Jews the new day began at sunset. Thus we are in the evening or beginning of the great Seventh Day of the Divine Week — the day which means so much of blessing, uplifting, privilege, opportunity of Divine favor to our race through Messiah's glorious Kingdom, which throughout this Seventh Day will reign "from sea to sea and from the river to the ends of the earth," putting down everything contrary to the Divine standards and uplifting the world of mankind (bought with the precious blood at Calvary) from sin, meanness, degradation and the tomb—up, up, up, step by step to human perfection in a world-wide Eden. The unwilling, resisting Divine favors and privileges, shall be destroyed in the Second Death.

"Six days shalt thou labor and do all thy work, but the Seventh is the Sabbath of the Lord thy God. In it thou shalt not do any work." Whosoever reads carefully, intelligently, the pages of history, must be struck with the energy which has been manifested by our race and is still being manifested. The pyramids and the ruins of ancient cities, and civilization, all tell us of the ceaseless struggle of humanity against the adverse conditions prevailing in the earth, including the strife against sickness and death, and, by a few, a noble fight against sin and further degradation.

Well does the Prophet express the truth of our observation, saying, "We have not wrought any deliverance in the earth" (Isaiah xxvi, 18.) A few have gained fabulous riches, name or fame, place or power, but the majority during all this period have gone down in the strife to the tomb, slain by the great associated monarchs which the Bible declares are now reigning—Sin and Death.

And even the comparatively few who have gained eminence and whose victories are most loudly extolled in human history have fallen also—many of them in the very prime of life—all of them in comparative childhood. Why is it that a man should not live for a hundred years when we have the Divine assurance that even under the Divine sentence Father Adam resisted death for 930 years—so vigorous was his constitution?

From the Divine standpoint the children of Adam, born in sin, shapen in iniquity, of a few days and full of trouble, fall asleep in death — like children wearied in their play; albeit it is a play grim with tragedy, in which each actor performs his part most realistically.

From the Divine standpoint human ambition and strife and energy are accomplishing a useful purpose, even though the efforts are usually selfish and often brutish. The lessons now being learned by Adam's children will not all be lost. The greater mellowness of heart and broader views of the majority of those who have thus battled selfishly for even fifty years suggests that, as a whole, our race might do better work in a second century than in the first. Moreover, the Scriptures indicate that the great drama of sin, selfishness and passion being enacted by humanity is furnishing a lesson to angelic hosts respecting the exceeding sinfulness of sin—its downward tendency — its bitter fruit and the hopelessness of any to escape therefrom except by Divine assistance.

The forbidden fruit of Eden was from the tree of the knowledge of good and evil. Doubtless the Creator would eventually have given a full knowledge of both good and evil to our first parents. They were merely forbidden an immediate plunge into knowledge to their own disadvantage. Craving knowledge before its due time, Mother Eve disobeyed her Maker and enticed her husband also into disobedience. The result has been that instead of learning the philosophy of good at first and of evil later, they and their race have been precipitated into lessons respecting evil first, with the knowledge of good to come later.

The holy angels, who have never transgressed the Divine law, have continually the lesson of good—an appreciation of the Divine character, the principles of righteousness, etc. Their lessons in respect to evil they are gaining by observation instead of by experience—the way recommended to our first parents by the Creator, but in their ignorance rejected.

But God foreknew the course which His human children would take under the influence of temptation; He foreknew that they would fall into sin and therefore would experience its penalty, sorrow, pain and death. While His eye has pitied His poor creatures for six thousand years, nevertheless He has allowed His great original Plan of the Ages to move along slowly to a grand climax—the Plan which He purposed in Himself from before the foundation of the world.

That climax in human affairs, we believe, is near at hand. It marks a great change in Dispensation. The six thousand years, the reign of sin and death, are to be completed by a terrible time of trouble which might not improperly be termed the natural result of human selfishness (sin) operating under the influence of the great principles of the New Dispensation now being ushered in. Selfishness, as represented in the accumulated financial power and energy called trusts and combines, is about to come into conflict with selfishness (sin), represented in the combining forces of humanity, labor unions, etc. The head-on collision which thinking people foresee, and which the Scriptures graphically portray, will give to society an earthquake shock; more than this, the graphic picture is of a world-conflagration which will involve the heavens, or ecclesiastical powers, and the mountains, or kingdoms of the world. The picture would be too terrible to paint, and useless as well, were it not for the silver lining to the cloud.

The awful shock which God's people are warned to avoid so far as possible by following peace—peace and benevolence—will merely prepare the way for the glorious blessings of the great Seventh Day, in which man will rest from his own schemes and endeavors and come fully under the control of the great King, Messiah, whose rule of righteousness for human uplift has been prophetically pictured for centuries.

Still looking from the Divine standpoint at the six great thousand-year days in which sin and death have reigned, we perceive that one effect has been as foretold to Mother Eve, "I will greatly multiply thy sorrows and thy conception." We perceive that our race has multiplied much more rapidly than it would have done had it remained perfect as at first, for the first children, even in the days following the fall, were frequently born when the father was an hundred years old.

We have already referred to the lesson respecting the sinfulness of sin which comes to all mankind — most fully, most consciously to those favored by contact with the people of God who have received the Divine Revelation. The enlightened ones have been but a small proportion of the whole. After two thousand years of the reign of sin and death God foretold in an obscure manner the blessings He intended to bring subsequently to the race. To Abraham He said, All the families of the earth I will bless—through thee and through thy Seed. That message, followed in Israel by the giving of the Law Covenant, has been the Light of the world. For eighteen centuries it was the only light of hope, of prospect. Then, in partial fulfillment of that promise, came Jesus, the first practical expression of Divine love and pity for our race. No longer would God content Himself merely with promises. He would now begin the work of human rescue.

But if any hoped that world-wide blessings would immediately spring up as the result of Jesus' work, he was mistaken. On the contrary, Jesus Himself was combated by the Prince of darkness and his deluded subjects. And the same principle has obtained for nearly two thousand years — all followers of Jesus have been obliged to take up their cross and suffer for righteousness, for godliness, in the midst of a crooked and perverse people, amongst whom they have shone as lights and whom, to some extent, they have assisted in enlightening, civilizing, etc.

Thus the six days of the week, so far as light, truth, knowledge of God is concerned, have all been dark days. The lamps which God provided as His followers have been as candles set upon candlesticks. They have indeed reproved the darkness, but they have been powerless to scatter it. Nor did God so intend. His declaration through the Prophet is, "Weeping may endure for the night, but joy cometh in the morning." (Psalm xxx, 5.) Again, "Darkness covers the earth, gross darkness the people"; but "the Sun of Righteousness shall arise with healing in His beams."—Isaiah lx, 2; Malachi iv, 2.

This promised Sun of Righteousness which is to scatter the darkness of earth, we are told distinctly, consists of Jesus and those who have walked in His footsteps throughout this Gospel Age. These, approved of the Father, will be glorified beyond the veil by a resurrection to glory, honor and immortality. Then speedily these will "shine forth as the Sun in the Kingdom of their Father." (Matthew xiii, 43.) This will mean the ushering in of the great Seventh Day—Messiah's Day.

From this Divine viewpoint God is not slack concerning His promises. Only six days of the week have yet passed. The glorious Seventh Day in which the great Mediator between God and men will assume His Kingdom powers is just at hand. Instead of thinking that God is neglecting and forgetting to fulfill the Messianic promises, we should with the eyes of faith realize that He is working all things according to the counsel of His own will. We should consider the matter from the standpoint that God has exercised great patience with humanity in not blotting out the race; He has been long-suffering. And this assures us that the Unchangeable One would prefer that none of His creatures should perish in death, but rather that all, if they would, might turn unto Him and live.—Ezekiel xxxiii, 11.

The great opportunity for the masses of our race to turn to the Lord and attain everlasting life will be after the darkness shall have passed, when the Sun of Righteousness shall be shining forth; after the Highway of Holiness shall have taken the place of the Broad Road to destruction; after Messiah, the great King, shall have dethroned Satan, the Prince of darkness, from the world's control; after the Prince of Peace shall have established peace upon a proper basis. Who cannot sing heartily with the poet:

"A thousand years, earth's coming glory,
'Tis the glad day so long foretold,
'Tis the glad morn of Zion's glory,
Prophets foresaw in times of old!"

Our race was generated by Father Adam as well as condemned to death through his disobedience. What the race needs is another father or life-giver, and this is exactly what the word Saviour signifies — Life-Giver, Father. The Redeemer, at the cost of His own life, became the purchaser of Adam and his race with a view to their resuscitation, their resurrection from sin and from death. Is not one of the Redeemer's titles, "The Everlasting Father"—the Father who gives everlasting life? Unquestionably He has not yet fulfilled this glorious office of Life-Giver to Adam's race; He will fulfil it, however—"in His Day."

Speaking to His faithful disciples, His followers in the narrow way, Jesus promised them, "In the regeneration ye shall sit upon twelve thrones." (Matthew xix, 28.) That regeneration period corresponds exactly to St. Peter's "times of restitution," or years of restoration (Acts iii, 19), and both of these periods agree to the general teachings of Scripture respecting a resurrection at the last day—Messiah's day—the thousand years of regeneration, resurrection, restitution, which will afford Adam and his race fullest opportunities for attaining perfection of human nature in an Edenic world-wide Paradise.

The Lord through the Prophet assures us of the wonderful success which will attend the establishment of the New Empire of earth, the dominion of the Prince of light, which will supersede the dominion of the Prince of darkness, when Satan shall be bound for a thousand years, that he may deceive the peoples no more. Thus it is written, "He shall lay righteousness to the line and justice to the plummet and the hail (Truth) shall sweep away the refuge of lies." (Isaiah xxviii, 17.)

But why the delay, do you ask? Ah, we answer, God did not permit Adam to begin the establishment of his race until first He gave him Eve as his bride, his wife. The world needed not merely a life-giver but a mother, a care-taker, a helpmate.

Similarly in the Divine arrangement God has provided that the restitution time, the world's uplifting period, the regeneration epoch for mankind, shall not begin until first the true Church, the "little flock," the Bride of Christ, shall be completed and be united or married to the Heavenly Bridegroom beyond the veil—made partaker with Him of glory, honor and immortality—the divine nature.

Thus, my dearly beloved, the great Plan of the Ages, timed by Infinite Wisdom, has delayed long enough to permit you and me and all of God's Spirit-begotten children to make our calling and our election sure to a share with our Redeemer in His glorious work. How glad we are that the door of opportunity to this "high calling" still stands open and that the Heavenly Father and the Kingly Redeemer are beckoning us to share the things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard, neither have entered into the heart of man, but which are reserved for us and for all who love Him sincerely—more than they love houses or lands, parents or children or self!

The "Conscience Fund."

Just a century ago the "conscience fund" of the United States treasury received its first contribution. A record has been kept of every penny that has found its way to the fund, the grand total amounting at present to practically half a million dollars. The largest single amount ever received by the treasury officials was $18,960.60 from some one whose identity has never been revealed. In his brief note of explanation he stated that the sum represented the duty on goods which he smuggled into the country at different times.

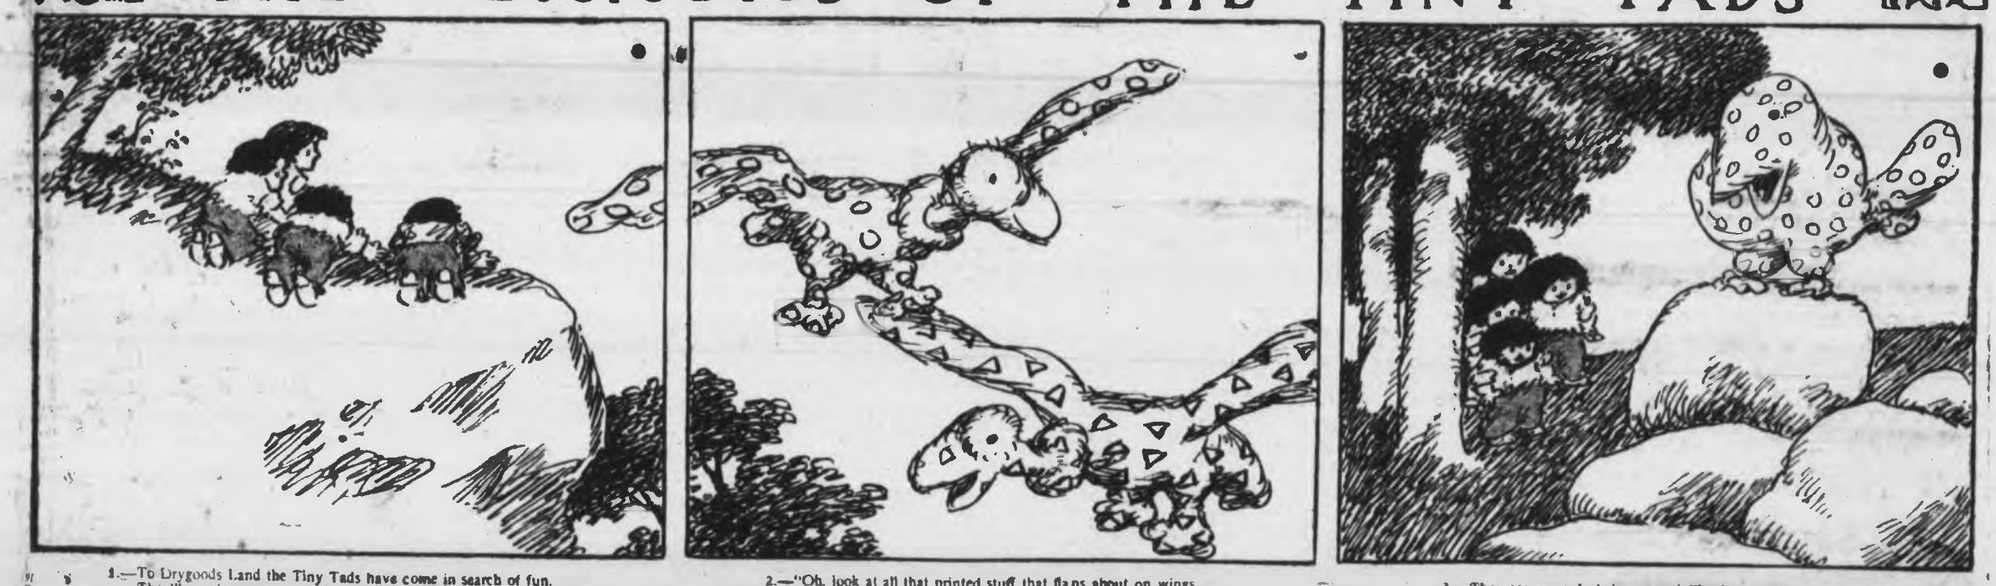
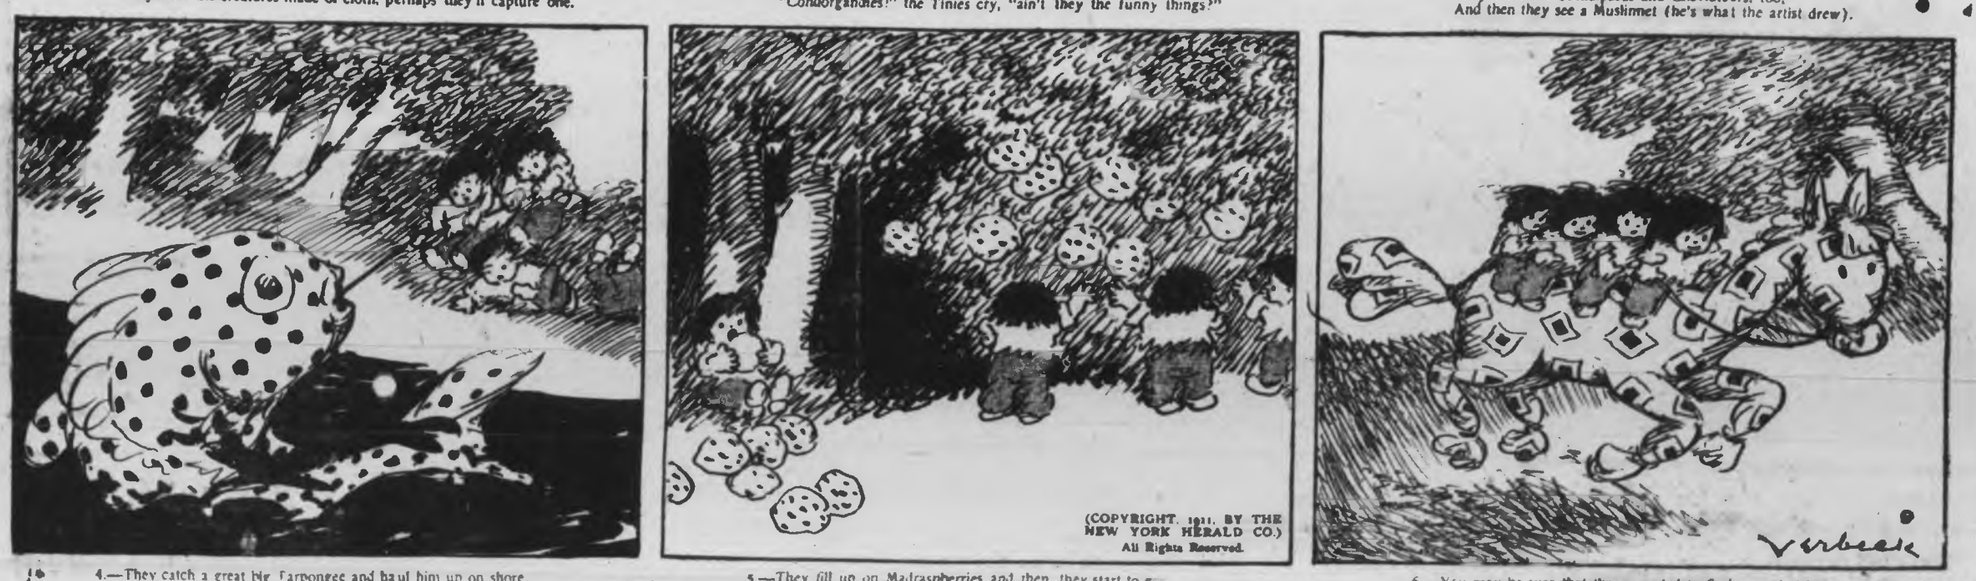
THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS



1.—To Drygoods Land the Tiny Tads have come in search of fun.
They'll see the creatures made of cloth, perhaps they'll capture one.

2.—"Oh, look at all that printed stuff that flaps about on wings.
"Condorgandies!" the Tinies cry, "ain't they the funny things?"

3.—They see some Jackalpacas and Chevioteers, too,
And then they see a Muslimet (he's what the artist drew).



4.—They catch a great big Farpongee and haul him up on shore.
They cook him and they eat him, and wish they had some more.

5.—They fill up on Madraspberries and then they start to go.
But, goodness! how the road is long and how their feet are slow!

6.—You may be sure that they are glad to find a steed at last.
"This is a Calicott," they cry as they go riding past.

ABOUT CHURNING

From Farm and Dairy.

L. A. Zufelt, Supt. Kingston Dairy School

Churning is simply the application of concussion to the cream, which brings two or more of the fat globules together causing them to unite. When sufficinet of these have united so as to be visible, we call them granules.

The churning temperature is the temperature at which the globules will adhere to one another. If the temperature is too low, they strike and go by without adhering and the temperature must be raised until the fat is sufficiently soft to stick. If the temperaure is too high, we are liable not to get an exhaustive churning, the butter will be soft, and an excessive amount of casein may also be incorporated.

No fixed churning temperature can be given. It depends largely on the proportion of the hard and soft fats present and the degree of ripeness and richness of the cream. Each butter maker will have to determine this for himself, with this provision —to churn at as low a temperature as is possible, providing it does not take over three-quarters of an hour to one hour to bring the butter. When the churning is completed, the granules should be the size of wheat or slightly larger, not smooth but ragged in appearance.

Sufficient water should be used to wash out all traces of butter milk, and at a temperature to leave the butter sufficiently firm for working.

Working is for the purpose of compressing the granules into a more solid mass, to more evenly distribute the salt and to remove excessive moisture. Salt is added to improve the flavor and add to the keeping qualities of the butter. In working care should be observed that no undue friction be employed as otherwise the grain may be injured and become greasy or salvy.

No other article of food, by its appearance, affects our senses more than does butter. Too much pains, therefore, cannot be taken to make the butter have an attractive appearance. If we are making bricks see that they are square and neatly wrapped. If we are making solids have the boxes clean and the butter packed solid, without any holes or vacancies in the corners. The air should be thoroughly excluded and the butter stored in a clean place, where the temperature can be maintained at or near freezing point, if to be kept for any length of time.

ENTAILS GREAT EXPENSE

From Farm and Dairy.

The immense quantities of apples placed in the warehouses for storage each fall have to be repacked before shipment if kept in storage for any length of time. This repacking entails great expense, and the apples are bruised in handling. Furthermore, the fruit ripens quickly in a frost proof warehouse and does not stand shipment well.

As the crop of apples is increasing from year to year and markets are opening up in the old country and in the Canadian West a system whereby the fruit can be kept in better condition and the labor and expense of repacking avoided would be a great boon to the fruit industry. It seems natural that cold storage would at least partially solve the problem. The experiments that were conducted by the Cold Storage Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the results that they obtained from storing apples are, therefore, of interest to fruit men. The high prices which prevailed when the apples were purchased and the drop in price which followed prevented the department from showing a profit on all the apples handled. The losses, however, would have been greater had the apples not been cold stored.

The apples purchased were the ordinary commercial packs of different growers. They were stored at London, Montreal, and St. John. The cold storage houses were kept at a temperature of 32 to 37 degrees during the whole storage period. Part of the apples were shipped to England after four months' storage and arrived there in good condition. The apples shipped to Calgary were unpacked in splendid condition.

Although this experiment was not a financial success owing to unusual market conditions the results are very encouraging. They demonstrate that cold storage can be used to advantage in the handling of fall and winter varieties of apples. Some conclusions arrived at from these experiments are the following:

1. Late picked apples keep better than early picked apples and have a finer appearance as well.

2. Apples placed in cold storage as soon after being picked as possible will keep better than those where the storing has been delayed. Hence the advisability of having the cold storage plant located in the district than early picked apples and have where the fruit is grown.

3. The season for Greenings can be extended several weeks if the apples are well matured on the trees and placed in cold storage.

4. Exposure to high temperatures for a certain length of time directly after picking will damage fruit more than the same exposure after the fruit has been in cold storage for some time.

JUDGING FRUIT AT FAIRS

From Farm and Dairy

The committee appointed by the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association to draw up a score card for judging fruit at fairs has given as well some valuable advice on packing apples for exhibition purposes. The directions as outlined by W. T. Macoun, chairman of the committee, will be of value to those putting up commercial packs as well as to exhibitors. The hints on the barrel pack are as follow:

When facing a barrel of apples or when beginning to pack a barrel, the apples for the first row should be put carefully in with the stem end down, the stems having been first cut off so that they will not injure the fruit when pressed. If slightly smaller apples are used in the outside rows and larger ones in the centre it improves the appearance of the face. A second row is now put in, in the same manner as the first, and these apples should be arranged so they will show through the spaces between those in the first row. These two rows constitute the face of the barrel. The fruit used for the face should fairly represent the fruit throughout the barrel, but the apples in these two rows should present as attractive an appearance as possible.

The law in regard to facing, as defined in the Inspection and Sales Act, is as follows; "No person shall sell or offer, expose, or have in his possession for sale any fruit packed in any package in which the faced or shown surface gives a false representation of the contents of such package, and it shall be considered a false representation when more than 15 per cent. of such fruit is substantially smaller in size than, or inferior in grade to, or different in variety from, the faced or shown surface of such package." Apples in barrels for exhibition should be packed as required by law.

FINISHING

By finishing is meant the heading, lining, cleating and marking of the barrel. The heads of the barrel should fit snugly into the chine. Six rosined nails in each head are usually sufficient.

The marking of barrels should be distinct and attractive. It should comply with the regulations of the Inspection and Sales Act, which call for the initials of the Christian names of the packer, his surname, and his address; the name of the variety of fruit, and the designation of the grade, whether it be "Fancy," "No. 1," "No. 2," or "No. 3." Such mark may be accompanied by any other designation of grade or brand if that designation or brand is not inconsistent with, or marked more conspicuously than, the one of the said four marks which is used on the said package.

All barrels of apples should be racked when being packed, so that the fruit will settle, and the packer thus be able to tail his barrel so that the fruit will carry well. When the barrel is opened the fulness or slackness will indicate how well the fruit has been racked. Over-pressed fruit is usually found when apples have not been racked well. This may also be expressed by the terms firmness and compactness. The more solid the pack the better the fruit will carry.

By tailing is meant the putting and placing of the last fruit into the barrel. All that is necessary in good tailing is to have the surface as level as possible with the stem end down when the apples are pressed. The care in tailing will be known when the barrel is open by the manner in which the fruit has been bruised when pressing.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many consistently modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

FRIENDS AMAZED AT THIS RECOVERY

AFTER YEARS OF AGONY, "FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HIM

HARDWICKE, N.B., Jan. 25th, 1910.

"Chronic Constipation of the Bowels was the disease I suffered with for many years. My general health was miserable.

I was treated by physicians and tried all kinds of Pills and Tablets, but nothing did me any good. I then saw a strong testimonial in favor of "Fruit-a-tives". I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effects were most marvellous. Now I am entirely well from Chronic Constipation, and my general health is once more all right".

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" — the famous fruit medicine—is the only remedy in the world that will completely and permanently cure Constipation.

GETTING GOOD HELP

From Farm and Dairy.

Jas. McIntyre, Huron Co., Ont.

We often have trouble here in getting good help. Our young men have left us for the grain-growing west. In reading Hoard's Dairyman recently I see that they have the same trouble in the older states of the United States. The explanation given by the editor is so good that I pass it on.

"There is lots of wisdom in the remarks of some of these old farmers. One day we were asking a farmer, who had been very successful in his farming operations, about a neighbor of his, who started well and then suddenly sold out and went to Canada, 'What was the matter with Jim?' we asked. 'I thought he was going right ahead all right.'

"'So he was,' replied the old farmer. 'But he lost courage in good farming. He thought land was getting too high; cows were too high, and it took too much pluck and good management to farm here. He thought he would do better to go where the land was richer and it took less brains to run a farm. I guess he had struck his limit.'"

"There is no doubt but what it takes more brains, more courage, and more skilful intelligence to handle a dairy farm in the older states than it does a grain farm in Canada. And maybe those who emigrate to those regions understand themselves better than we do.

"But it is worth while after all to be a farmer of high courage and ability. We have always noticed that it takes courage to back up ability. Dairy farming at its best really depends upon the young men who educate themselves in that direction. It doesn't flourish very much by immigration."

The foregoing applies equally well to those young men who have left the Eastern provinces of Canada, with their boundless opportunities for an easier kind of farming in the west. After all, doesn't our intensive farming develop better men?

ABOUT CHURNING

From Farm and Dairy.

L. A. Zufelt, Supt. Kingston Dairy School

Churning is simply the application of concussion to the cream, which brings two or more of the fat globules together causing them to unite. When sufficinet of these have united so as to be visible, we call them granules.

The churning temperature is the temperature at which the globules will adhere to one another. If the temperature is too low, they strike and go by without adhering and the temperature must be raised until the fat is sufficiently soft to stick. If the temperaure is too high, we are liable not to get an exhaustive churning, the butter will be soft, and an excessive amount of casein may also be incorporated.

No fixed churning temperature can be given. It depends largely on the proportion of the hard and soft fats present and the degree of ripeness and richness of the cream. Each butter maker will have to determine this for himself, with this provision—to churn at as low a temperature as is possible, providing it does not take over three-quarters of an hour to one hour to bring the butter. When the churning is completed, the granules should be the size of wheat or slightly larger, not smooth but ragged in appearance.

Sufficient water should be used to wash out all traces of butter milk, and at a temperature to leave the butter sufficiently firm for working.

Working is for the purpose of compressing the granules into a more solid mass, to more evenly distribute the salt and to remove excessive moisture. Salt is added to improve the flavor and add to the keeping qualities of the butter. In working care should be observed that no undue friction be employed as otherwise the grain may be injured and become greasy or salvy.

No other article of food, by its appearance, affects our senses more than does butter. Too much pains, therefore, cannot be taken to make the butter have an attractive appearance. If we are making bricks see that they are square and neatly wrapped. If we are making solids have the boxes clean and the butter packed solid, without any holes or vacancies in the corners. The air should be thoroughly excluded and the butter stored in a clean place, where the temperature can be maintained at or near freezing point, if to be kept for any length of time.

ENTAILS GREAT EXPENSE

From Farm and Dairy.

The immense quantities of apples placed in the warehouses for storage each fall have to be repacked before shipment if kept in storage for any length of time. This repacking entails great expense, and the apples are bruised in handling. Furthermore, the fruit ripens quickly in a frost proof warehouse and does not stand shipment well.

As the crop of apples is increasing from year to year and markets are opening up in the old country and in the Canadian West a system whereby the fruit can be kept in better condition and the labor and expense of repacking avoided would be a great boon to the fruit industry. It seems natural that cold storage would at least partially solve the problem. The experiments that were conducted by the Cold Storage Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture and the results that they obtained from storing apples are, therefore, of interest to fruit men. The high prices which prevailed when the apples were purchased and the drop in price which followed prevented the department from showing a profit on all the apples handled. The losses, however, would have been greater had the apples not been cold stored.

The apples purchased were the ordinary commercial packs of different growers. They were stored at London, Montreal, and St. John. The cold storage houses were kept at a temperature of 32 to 37 degrees during the whole storage period. Part of the apples were shipped to England after four months' storage and arrived there in good condition. The apples shipped to Calgary were unpacked in splendid condition.

Although this experiment was not a financial success owing to unusual market conditions the results are very encouraging. They demonstrate that cold storage can be used to advantage in the handling of fall and winter varieties of apples. Some conclusions arrived at from these experiments are the following:

1. Late picked apples keep better than early picked apples and have a finer appearance as well.

2. Apples placed in cold storage as soon after being picked as possible will keep better than those where the storing has been delayed. Hence the advisability of having the cold storage plant located in the district than early picked apples and have where the fruit is grown.

3. The season for Greenings can be extended several weeks if the apples are well matured on the trees and placed in cold storage.

4. Exposure to high temperatures for a certain length of time directly after picking will damage fruit more than the same exposure after the fruit has been in cold storage for some time.

JUDGING FRUIT AT FAIRS

From Farm and Dairy.

The committee appointed by the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association to draw up a score card for judging fruit at fairs has given as well some valuable advice on packing apples for exhibition purposes. The directions as outlined by W. T. Macoun, chairman of the committee, will be of value to those putting up commercial packs as well as to exhibitors. The hints on the barrel pack are as follow:

When facing a barrel of apples or when beginning to pack a barrel, the apples for the first row should be put carefully in with the stem end down, the stems having been first cut off so that they will not injure the fruit when pressed. If slightly smaller apples are used in the outside rows and larger ones in the centre it improves the appearance of the face. A second row is now put in, in the same manner as the first, and these apples should be arranged so they will show through the spaces between those in the first row. These two rows constitute the face of the barrel. The fruit used for the face should fairly represent the fruit throughout the barrel, but the apples in these two rows should present as attractive an appearance as possible.

The law in regard to facing, as defined in the Inspection and Sales Act, is as follows; "No person shall sell or offer, expose, or have in his possession for sale any fruit packed in any package in which the faced or shown surface gives a false representation of the contents of such package, and it shall be considered a false representation when more than 15 per cent. of such fruit is substantially smaller in size than, or inferior in grade to, or different in variety from, the faced or shown surface of such package." Apples in barrels for exhibition should be packed as required by law.

FINISHING

By finishing is meant the heading, lining, cleating and marking of the barrel. The heads of the barrel should fit snugly into the chine. Six rosined nails in each head are usually sufficient.

The marking of barrels should be distinct and attractive. It should comply with the regulations of the Inspection and Sales Act, which call for the initials of the Christian names of the packer, his surname, and his address; the name of the variety of fruit, and the designation of the grade, whether it be "Fancy," "No. 1," "No. 2," or "No. 3." Such mark may be accompanied by any other designation of grade or brand if that designation or brand is not inconsistent with, or marked more conspicuously than, the one of the said four marks which is used on the said package.

All barrels of apples should be racked when being packed, so that the fruit will settle, and the packer thus be able to tail his barrel so that the fruit will carry well. When the barrel is opened the fulness or slackness will indicate how well the fruit has been racked. Over-pressed fruit is usually found when apples have not been racked well. This may also be expressed by the terms firmness and compactness. The more solid the pack the better the fruit will carry.

By tailing is meant the putting and placing of the last fruit into the barrel. All that is necessary in good tailing is to have the surface as level as possible with the stem end down when the apples are pressed. The care in tailing will be known when the barrel is open by the manner in which the fruit has been bruised when pressing.

WELCOME WORDS TO WOMEN

Women who suffer with disorders peculiar to their sex should write to Dr. Pierce and receive free the advice of a physician of over 40 years' experience—a skilled and successful specialist in the diseases of women. Every letter of this sort has the most careful consideration and is regarded as sacredly confidential. Many excessively modest women write fully to Dr. Pierce what they would shrink from telling to their local physician. The local physician is pretty sure to say that he cannot do anything without "an examination." Dr. Pierce holds that these distasteful examinations are generally needless and that no woman, except in rare cases, should submit to them.

Dr. Pierce's treatment will cure you right in the privacy of your own home. His "Favorite Prescription" has cured hundreds of thousands, some of them the worst of cases.

It is the only medicine of its kind that is the product of a regularly graduated physician. The only one good enough that its makers dare to print its every ingredient on its outside wrapper. There's no secrecy. It will bear examination. No alcohol and no habit-forming drugs are found in it. Some unscrupulous medicine dealers may offer you a substitute. Don't take it. Don't trifle with your health. Write to World's Dispensary Medical Association, Dr. R. V. Pierce, President, Buffalo, N. Y.,—take the advice received and be well.

FRIENDS AMAZED AT THIS RECOVERY

AFTER YEARS OF AGONY, "FRUIT-A-TIVES" CURED HIM

HARDWICKE, N.B., Jan. 25th, 1910.

"Chronic Constipation of the Bowels was the disease I suffered with for many years. My general health was miserable.

I was treated by physicians and tried all kinds of Pills and Tablets, but nothing did me any good. I then saw a strong testimonial in favor of "Fruit-a-tives". I tried "Fruit-a-tives" and the effects were most marvellous. Now I am entirely well from Chronic Constipation, and my general health is once more all right".

A. G. WILLISTON.

"Fruit-a-tives" — the famous fruit medicine—is the only remedy in the world that will completely and permanently cure Constipation.

GETTING GOOD HELP

From Farm and Dairy.

Jas. McIntyre, Huron Co., Ont.

We often have trouble here in getting good help. Our young men have left us for the grain-growing west. In reading Hoard's Dairyman recently I see that they have the same trouble in the older states of the United States. The explanation given by the editor is so good that I pass it on.

"There is lots of wisdom in the remarks of some of these old farmers. One day we were asking a farmer, who had been very successful in his farming operations, about a neighbor of his, who started well and then suddenly sold out and went to Canada, 'What was the matter with Jim?' we asked. 'I thought he was going right ahead all right.'

" 'So he was,' replied the old farmer. 'But he lost courage in good farming. He thought land was getting too high; cows were too high, and it took too much pluck and good management to farm here. He thought he would do better to go where the land was richer and it took less brains to run a farm. I guess he had struck his limit.' "

"There is no doubt but what it takes more brains, more courage, and more skilful intelligence to handle a dairy farm in the older states than it does a grain farm in Canada. And maybe those who emigrate to those regions understand themselves better than we do.

"But it is worth while after all to be a farmer of high courage and ability. We have always noticed that it takes courage to back up ability. Dairy farming at its best really depends upon the young men who educate themselves in that direction. It doesn't flourish very much by immigration."

The foregoing applies equally well to those young men who have left the Eastern provinces of Canada, with their boundless opportunities for an easier kind of farming in the west. After all, doesn't our intensive farming develop better men?

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Higher—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 21.—A huge reduction to-day in the estimated wheat yield of the Canadian Northwest helped give the market for that cereal an upward tilt. The closing tone was strong, with prices running from the same as last night to ⅛c advance. In corn there was a net decline of ⅛c to ¼c; oats finished unchanged to ⅛c up, and provisions varied from 5c lower to 10c higher.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ½d higher than yesterday on wheat, and ½d higher on corn. Paris wheat closed unchanged, Berlin ½c lower, Budapest ⅛c lower, and Antwerp unchanged.

Broke Her Crank Shaft.

London, Oct. 23.—The North German Lloyd steamer Kaiserin Auguste Victoria yesterday signalled to the Browhead station that she had passed the Holland liner Sloterdyk in latitude 50.15 north, longitude 16 west, in a disabled condition. Sloterdyk had broken her crankshaft and required immediate assistance. Several vessels are proceeding to the rescue.

The Sloterdyk left Rotterdam Oct. 18 for Boston and Philadelphia. Apparently when spoken by the Kaiserin Auguste Victoria, she was about 300 miles off the coast of Ireland.

Portuguese Cruiser Wrecked.

Lisbon, Oct. 23.—The Portuguese cruiser Sao Rafael has been wrecked at the mouth of the River Ave. A heavy fog prevailed and high seas were running at the time of the accident. The crew of 200 men, it is believed, were saved. Fifty of the men swam ashore.

The Sao Rafael was a cruiser of 1,800 tons with a speed of 17.5 knots. She carried a complement of 237 men and 18 guns.

Sought by Detectives.

Chatham, Oct. 23.—Charles Fuller, sought by Detroit authorities for murder of the Kraft family, is thought to be hiding on Walpole Island, near Wallaceburg. Two detectives are now seeking him there. Several people have seen a man answering Fuller's description. He was last seen in the Temple Theatre at Wallaceburg on Thursday.

Toronto Man Forms Company.

Atlanta, Ga., Oct. 23.—The Georgia Railway & Power Co., a $27,000,000 corporation formed for the purpose of bringing together the hydro-electric plants in the Piedmont section of Georgia, was formally organized here Saturday, with Charles Macon of Toronto as president.

B. G. McNabb, of the Montreal Power Co. accidentally shot himself while duck shooting at Sorel, and is dead.

The Montreal Board will oppose the tramway merger along the lines submitted to and approved by the shareholders of the Montreal Street Railway Co.

Peel Conservatives nominated Mr. Samuel Charters, and in Frontenac Reeve Rankin captured the convention from Mr. J. S. Gallagher, the sitting member.

Liberal nominations for the Legislature on Saturday were: South Brant, Ald. M. E. Harris; South Wellington, Mr. James I. McIntosh; West Peterboro, Mr. R. R. Hall.

Mrs. W. Potts of Saltford, near Goderich, who was seriously injured in a runaway collision Saturday, succumbed to her injuries without regaining consciousness.

Herbert Johnstone, aged 18, stole a horse and rig from his employer, Jos. Wood, Barriefield, Ont., but in short time was arrested and sentenced to two years in the penitentiary.

The annual convention of the Canadian Forestry Association will be held at Ottawa, Feb. 7 and 8 next. The annual meeting of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association will also meet then.

By imperial decree, Gen. Chan Piao was executed at Hankow, and Sui Ching Foy, former Viceroy of Hupeh and Hunan Provinces, has been ordered arrested and brought to Pekin for punishment.

New Railway Planned.

Vancouver, Oct. 23.—Announcement that J. D. McArthur, millionaire railway contractor of Winnipeg, and associates, had acquired a charter for a railway extending from Edmonton to Fort George, B.C., was made yesterday by J. L. Cote, member for Athabasca in the Albert Legislature.

The proposed line will traverse the richest part of the Peace River district, entering British Columbia via Pine River Pass, north of Yellowhead Pass, and opening up vast regions in the northern portion of this province. It will be over 1,000 miles long and will take the shape of two sides of a triangle, its apex at Pine River Pass, which has a low altitude. An exploratory survey party is now going over the route to secure data preliminary to undertaking the location work. It is expected that the line will be completed and in operation within four years, as it is understood arrangements for financing the proposition have already been completed.

This road, when completed, will connect with the Grand Trunk Pacific at Fort George, providing a line in the through route from Vancouver to the Peace River district.

Christian Chinese Weren't.

Ottawa, Oct. 23.—The police yesterday raided a Chinese resort at 59 O'Connor street, and gathered in 58 Chinamen. The place was found to be a gambling den and opium joint; fan tan was largely in progress in the basement, with other games of chance and a Chinese lottery table in the corner. The officers gathered the money and apparatus. Upstairs an opium joint was in full session and much material around.

Many of those arrested had just left Sunday School and had tracts and religious books with them. All are held in the cells till the police court sits.

Will Probe Teacher's Death.

Toronto Oct. 23.—Startling revelations may yet be made regarding the death of Violet Smith, who came to her death by drowning in the River Shebeshekong. In the eyes of the relatives the whole affair is still enshrouded with mystery—mystery of such a nature that a thorough investigation is to be conducted without delay.

The remains were brought to Toronto on Saturday evening, and yesterday morning Chief Coroner A. J. Johnson performed a postmortem at the request of the relatives, and it is believed, discovered signs of ill-usage. Dr. Johnson did not wish to disclose any information as yet, but intimated that further developments would be made in a day or so.

Whooping It Up.

Welland, Oct. 23.—About a hundred temperance addresses, under the auspices of the Dominion Alliance, were given yesterday in churches in Welland and Haldimand Counties, most of the speakers coming from Toronto.

An Electrical Feat.

Remarkably successful results have been achieved by two young men living in the West Monmouthshire hamlet of Gellygrues, who have made an installation of wireless telegraphic plant. The young inventors are Arthur Moore, the son of a miller, and Richard Jenkins, electrician at a local colliery. With a home-made apparatus constructed largely from oddments of wood and metal, and some poles affixed to the tops of the trees, the two young men ultimately effected communication between the mill and Tyllwyd Farm, two miles distant, where Junkins lives. Since then their inventive powers and perseverance have been applied with such success that they are said, in their secluded village, to have picked up messages from liners at sea, and from continental stations. Moore, as a boy, had the misfortune to lose a leg while experimenting with the machinery in his father's mill. He now utilises the machinery for driving a dynamo connected with the wireless installation.

Willing to Go Halfway.

"Mr. Borelelgh was here this afternoon, James, and he says now that you have your motor he'd like to have you run over and see him some time," said Mrs. Blithers.

"Well, if he calls again," said Blithers, "just tell him that I'll be glad to run over him at any time, but I don't care particularly about seeing him."

Baby Wasn't Hurt.

Smith's Falls Oct. 23.—Some children playing in the home of Mr. Milton Hay of Hallville procured a box of dynamite caps, not knowing what they were, and gave them to the baby to amuse him. He let the dangerous toy fall to the floor, and immediately there was a terrific explosion. The room in which is occurred was badly torn up, and two little girls were seriously burned, though the baby escaped injury. There were several children in the room, but none of them were fatally injured.

The Famous Rayo Lamp

The best part of the day is the evening, when the whole family is gathered together around the lamp.

The old days of the smoky fireplace and flickering candle are gone forever. In their place have come the convenient oil stove and the indispensable Rayo Lamp.

There are to-day, in the United States alone, more than 3,000,000 of these Rayo lamps, giving their clear, white light to more than 3,000,000 homes.

Other lamps cost more, but you cannot get a better light than the low-priced Rayo gives. It has become so popular we may almost call it "the official lamp of the American family."

The Rayo is made of solid brass, with handsome nickel finish—an ornament anywhere.

Ask your dealer for a Rayo lamp or write for descriptive circular to any agency of

WHERE WHITNEY GOVERNMENT HAS FAILED

WEAKNESS OF ONTARIO LEGISLATURE EFFECTIVELY BROUGHT OUT IN SPEECHES

Mr. R. R. Hall, Hon. J. R. Stratton, Mr. G. N. Gordon and Other Speakers Point Out the Government's Unsatisfactory Agricultural Policy---Their Mistaken and Inadequate Educational Measures---Their Failure to Amend the Workmen's Compensation Act---Their Neglect of the Interests of the Workingman and Other of Their Many Defects.

As stated in the Saturday edition of The Examiner, Mr. R. R. Hall was unanimously selected by the Liberal Convention on Saturday afternoon as the Liberal standard-bearer in the coming Provincial elections. The meeting was largely attended, all parties being represented. Mr. T. Eato was representative of the Liberchant while the of both city and county. Mr. J. neme of partley, the president of the West during the borough Liberal Association, occurred the chair. Among those on against the platform were Messrs. R. R. Hall, Goodwill, Thos. Graham, of Smith; J. J. Duffus, George lespie and Hon. J. R. Stratton. many others.

The meeting to order, explained for some reason or other Sir Whitney had seen fit to call provincial election a year before term of the Legislature was comd. It was reasonable to suppose the Premier had decided upon course because of the success of Conservative party in the last Dominion election. Mr. Whitney believed that the people of Ontario be of the same mind now, but quite possible that people change their minds to such extent as to sweep the Whitney ernment out of power. He hoped the strongest man possible would nominated and felt confident that earnest support such a man be elected in West Peterborough.

When nominations were called for R. R. Hall was nominated by Geo. A. Gillespie, and seconded Mr. Thomas Graham, reeve of Smith, and the nomination was unanimously carried, amid great applause, which was renewed when Mr. Hall rose to his feet to address the convention.

The Candidate's Address.

Mr. Hall expressed his cordial thanks to the convention for tendering him the unanimous nomination of the Liberal party in the coming contest. He trusted that the splendid support which he had received when he had the honour of being the Liberal candidate for the House of Commons seven years ago would again be repeated in December next. He said he trusted that his record during the four years he had been their representative would be an ample justification to the electorate of West Peterborough in again reposing their confidence in him.

No Excuse for Election.

The Whitney Government had no excuse whatever for bringing on the election at the present time. The pretence that it was a saving of $15,000 will not down. The fact is the Government are seeking to take advantage of the Borden wave of victory last Dominion election and for this they would be condemned by all right-thinking people. They could have held another session if they had not something to conceal or some blunders that they did not desire to have disclosed, or exposed.

Non-Progressive.

Mr. Hall said "that the Whitney administration has been non-progressive and during the last seven years has proved to be lax and weak. According to the last census the population of the Province of Ontario has only increased 337,055, and that of this increase, the cities of Toronto, Hamilton and Ottawa had contributed 220,857. The census returns also show that the rural population in the Province has substantially decreased, but during the time that the Province of Ontario has only increased 337,055 we find that the ordinary annual expenditure of the Ontario Government has increased no less than $3,045,780.00. That is to say: our ordinary annual expenditure has been increasing nearly ten times as fast as the population of the Province. It will, therefore, be seen that substantial progress has been made by the Ontario Government in increasing our large annual expenditure but in the building up of the rural community they have been "weighed in the balance and found wanting." Even the Toronto "Telegram" is honest enough to deplore the lax administration in the Attorney General's department, the sleepy administration of the Agricultural department, the bungling administration in the Provincial Treasurer's department, and the stupid retrogression in the Educational Department.

How Farming Community Could be Benefitted.

Both the Provincial and the Dominion Governments have expended large sums of money on experimental farms and in the making of costly experiments in the various branches of agriculture and horticulture. They at great expense, obtained the results of experiments which have been made in the United States, England, and European countries, and which are of great value to the farming community. Reports and bulletins of various kinds have been sent to the farming community in waggon loads. Mr. Hall submitted that that is not the way to disseminate useful knowledge. You might as well throw a law library into the Township of Smith and ask a farmer to be his own lawyer, or you might as well throw a medical library into the Township of North Monaghan and ask a farmer to be his own doctor, as to distribute by the cord technical works on branches of agriculture. What the farmers of this riding need is to have a practical demonstrator located in the City of Peterborough, to whom the farmers can go for free advice. It is well known that if an orchard is scraped, pruned and sprayed at the proper time and in the proper way, that its production during the first year will increase three hundred fold. Such a demonstrator could tell the farmer the exact day, and exactly how to treat his orchard. Much hard work is done by farmers in digging drains, but often these drains are put in the wrong place, owing to their lack of engineering knowledge in taking levels, but a demonstrator, having a knowledge of the business, could instruct the farmer exactly where a drain should be placed to give the best results, and be of the most permanent value. Similar instructions could be given in the use of fertilizers, the destruction of foul seeds, and in the improvement of poultry and live stock and other farming branches.

Cobalt and Gillies Limits.

Mr. Hall said that the Government's administration of the Gillies limits should receive the severest condemnation, owing to the stupid and unbusinesslike way in which a part of the mining rights in them were disposed of. During the time the Gillies' licenses held the limits no one was allowed to prospect in them. The Provincial Government kept men standing guard over the limits, so that the prospector could not explore for minerals. The Government withdrew a part of them from the license and while the snow was on the ground, advertised them for sale on short notice and gave little, if any, chance to the prospector and investor, and the result was that Lot A, 23, consisting 20 acres, was sold to Messrs. Young and O'Brien for $10,500.00. They spent another $3,500.00 upon the property. They negotiated with a syndicate in Montreal, who sent four independent engineers to inspect the property, and in less than three months after Messrs. Young and O'Brien had bought it from the Province, they sold it to this Montreal Syndicate for $330,000.00, thereby making a clean profit of $316,000.00. Mr. Hall said: "I ask you, is it not time that the people of this Province came to the conclusion that even a live Opposition in the Legislature would be of great service to the common people to whom politics is neither a trade nor a sain? Independent criticism and close scrutiny on the part of a live opposition would save the people in this Province many hundreds of thousands of dollars."

Hydro-Electric.

Mr Hall asked: How many new industries have been added to Peterborough of an important character since the hydro-electric commission has come into the field? The answer is plain. The fact is that the resources of the Province of Ontario by the hundreds of thousands of dollars, is being used by the Hydro-Electric Commission to build up the Nia-

POSTPONED ONCE MORE

PHILADELPHIA, OCT. 23.—Although the weather to-day is fine, the ground at Shibe Park is so water soaked that it will be impossible to play to-day, and as a result the fourth game of the world's series has been postponed for the fifth time. If the weather continues as it is to-day, the game will be played to-morrow, just a week after the third game. Most of the newspaper correspondents from outside cities have given up in despair and have gone home, while the fans of the two cities are disgusted with the delay. In all probability Mathewson will pitch to-morrow's game for the Giants with Bender opposing him.

PREPARING FOR FIGHT

Splendid Organization Meeting of Mr. R. R. Hall's Supporters Held in Committee Rooms on Saturday Night

LARGELY ATTENDED

An enthusiastic meeting of the supporters of Mr. R. R. Hall was held in the committee rooms over the Central Canada Loan and Savings Company offices on Saturday evening for organization purposes. The meeting was largely attended by a great many of the leading Liberals of Peterborough, and organization was the principal topic of the evening. It was arranged that Mr. Hall's committee rooms should be open every evening until the conclusion of the campaign.

Mr. Hall and others addressed those present on the necessity of all Liberals taking a hand and assisting in the work of the election. Mr. Hall pointed out the effect of overconfidence in the recent election. He said he quite appreciated the fact that the contest upon which he was entering was one that required work and so far as he himself was concerned there would be no lack on his part. He hoped that all his followers would give him all the assistance they possibly could. He realized that the season at which the election was being brought on, was not a good time for the business community, but he hoped that those of his friends who were engaged in business would not miss an oportunity of rendering him all the assistance possible. Registration would be necessary and he hoped that his friends would see to it that every supporter was registered. The notice of the dates would be given by the Registrars.

After a general discussion the meeting adjourned until this evening.

HER NECK BROKEN

Special Wire to the Examiner.

BELLEVILLE, ONT., OCT. 23.—Josiah Lotta, a farmer of Thurlow, was riding on the rack of a waggon Saturday night, when a board broke precipitating him to the ground, and his neck was broken. He leaves a large family.

CHARGED WITH NEGLECT

D. Montgomery, a farmer of Harvey township, was arraigned before Magistrate Edmison in the County Court this morning on a charge of neglecting his two little children, a boy and a girl. He pleaded not guilty and the magistrate reserved his decision in the case until Thursday. High County Constable Cochrane took the children away from him a few days ago, considering that the place was unfit for them.

CHINA WILL BE REPUBLIC WITHIN A YEAR UNLESS THE GOVERNMENT ACTS QUICKLY

Four of the Eight Provinces Are Practically Under the Influence of the Revolutionaries, Including City of Chentu Where the Canadian Missionaries Are Located ---Fall of Nanking is Imminent.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

PEKIN, OCT. 23.— It is officially admitted by the government to-day, that four of the Chinese eight provinces are practically under revolutionary influences. They are: Sze Chuen, including the city of Chentu, where the Canadian missionaries are located, Hupeh, Hunan and Kiang. The fall of Nanking, which is imminent, will deliver to the revolutionary faction three more important provinces. Nanking is the most important military and commercial centre in Central China. It is well fortified and garrisoned, but the soldiers are going over to the rebels in a body. The foreigners are being amply protected everywhere by the revolutionary leaders. It is generally admitted that unless the government strike a decisive blow soon, China will be a Republic within a year. In Pekin itself, there is a feeling of restlessness that a large body of troops here cannot check.

FRIENDS OF MINISTER ARE CONFIDENT OF HIS INNOCENCE

Special Wire to The Examiner.

BOSTON, MASS., OCT. 23.— Rev. Clarence Virgil Thompson Richeson, incarcerated in Suffolk county jail following the death by poison, of his former sweetheart, Miss Linnell, spent Sunday quietly and calmly reading the newspaper accounts of his arrest, and the suspicions directed against him. He says nothing to anybody but his lawyers and relatives who visit him, including the family of Moses Grant Edmands, his intended father-in-law. All believe that he is innocent of complicity in the death of Miss Linnell. The police are busy to-day trying to locate the restaurant where Richeson and the girl are said to have dined, and where, it is said, he gave her the poison.

LEONARD'S APPOINTMENT WAS BIG SURPRISE TO HIMSELF

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ST. CATHARINES, ONT., OCT. 23.—"It is the biggest surprise I ever had," said Major Reuben W. Leonard to-day, when spoken to concerning his appointment as chairman of the Transcontinental Railway Commission. It is a big surprise to other people, too. St. Catharines and Cobalt and Kingston are delighted, for he lives in St. Catharines, owns a big slice of Cobalt, and secured his technical education in Kingston. As for other parts of the Dominion, the question is being asked many times today: "Who is Leonard, and what railway building qualified him as an expert for such a big job?"

RUGBY, ROYALTY AND RELIGION IN JUXTAPOSITION AT OTTAWA

OTTAWA, OCT. 21.—For the first time in the history of any Canadian football field, when the game between Ottawa University and Toronto University teams started at the oval this afternoon the royal standard fluttered to the breeze. It flew over the special stand occupied by His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, and also marked the first occasion when any member of the royal family holding the position of Governor-General of Canada, witnessed the fartamed game of Canadian Rugby.

The Government House party included His Royal Highness the Duke of Connaught, the Duchess of Connaught, Miss Pelly, lady in waiting to her royal highness, Col. Lowther, military secretary, Lieut. the Hon. A. Ramsay, A.D.C. There were also in the special stand occupied by their royal highnesses, His Excellency Monsignor Stagni, the Papal apostolic delegate to Canada, and his secretary, Monsignor Alfred Sinnott.

DETECTIVE NEWHALL RETURNS HAD ENJOYABLE TRIP TO ENGLAND

Detective Samuel Newhall and his cousin, Mr. John Holmes, returned from a two-months' visit to England, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Newhall reports having an excellent time during his visit to London and Liverpool Police Departments, where he formerly belonged, and learned the latest in criminal theories, which knowledge will be of vast importance and very valuable to him in his work here. Many of his old comrades had risen to lucrative positions. Mr. Newhall, during his stay in London, visited the rogue's gallery, where he alo acquired a lot of valuable information. He spent most of his time in England, visiting old friends and renewing acquaintances.

Mr. Newhall retured on the S. S. Virginia, and reports having enjoyed the sail both ways very much. He arrived in Montreal on Saturday.

Macrae Case

Examiner Special:

CORNWALL, ONT., OCT. 23.—Justice Sutherland, opening the fall assizes here to-morrow, will be called upon to deal with the case of F. D. Macrae, the late reeve of the Township of Lancaster, charged with shooting and murdering W. Shaw, on July 1st, last, in connection with the attempt of Doctor Magee of Carp, to recover his child from his wife, from whom he was separated at the time.

50 YEARS SERVICE

Mr. T. W. Robinson Has Been Connected With George St. Methodist Sunday School for Half a Century

SERVICE YESTERDAY

An interesting event took place in the George street Methodist Sunday School yesterday afternoon when the fifty years' unbroken connection of Mr. T. W. Robinson with the George St. School was observed by a special service.

Mr. Robinson came to Peterborough from the Township of Smith, as a boy, in 1861, and on the first Sunday he was in Peterborough became a member of the George Street Methodist Sunday School and of the church. Ever since then he has been connected with the Sunday School. For some years after joining he was a scholar and then he was given a class to teach. He rose through the different offices of the School until he was Superintendent, a position he successfully filled for ten years. For the past five or six years he has been Superintendent of the Home Department. He has laboured unceasingly and faithfully for the welfare of the School, and his untiring efforts have resulted in great good being done.

Yesterday Mr. Robinson gave an interesting address dealing with his reminiscences of fifty years in the Sunday School, and referring to the different Superintendents who had held office, and to the important events in the history of the School. Among other things, he read a very complimentary letter from Henry Clay Turnbull, editor of The Sunday School Times.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, himself an ex-Superintendent, gave an address congratulating Mr. Robinson very warmly on the completion of his half century's work, and speaking in terms of the highest praise of his faithful service.

In the evening a harvest Thanksgiving service was held, with special music by the choir. There was a very large congregation in spite of the inclement weather.

No Trace Of Dorothy Arnold

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, OCT. 23—After searching Europe from end to end, the father, mother and sister of Dorothy Arnold, whose disappearance last December caused world-wide comment, returned to this city to-day, having found no trace of the missing girl. The Arnolds are immensely wealthy. The affair is the most mysterious in the history of New York police disappearances.

SEVIGNY TO SPEAK

Special Wire to The Examiner.

QUEBEC CITY, OCT. 23.— Albert Sevigny, the Conservative M.P. for Dorchester, whose close resemblance to Sir Wilfrid has brought him the nickname of young Laurier, has been invited by Borden to second in French, the address in reply to the speech from the throne. Sevigny is a brilliant orator and a bitter opponent of the Canadian navy.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

MONDAY, OCT. 23, 1911

HIGH QUALITY CANDIDATES.

Mr. J. Innes McIntosh, editor of the Guleph Mercury, was on Saturday unanimously nominated as the Liberal stadard bearer for West Wellington. The Liberals of this fine old riding have shown excellent judgment in selecting a candidate of so much character, ability and knowledge of political subjects and conditions, as Mr. McIntosh. His selection is a further evidence of the high class of candidates the Liberals are putting into the field. It would be poetic justice as well as good business for South Wellington and Ontario, to have another eight years journalistic representation, in the person of so creditable a member of the newspaper guild, as Mr. McIntosh.

A LITTLE PLAY OF BLUFF.

The Morning Times publishes a paragraph to the effect that Mr. J. H. Burnham has wired Mr. Borden an offer of his seat in West Peterborough, to give place to Hon. W. T. White, Finance Minister. Mr. Burnham may resign his seat for any reason he likes to give, but it does not follow that he can hand over West Peterborough as if it were his personal property. But the question is not worth discussing. It is only a little matter of bluff. Mr. Burnham knows, if he knows anything, that Mr. Borden has got a safe seat selected for Mr. White, and that safe seat is not West Peterborough. It would, on the other hand, be exceedingly risky to open West Peterborough in face of Mr. Borden's disgraceful disregard, (in the formation of his cabinet) of the principles upon which Mr. Burnham won his success.

A GOOD CANDIDATE.

In unanimously nominating Mr. R. R. Hall on Saturday to contest the representation of West Peterborough in the Provincial Legislature, an excellent choice was made. There is no question of Mr. Hall's qualifications to make a good, live, energetic representative of a live constituency like West Peterborough. Mr. Hall has shown this to excellent effect. He represented this riding in the Parliament of 1904-8, and made a first-rate representative, alert and watchful, to promote our best interests; and through Mr. Hall's energy, West Peterborough possesses a large number of material advantages. His ability, activity, energy and executive qualifications admirably fit him for making a good representative in the Legislature, one of the best that this riding could have. It is quite evident that there is too large a disparity in the party representation in the Ontario Legislature—17 Liberals to 78 Conservatives. This does not admit of good, wholesome administration; it tends to make the party in power overbearing, and does not permit of proper deference to effective criticism that is made. It is well known that the function of the Public Accounts committee is a farce. There is no proper investigation of the public accounts. The presence of Mr. Hall in the House as a member of the committee, would bring into play his keenness of criticism to practical effect. He would be an added source of strength to Hon. Mr. McKay. He is a forceful, ready speaker; he would make his presence felt in the House, and West Peterborough, in the event of his election, would have a representative of such prominence and energy that more than half of the people of the riding would know who their representative really was. Mr. Hall is a candidate that his friends can work for, with a good will; for he will do his full share of campaign-work. They can work for him with confidence in his success. What he has once done, he may well claim to be able to do again. In 1904, in the Dominion elections, he faced an adverse majority of 351, and with a popular Conservative opponent, won the election by 187. He is not afraid to face the adverse majority of 428 in the last Provincial election in this riding, and he will overcome it if he has the energetic and united support of his friends in West Peterborough. The record of the Whitney government is not as much in the public interests as is claimed for it. It is subject to very effective and very destructive criticism. Even many who voted Mr. Whitney in, are discontented with his performance, and many feel that even if his government is returned to power, it would be in the public interests, that its numerical strength should be reduced. And under proper conditions, West Peterborough will be one riding to reduce, if not contribute, to wiping out an inordinately large majority.

AN OBJECT LESSON.

Everybody has philosophically or otherwise, accepted the decision of the electors in the matter of the reciprocrity agreement; and thousands of electors in this riding are beginning to see, that what they voted for in the matter of reciprocity, as in other things, has not turned out as they were deceived into thinking it would do. British Tories, of the bread taxing school, highly praise the patriotism of and loyalty of the Canadians in making tremendous sacrifices in rejecting reciprocity — "the greatest bribe ever offered to a young nation." The flag-wavers see that their "voting for the Empire" has landed them in the camp of the most sinister enemies of the Empire, the Nationalists of Quebec, and the honest farmer, who was deluded into believing that he was such a weak vessel that he would sell his country, if he sold his potatoes to our neighbours, is beginning to see that he made a tremendous sacrifice in rejecting higher prices for his farm products. This is very aptly put by the Globe, in a few words under the heading, "The Price of Five Dreadnoughts." It presents the following object lesson:

The farmer has now time to consider what the diversion of the consideration of an economic question into a flag-waving expression of loyalty means to him.

He reads the daily market reports showing that wheat sells at Minneapolis and Duluth for thirteen cents per bushel higher than at Winnipeg or Fort William, and oats ten cents per bushel higher for equal weights on the other side of the border.

Estimated on the crop, these differences would represent to the farmer more than fifty millions on wheat and oats alone, not to consider the added profit on barley, flax, or other produce.

Inasmuch as fears were expressed that the farmers' loyalty would not stand the test of this better market, it is suggested that they could have contributed out of the extra profits five Dreadnoughts per annum to the British navy.

The farmer will do a lot of thinking when, it is, unfortunately too late. If he had done his own thinking in the late election, he would have been wiser then and better off now.

ON THE NATIONALIST TIGHT ROPE.

(The Globe.)

Mr. Borden continues to balance himself on the Nationalist tight rope. No one supposes that the new Premier likes the performance or that he fails to wince under the savage criticism of his own party Press, but having given his first exhibition under the management of Messrs. Bourassa and Lavergne, he must continue under the direction of the Nationalist leaders. And so it is announced that Dr. Sproule, recently head of the Orange Order, is to be Speaker of the Commons, while the Deputy Speaker is to be Mr. P. E. Blondin, the notorious Nationalist-Conservative, whose anti-British speeches have been quoted all over the country. During the Drummond-Arthabaska bye-election a year ago, Le Devoir, Mr. Bourassa's paper, contained the following report of one of Mr. Blondin's meetings:

"The energetic member for Champlain, Mr. Blondin, replying to the arguments of the Ministerial party represented by Mr. Joseph Demers, of St. John at St. Louis de Blandford, used an expression which an old elector from Victoriaville repeated to-day as one of the boldest expressions of our just demands: "You are attempting to intimidate the electorate by shaking the English flag before it, and by saying that we ought to contribute to the defence in all places and against all, of this protector of our constitutional liberties; but we cannot be made to forget that in 1837 it was necessary to put holes in this flag with bullets to breathe the air of liberty."

Blondin has not changed a bit in the past year. He becomes Deputy Speaker, with all his anti-British speeches on record to adjust the balance against Dr. Sproule. It requires a careful combination of the loyal and the disloyal to fabricate the balancing pole that enables the Premier to walk the Nationalist tight rope.

CAUSE FOR ALARM

Loss of Appetite or Distress After Eating a Smyptom That Should Not Be Disregarded.

Appetite is just a natural desire for food. Loss of appetite or stomach distress later after eating indicate indigestion or dyspepsia. Over-eating is a habit very dangerous to a person's good general health.

It is not what you eat but what you digest and assimilate that does you good. Some of the strongest, heaviest, and healthiest persons are moderate eaters.

There is nothing that will cause more trouble than a disordered stomach, and many people daily contract serious maladies simply through disregard or abuse of the stomach.

We urge all in Peterboro who suffer from any stomach derangement, indigestion, or dyspepsia, whether acute or chronic, to try Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, with the distinct understanding that we will refund their money without question or formality, if after reasonable use of this medicine, they are not perfectly satisfied with the results. We recommend them to our customers every day, and have yet to hear of any one who has not benefitted from them. We honestly believe them to be without equal. They give very prompt relief, aiding to neutralize the gastric juices, strengthen the digestive organs, to regulate the bowels, and thus to promote perfect nutrition, and eradicate all unhealthy symptoms.

We urge you to try a 25c. box of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets, which gives 15 days' treatment. At the end of that time, your money will be returned to you if you are not satisfied. Of course, in chronic cases length of treatment varies. For such cases, we have two larger sizes, which sell for 50c. and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies in this community only at our store,—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

ENNISMORE

ENNISMORE, ONT., OCT. 23.—On Tuesday last, the 17th inst., a very pretty wedding was held at St. Martin's church, Ennismore, when Mr. William Collins was united in marriage to Miss Ettie Cadigan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Cadigan. Both are life-long members of Ennismore Township, and both are well known and highly respected. The large collection of rare and costly presents, presented to the young bride, bears ample testimony to her widespread popularity, not alone in Ennismore, but in Peterborough, and the neighbouring communities.

Last Sunday the members of St. Martin's T. A. S. received Holy Communion in a body, and renewed their pledge against liquor for another term. This society has done a great work among the members of St. Martin's church and promises much greater work in the future.

Mr. John Toomey, at present a conductor on the Pennsylvania and Reading Railroad, is visiting friends in Ennismore, after an absence of fourteen years.

The Continuation Class has formed a new literary society under the direction of the assistant teacher, Miss Jordan, B.A. Last Friday afternoon they held their first entertainment, which consisted of speeches, music, vocal and instrumental, and a debate. The subject of the debate was "Resolved that winter sports are preferable to those of the summer." It was keenly contested, the decision being given in favour of the affirmative, by a few points. For the affirmative, Gustie Crough and Nellie Quinlan, and for the negative, Emmett Crouch and Gertrude Fitzpatrick.

Valuable Dog Was Poisoned

There seems to be another epidemic of dog poisoning in Peterborough at the present time. The past week a number of canines met an untimely end through the poison route. The latest victim was a valuable coach dog owned by Mr. Ben. Dunsford, corner of Rubidge and Sherbrooke streets, which received a fatal dose on Friday. The dog was very highly prized by its owner and naturally he is very indignant over the affair.

ST. ANDREW'S PROGRAMME FOR THE WEEK

A rally of all the Young Peoples' Societies of the city will be held this evening at 8 o'clock at St. Andrew's. The officers of the societies and the ministers are asked to meet at the church at 7 o'clock for a conference with Mr. Karl Lehmann. Many of the societies will meet at their own church and march in a body. Everybody welcome.

On Tuesday the Daughters of Erin will hold an at home at the residence of Mr. William Campbell, 511 King street.

On Wednesday, the prayer meeting will not be held but seven district meetings will be held instead, at the following homes: Mr. G. A. Gillespie, 190 Hunter street; Mr. W. J. Chisholm, 559 Water street; Mr. G. W. Green, 543 Park street; Mr. J. Johns, 418 Rubidge; the manse, 439 Rubidge street; Mr. A. Moore, 210 Aylmer street, and Mrs. Shannon, 493 King street.

Next Sunday the church will be decorated with fruits and other seasonable products for the annual Thanksgiving service.

On Sunday special Thanksgiving music will be given by the choir. In the morning the Sunday school will attend the morning service and will march into the church singing at 11 o'clock. The service will be especially to children.

On Thursday at 3 o'clock a meeting will be held in the church for the purpose of organizing a Presbyterian Home Missionary Society for the Presbytery of Peterborough. Mrs. Summerville of Toronto, President of the General Society, will be present, and will address the meeting. The ladies of the various churches in the city are expected to be present.

ANNUAL CONVENTION

Canadian Forestry Association Will Meet in Ottawa

OTTAWA, OCT. 23.—Ottawa was decided uponas the place for holding the next annual convention of the Canadian Forestry Association at a meeting of the Directors on Friday afternoon. The time is February 7th and 8th, 1912, which coincides with the annual meeting of the Canadian Lumbermen's Association, and it is proposed that the two Associations shall hold a joint meeting on the evening of February 7th. Both Associations expect an array of distinguished speakers, and the event will be one of the biggest of the kind ever held in Canada. Efficient committees have been appointed to look after the different features, and Mr. Frank Hawkins, Secretary of the Lumbermen's Association, and Mr. James Lawler, Secretary of the Forestry Association, both of whose offices are in Ottawa, will co-operate in the work.

SALE OF LOTS

Balance Will be Disposed of Privately This Week

The auction sale of lots conducted by A. Brown and Company last week proved highly successful, no less than sixty-six lots being sold. The balance will be sold privately at Mr. Brown's office up to 9 o'clock on Thursday night of this week at the same price the other lots brought at auction. Mr. Brown will be at his office to go into the matter with intending purchasers.

SHE GAINED 26 LBS.

Mrs. George Bradshaw, Harlowe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for many years with weak, watery blood and dropsy. I had nervous headaches, dizziness, and sinking spells, and was, in fact, a semi-invalid. Doctors told me my heart and kidneys were diseased and gave me up. By using 10 boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been cured of many of my old complaints and gained 26 pounds in weight."

Rev. Mr. Keith Is Ill Of Pneumonia

The many friends of Rev. H. J. Keith, pastor of Knox Presbyterian Church, will be grieved to learn that he is confined to his bed with pneumonia. He was unable to take his services in Knox Church yesterday. Citizens generally will hope that he may speedily recover.

"Consecrated Dynamite"

Mr. Karl Lehmann to Speak at St. Andrew's This Evening

In St. Andrew's Presbyterian church last evening, the congregation were delivered an inspiring address by Mr. Karl Lehmann, Inter-state Secretary of the Christian Endeavour.

Although the weather conditions were not in harmony with the occasion ,a goodly number were present, who listened with appreciation to the message imparted to them. The music, too ,was of a high order and a solo was remarkably well rendered by Miss Olive Howell.

Mr. Lehmann hails from Denver, Colorado ,and he has done yeoman service in the stimulation of young people's societies. During his remarks it was learned that the organization of the Chrstian Endeavour commenced in Maine thirty years ago. On an evening similar to that of yesterday, a pastor, his wife and fourteen young people met, and organized a society, and at the present day no less than 80,000 societies exist.

There are many things that young people's societies have emphasized, said the speaker, and prominent amongst them is our duty and responsibility of winning souls to Christ. A great evangelist once said: "The surest way of winning the world to Jesus Christ is to win one soul at a time." There are two reasons why you and I should work assiduously. Firstly, "Because the sinner needs salvation," and secondly "Because the Christian needs it." An athlete requires constant training, and soul winning is training for a Christian.

A man was once lost in a blinding blizzard. He trudged onward in the darkness until exhausted. At last, falling on his knees, he lifted up his hands to heaven and cried, "Oh Lord, save me" and in abject despair, fell prostrate with arms outstretched. As he did so, his hand came in contact with some object. He looked and saw a fellow traveller overcome by the intense cold. He arose, chafed the almost lifeless form until the man arose. In the performance of his task, he had also stimulated himself and his blood coursed through his veins once more and both proceeded on their journey. So it is with us, brethren, in winning souls to Christ, we also stimulate ourselves. I believe any one could do personal work if they would try. It is not necessary to have education to do so .Personal work can also be done at any time. People say, we have not time to talk about Jesus Christ; we are too busy. This is not so. Time can be found for such a cause as this. And it can be done anywhere. Even in the remotest parts of the world, opportunities can be found for winning souls to Christ.

Mr. Lehmann also related other stories of how individual souls were saved.

While amusing incidents were attached to some of the stories, others possessed pathos which could not fail to reach the hearts of the listeners.

Weakness Of The Ontario Legislature Effectively Brought Out In Speeches

gara Peninsula with new industries at the expense of the rest of the Province. The City of Peterborough is splendidly located for the development of electric power, but private enterprise in Peterborough cannot compete with cities and towns in the Niagara District, which are being supplied with cheap power at the expense of the taxpayers of all the rest of the Province.

Workman's Compensation Act.

The Whitney Government has displayed the utmost indifference to the wants of our mechanics, and workingmen in the matter of the simplifying and extending the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Bancroft, speaking on behalf of the District Labour Council of the City of Toronto, said: "Premier Whitney for "months did nothing but insult the "District Council. What we want to "do is to turn him out for his past "negligence and insolence to this "Council."

Mr. Hall said, the time is ripe for a remodeling of the Workmen's Compensation Act, so as to make it unnecessary for workmen or their widows and children to fight for compensation in the Court. The money spent in litigation by employers, employees, and in premiums paid to accident insurance companies would provide a fund large enough, if supplemented by a reasonable grant from the Government, to provide for a Provincial accident insurance system that would put an end to all litigation and would amply compensate the workingman or his family for the injury he or they may have sustained. The cause of many accidents is due to over-work, and, therefore, the hours of labour should be shortened in certain industries, if the employers are to get the full protection of this insurance fund as against accidents to their employees. The State has an interest in keeping the mechanic and the workingman as free from injury as possible. Since the Railway companies in England have adopted the eight-hour system the accidents upon English railways have been reduced to a minimum.

Educational System.

Mr. Hall said he thought that the weakest branch of the Whitney administration has been in the educational department. Since the abolition of the Model Schools we find that large numbers of school sections throughout the Province, and especially in the rural districts are supplied with unqualified teachers and, in some cases, with no teacher at all. Take, for instance, in North Frontenac and Addington 70 per cent. of the teachers are unqualified. We find in Haliburton, Parry Sound and East Muskoka, 63 per cent. are unqualified. In North Hastings, 66 per cent; in Manitoulin Islands 60 per cent; in East Muskoka, 53, in North Nipissing, 62 per cent.; in South Parry Sound, 65 per cent. and even to come closer to our own door, across the river, in East Peterborough there are 42 per cent. unqualified teachers teaching in our public schools. "Much excitement is being raised over bi-lingual schools," said Mr. Hall, "but let me tell you that the lack of education is not confined to French pupils in our schools, but it extends to the English pupils as well." Mr. Hall said that the results produced by unqualified teachers has been very unsatisfactory.

During the time that the Hon. G. W. Ross was Minister of Education, there was no issue raised regarding bi-lingual schools because in every part of the Province, whether it was peopled by English, French, German, or Highland Scotch, a qualified teacher properly trained in the Model School, or in the Normal school was placed in every school, and hence our French Canadian fellow subjects were not handicapped as they are at present under the administration of the Whitney Government, in acquiring a knowledge of English. In order that any person, no matter what his nationality may be, should be properly qualified for life in the Province of Ontario, he should receive a thorough elementary education, and should have a thorough knowledge of the English tongue; but such, under Mr. Whitney, is not the case, although he had it in his power, by a single stroke of the pen, to pass regulations which would provide for every pupil attending our Public and Separate schools having a thorough knowledge of the English language.

School Readers.

The cheapness of the school readers, said Mr. Hall, has been made much of by the Whitney Government and unfair comparison has been made made between present cost and the cost of former readers. The Government now pays the entire cost to the authors of school readers and of the cuts, type-setting, electrotyping, and proof revision. The present publishers, T. Eaton & Co., are allowed all these advantages and can boast and advertise at the expense of every merchant in the Province that they have reduced the cost of readers over one-half to every family. Every pupil in the Province opens and closes his lesson with the little advertisement "T. Eaton & Co." over before him, while the father and mother bless the name of "T. Eaton & Co." for reducing the cost of readers and return their thanks to the Whitney Government by sending in another mail order to T. Eaton & Co. to the injury of every local merchant. I note that the Robert Simpson Co. of Toronto has put up a "big kick" against this and now they publish the Arithmetic books used in our schools, with their advertisement in bold type on its title page. In their case the Province has paid for the cost of its composition, its cuts, its electrotyping and its proof revision. "What," said Mr. Hall, "do the city and country merchants think about their paying a share for advertising these competitive catalogue houses?"

Liquor Licenses.

The Whitney Government promised to take the administration of the Liquor License Law out of politics. They did it nobly. They dismissed every Liberal License Commissioner and Inspector in the Province and substituted in their places partizan appointees, who could be trusted to line up the liquor vote for Whitney candidates. To satisfy the Temperance vote they imposed a tax of five per cent. on the receipts of the bar, and thereby made every temperance man, woman and child silent partners in the whiskey business, the profits from which are wholly dependent on whether or not a good or a bad day's business has been done over the bar.

Provincial Treasurer.

The Tory press say that it was known that the Farmers' Bank was rotten from the start. The Provincial Treasurer, shortly before its failure, deposited in the Farmers' Bank $25,-000.00 of the funds of the Province, and it was immediately drawn out of the Bank by Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, who is now a fugitive from justice. "What knowledge," asked Mr. Hall, "had the Provincial Treasurer of this transaction?" A Legislative investigation would have shown up the facts. Sir James thinks it is better to pretend that he is saving $15,000 than let the people know how the Province was swindled out of $25,-000.00.

Attorney-General.

"Why," asked Mr. Hall, "was Dr. Beattie Nesbitt allowed to escape from justice after it was well known that he had looted the Farmers' Bank?" A reward of $200.00 has been offered for his capture. He had been a member of the Legislature. He knew the source from which Tory campaign funds had come. He knew where such funds had been corruptly spent. It appears to be a case somewhat similar to the escape of Louis Riel, after the murder of Scott. Riel got $1,000.00 to leave the country, and the late Sir John exclaimed: "I wish to God I could catch him?" Sir James would give $200.00 to catch the Doctor, but not $1,000.00, lest he might. Better have the elections before a full exposure comes to light next session. These are ugly facts. Would that Sir James and his colleagues could each truthfully exclaim regarding the Beattie episode, "Whatever leaps to light I never shall be shamed."

Mr. Hall said that on another occasion he would discuss at length the other issues which would arise in this contest, namely—the increasing of succession duties upon large estates, the preservation and reforestation of forests, the development of New Ontario; the colonization of the clay belt in Northern Ontario; the increasing of railway and waggon-road facilities in the northern country, and other matters.

In conclusion, Mr. Hall said that he trusted that the Liberals of West Peterborough would unitedly between now and the date of the election and return him as their representative.

Mr. Stratton said that first of all, he desired to return his warmest thanks to those who had supported him with their votes and influence during the past campaign. For a long period of years, the electors of West Peterborough had stood by him in all his contests, and he appreciated their good will to the fullest extent. However, the methods of his opponents had, for the moment, prevailed, but their success was only temporary, and he felt sure that the Liberal party would soon come to its own again, as there was an opportunity of doing in the present contest. He was glad to see the unanimity that marked the nomination proceedings, in the selection of Mr. Hall; and he was equally pleased with the hearty manner in which he had accepted the responsibility. The opponents of the late administration in Ontario were lied out of power, as the late Laurier administration had been lied out of power.

According to the promises of the Whitney administration, they were to reduce the expenditures of the province when they came into power. We see what they have done—more than doubled them—increased the provincial expenditure from 4 1-4 millions in 1905 to nearly ten millions in 1911, nearly a million dollars a year. They were going to improve our educational system. This had been done by crippling our educational system, so that we had so great a scarcity of teachers, that about a third of the schools in Peterborough county were without qualified teachers, and many of them without teachers of any kind. The License administration was to be taken out of the region of politics altogether. We saw how that had been done by the beautiful neutrality of all the license officials, from the inspector up during the recent election contest. There was not a hotel keeper in Peterborough who dares call his soul his own, and on the other hand, some hotel keepers are held in such dread or favour, that not a license official dares, or does, enforce the law. The expenditure that was formerly borne by the province in the maintenance of unfortunates in our public institutions, has been, by the present government, thrown upon the municipalities and the extra taxation of railways to meet this levy on the municipality, is only partially enjoyed by the municipalities themselves. Our water power, and power interests are being interfered with, by the favours and undue advantages given the western part of the province, to the evident detriment of Peterborough especially. The colonization road money in Harvey, Cavendish and Galway, was being frittered away among a few partizan favourites. Our fishery and game laws were the objects of farcical administration. With Ontario the greatest agricultural province in the Dominion, it has actually lost in population during the past ten years, through the inaction of the Whitney government. When the Ross government was in power, it "discovered," as Mr. Whitney said, "the land of the stunted poplar"; that is, that government opened up a splendid area of new country in Northern Ontario, by exploration, and revealed its tremendous mineral and agricultural resources. That government, in the face of the opposition of Mr. Whitney and his friends, started the Provincial railway as a colonization railway, so as to settle the great agricultural belt in the north. How had the present government used this railway? Instead of using it to place settlers on splendid farming lands, on fair and attractive conditions, the miner and speculator, and in some cases the mining shark, are having all the advantages.

The population of the northern sections of Peterborough had grown less in the past five years and no adequate provision had been made for bringing in new population and developing the splendid agricultural resources of the province. The government, however, would like to gain a little popularity from the work of the Agricultural College, which they condemned for so many years. The farmers and wage earners could not afford to send their clever and ambitious sons and daughters to the Normal schools, as they could do to the Model schools, by whose abolition, they had been blocked in their ambition to rise, and the result was that the teaching profession was starved, and the Public schools suffer. Great promises were made as to what the Whitney government would do for the working classes, but no attempt has been made to regulate the hours of labour in the workman's interests, or to make practical the law that would provide compensation for injuries received in the course of his work through the negligence of employers of labour. No attempt had been made throughout the province to make the hospitals through the province more advantageous and beneficial to the working classes. The administration of the Succession Duties Act was not being well looked after. Large estates were undervalued and small estates had to contribute the full pound of flesh. These and other matters would be subjects for thought and decision by the electors. The great virtues and great enterprise of the Whitney government had like a great many acts of administration, been rammed down the people's throats, but when one began to discuss the merits of their administration, the big claims made grew weak, and many weak spots were made apparent. The bluff of Sir James Whitney, that he is bringing on the elections to save a paltry fifteen thousand dollars for the bye-elections, is too thin. When the matter was analyzed, it would be seen that by bringing on the election at the end of three years, instead of four, that there was a loss of over $25,000 by bringing on the enormous expenditure of a general election a year before its time, not to count the much greater loss to the business interests of the country by bringing on the elections at a time of the year when business reaped its greatest harvest. Sir James Whitney boasted of his courage, but he was not above bringing on the elections so as to get the advantage of the "Borden swing of victory" and also at a time when the public would have to make the choice between neglecting their business and adequately discussing public matters; so that he stood to gain the advantage of an insufficient criticism of his policy and administration. There was a great deal in this that could be destructively criticised, and the Liberals of West Peterborough must dismiss the idea that the big Whitney majority, or the majority of 480 in West Peterborough could not be wiped out. In 1904 Mr. Hall, their energetic candidate, had to face a majority of 350, and he wiped it out and won over a strong candidate by a majority of 180. He had the same energy still, and if the Liberals would take off their coats and throw themselves into the work, the victory could be won, and the riding redeemed, as it was seven years ago. This needed that every Liberal should do his share and that thorough organization would be effected so that the greatest possible strength of the Liberal support would be developed.

Mr. G. N. Gordon's Remarks.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, the Secretary of the West Peterborough Liberal Association, was called upon by the President, and he dealt vigorously and eloquently with the subject of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act. He went on to explain that for the death of the workman the family could only obtain under the Workmen's Compensation Act, $1,500.00, or three years' wages, which ever was the greater. This, he declared was wrong; that at least $2,-500.00 should be given in case of death, or 5 years' wages. Nothing had been done to substantially benefit the workman by this Government although the promise that a new Workman's Compensation Act would be passed without delay and although some years have passed the draft bill has not yet been submitted.

Mr. Gordon went on further to say that the doctrine of common employment in the Act, should be changed so that if death or injury were caused the workmen, by following instructions and directions of a more experienced employee and through that employee's negligence, then the employer should be held liable for the negligence.

Mr. Gordon then dealt with the question of technical education and contended that subjects taken up in the schools of electrical engineering, and the education generally of apprentices for their special lines of work should be given free by demonstrators and teachers from the Technical school in Toronto, or the different colleges, and night sessions held, say, four or five times a week, in industrial centres like Peterborough. He suggested that text books should be loaned to all pupils to these night schools upon a deposit being made to be returned upon the return of the text books. This would save hundreds and hundreds of dollars to Peterborough alone, which and to other correspondence schools in the United States.

There were plenty of opportunities for the Government to take up this course of instruction of those who largely populated industrial centres, but except in Toronto there was no opportunity for the ambitious young man desiring to improve himself to obtain the highest place as a master mechanic.

Then Mr. Gordon took up Mr. Hall's record as a member of the Dominion House. He spoke of the Armouries as being an everlasting monument to Mr. Hall's industry and energy. Mr. Hall had placed a chain of wharves from one end of this Riding to the other on the Trent Canal system. He had developed the Trent Canal system on every vantage point. He had improved the mail system throughout the Riding, by changing, in some places, delivery, from three times a week to daily, and inaugurated postal delivery for the City of Peterborough.

The drowned lands of the County did open a larger issue and Mr. Hall had taken this matter up so vigorously that the Government recognized the claims of these farmers, who had suffered by their lands being submerged, and as a result of Mr. Hall's efforts alone, many thousands of dollars to farmers, had been awarded and actually was paid by the Dominion Government to the Counties of Peterborough and Northumberland. Mr. George A. Gillespie, he said, had put up a most vigorous and creditable fight against the Government candidate, with the Whitney Government on the flood tide of popularity, and Mr. Gillespie's support of Mr. Hall in this campaign was one of the best omens of success that had been seen.

In conclusion, Mr. Gordon made an earnest appeal to all his fellow-Liberals to support Mr. Hall, and make this campaign such a whirlwind of success that would overcome all the opposition which had been offered and which would seat Mr. Hall as the next member from Peterborough in the local Legislature, with first-class chances of a portfolio in the new Liberal Government.

Mr. J. J. Duffus.

Mr. J. J. Duffus said that in choosing Mr. Hall the Liberal party had selected a man they could depend upon—a live man, whom people would know as their member. During his term as member of the Dominion Government he had done a great deal for the constituency, probably more than any one man had been able to do in any one session, and he would give West Peterborough a representation in the Legislature such as the Riding was worthy of. In the last Dominion election the Conservatives had carried on a campaign of flag-waving and raised the disloyalty cry, but in spite of that the Whitney Government, through its Hydro-Electric Commission, was going to sell power in Detroit. The speaker was confident that Mr. Hall could redeem West Peterborough, as he had redeemed it in the Dominion House.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane said that Mr. Hall was a live candidate, and a better selection could not have been made. In regard to the Whitney Government Mr. McFarlane said that he could not see any credit in their taking people's money to fight private capital, as had been done in connection with the Hydro-Electric Commission. He thought the manner in which they had fought the Cataract Company of Hamilton, because that concern was controlled by Liberals, was a disgrace. In conclusion, Mr. McFarlane said that in Mr. Hall they would have a candidate who would be "on the job" all the time, and they should give him their strongest support.

The meeting was brought to a close with enthusiastic cheers for the King and the candidate.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I see by the Times that Mr. Burnham has offered to resign his seat, to give it to Hon. Mr. White, Minister of Finance. That doesn't suit me. That's a little too much. Now, I and others have been enough disappointed in voting to send a supporter to Mr. Borden, by the way he has made up his cabinet, taking in two of the very kind of men we voted against. And I for one, won't stand for giving up a seat fairly won to give a seat to a renegade Grit in a Tory cabinet.

Yours truly,
Old Style Tory.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW

The hands can be cleansed better with warm water than with cold, but they should always be rinsed afterwards with cold water, as this keeps them in better condition.

Sweet oil applied with a soft flannel is excellent for cleaning bronze. Brush all the dust out first, then rub the object with the oil, using as little as possible. Polish first with a soft duster, then with a chamois leather.

As soon as the cooking has been cleared away pour a few drops of oil of lavender into a basin of boiling water. In a very short time the odour of the cooking will have disappeared, and the air of the apartment be pure and fresh.

A new specific has been introduced under the generic name of "pudlo," the object of which is to render cement waterproof. It is a white powder, which is added in the proportion of about 5 per cent. by weight to the constructional material.

For half-an-hour after each meal children should be encouraged to rest quietly, and, however great their inclination to dash off and continue their games, they must be taught to restrain themselves while their food is allowed to settle.

To save time in shelling peas wash the peas thoroughly and put to boil in the pods. When they are done the pods will burst, and can be skimmed off, while the peas go to the bottom. The flavour surpasses that of the peas shelled before cooking.

Do not pile music nor books on top of the piano. Do not adorn it with bric-a-brac. All objects piled on top detract from the tone of the instrument. Open the lid of the piano now and then to let in the air and let out the sound. One cannot produce good singing tones with the mouth closed. Sounds to be clear, full and beautiful need air to vibrate in.

For veal and ham pie make a pie-crust, not very rich, and put it round the sides of a deep pie-dish. In the bottom and above put layers of thin sliced ham, thin sliced raw potatoes, onions either chopped or sliced very fine, and veal cut from the shoulder into small pieces. Season with pepper and salt. Fill the dish with any good gravy left from roasts, or with water thickened with flour and butter. Cover with crust, and bake for about one and a half hours. Cover the pie with good, thick brown paper if it gets too brown.

Ringing Praise For "No. 10." Prescribed By Him 47 Years Ago.

Mr. Miles Maroney, Blissfield, N. B., says: "I had occasion to visit the Rev. Gentleman for treatment for lung trouble, which proved to be of such a serious nature that my friends looked upon my recovery as almost hopeless—but after taking his No. 10 Lung Tonic I am thankful to say I am in perfect health, and I recommend No. 10 to all the world."

Mrs. Malcolm Livingston, Rumford Falls, Me., says: "I cannot praise your No. 10 Lung Tonic too highly, because it cured me of throat trouble of long standing—it is now four years ago and I have not been troubled since."

Mr. Daniel McCarthy, Wood's Island, N. F., writes: "Thank God! my little girl is now well and able to go to school—your No. 10 saved her life, and I give you a thousand thanks that she is well again."

Mr. Jno. Aylward, Campbellton, N. B., writes: "While traveling on the Gaspé Coast I contracted a severe cold, which settled upon my lungs. I procured your No. 10 Lung Tonic just in the nick of time to save my life. After one month's use I felt like a new man, and I recommend it as the surest and best remedy I know of."

Mrs. George Desmarais, St. Jean, P. Q., says: "I can speak in the highest favor of your No. 10 Lung Tonic, as I suffered for a long time from lung trouble—and could get nothing to cure me until I tried your remedy. I used it regularly, and to my great surprise I got well, and now am completely cured. It is with sincere thanks and gratitude that I recommend this priceless remedy."

Mrs. Wm. Nar. Lavigne, Bathurst, N. B., writes: "I cannot find fitting words to say enough for your No. 10 Lung Tonic. It is indispensable to every home. It has done wonders for me when other remedies failed, and we are never without it in the home. The cures that have been made down here by this remedy are hard to believe—they are so wonderful. Everybody ought to use it."

Mr. Alex. H. McRae, Carnoustie, Sask., says: "I am glad you are pushing your medicines this way. Have used many kinds of cough medicine, but I never found anything to equal yours. Your No. 10 is all you claim for it. Believe your sales will be large out here, as these people appreciate a good thing."

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

Workmen's Compensation Act.

The Whitney Government has displayed the utmost indifference to the wants of our mechanics, and workingmen in the matter of the simplifying and extending the provisions of the Workmen's Compensation Act. Mr. Bancroft, speaking on behalf of the District Labour Council of the City of Toronto, said: "Premier Whitney for "months did nothing but insult the "District Council. What we want to "do is to turn him out for his past "negligence and insolence to this "Council."

Mr. Hall said, the time is ripe for a remodeling of the Workmen's Compensation Act, so as to make it unnecessary for workmen or their widows and children to fight for compensation in the Court. The money spent in litigation by employers, employees, and in premiums paid to accident insurance companies would provide a fund large enough, if supplemented by a reasonable grant from the Government, to provide for a Provincial accident insurance system that would put an end to all litigation and would amply compensate the workingman or his family for the injury he or they may have sustained. The cause of many accidents is due to over-work, and, therefore, the hours of labour should be shortened in certain industries, if the employers are to get the full protection of this insurance fund as against accidents to their employees. The State has an interest in keeping the mechanic and the workingman as free from injury as possible. Since the Railway companies in England have adopted the eight-hour system the accidents upon English railways have been reduced to a minimum.

Educational System.

Mr. Hall said he thought that the weakest branch of the Whitney administration has been in the educational department. Since the abolition of the Model Schools we find that large numbers of school sections throughout the Province, and especially in the rural districts are supplied with unqualified teachers and, in some cases, with no teacher at all. Take, for instance, in North Frontenac and Addington 70 per cent. of the teachers are unqualified. We find in Haliburton, Parry Sound and East Muskoka, 63 per cent. are unqualified. In North Hastings, 66 per cent; in Manitoulin Islands 60 per cent; in East Muskoka, 53; in North Nipissing, 62 per cent.; in South Parry Sound, 65 per cent. and even to come closer to our own door, across the river, in East Peterborough there are 42 per cent. unqualified teachers teaching in our public schools. "Much excitement is being raised over bi-lingual schools," said Mr. Hall, "but let me tell you that the lack of education is not confined to French pupils in our schools, but it extends to the English pupils as well." Mr. Hall said that the results produced by unqualified teachers has been very unsatisfactory.

During the time that the Hon. G. W. Ross was Minister of Education, there was no issue raised regarding bi-lingual schools because in every part of the Province, whether it was peopled by English, French, German, or Highland Scotch, a qualified teacher properly trained in the Model School, or in the Normal school was placed in every school, and hence our French Canadian fellow subjects were not handicapped as they are at present under the administration of the Whitney Government, in acquiring a knowledge of English. In order that any person, no matter what his nationality may be, should be properly qualified for life in the Province of Ontario, he should receive a thorough elementary education, and should have a thorough knowledge of the English tongue; but such, under Mr. Whitney, is not the case, although he had it in his power, by a single stroke of the pen, to pass regulations which would provide for every pupil attending our Public and Separate schools having a thorough knowledge of the English language.

School Readers.

The cheapness of the school readers, said Mr. Hall, has been made much of by the Whitney Government and unfair comparison has been made made between present cost and the cost of former readers. The Government now pays the entire cost to the authors of school readers and of the cuts, typesetting, electrotyping, and proof revision. The present publishers, T. Eaton & Co., are allowed all these advantages and can boast and advertise at the expense of every merchant in the Province that they have reduced the cost of readers over one-half to every family. Every pupil in the Province opens and closes his lesson with the little advertisement "T. Eaton & Co." ever before him, while the father and mother bless the name of "T. Eaton & Co." for reducing the cost of readers and return their thanks to the Whitney Government by sending in another mail order to T. Eaton & Co. to the injury of every local merchant. I note that the Robert Simpson Co. of Toronto has put up a "big kick" against this and now they publish the Arithmetic books used in our schools, with their advertisement in bold type on its title page. In their case the Province has paid for the cost of its composition, its cuts, its electrotyping and its proof revision. "What," said Mr. Hall, "do the city and country merchants think about their paying a share for advertising these competitive catalogue houses?"

Liquor Licenses.

The Whitney Government promised to take the administration of the Liquor License Law out of politics. They did it nobly. They dismissed every Liberal License Commissioner and Inspector in the Province and substituted in their places partizan appointees, who could be trusted to line up the liquor vote for Whitney candidates. To satisfy the Temperance vote they imposed a tax of five per cent. on the receipts of the bar, and thereby made every temperance man, woman and child silent partners in the whiskey business, the profits from which are wholly dependent on whether or not a good or a bad day's business has been done over the bar.

Provincial Treasurer.

The Tory press say that it was known that the Farmers' Bank was rotten from the start. The Provincial Treasurer, shortly before its failure, deposited in the Farmers' Bank $25,000.00 of the funds of the Province, and it was immediately drawn out of the Bank by Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, who is now a fugitive from justice. "What knowledge," asked Mr. Hall, "had the Provincial Treasurer of this transaction?" A Legislative investigation would have shown up the facts. Sir James thinks it is better to pretend that he is saving $15,000 than let the people know how the Province was swindled out of $25,000.00.

Attorney-General.

"Why," asked Mr. Hall, "was Dr. Beattie Nesbitt allowed to escape from justice after it was well known that he had looted the Farmers' Bank?" A reward of $200.00 has been offered for his capture. He had been a member of the Legislature. He knew the source from which Tory campaign funds had come. He knew where such funds had been corruptly spent. It appears to be a case somewhat similar to the escape of Louis Riel, after the murder of Scott. Riel got $1,000.00 to leave the country, and the late Sir John exclaimed: "I wish to God I could catch him!" Sir James would give $200.00 to catch the Doctor, but not $1,000.00, lest he might. Better have the elections before a full exposure comes to light next session. These are ugly facts. Would that Sir James and his colleagues could each truthfully exclaim regarding the Beattie episode, "Whatever leaps to light I never shall be shamed."

Mr Hall said that on another occasion he would discuss at length the other issues which would arise in this contest, namely: the increasing of succession duties upon large estates, the preservation and reforestation of forests, the development of New Ontario; the colonization of the clay belt in Northern Ontario; the increasing of railway and waggon-road facilities in the northern country, and other matters.

In conclusion, Mr. Hall said that he trusted that the Liberals of West Peterborough would work unitedly between now and the date of the election and return him as their representative.

Mr. Stratton said that first of all, he desired to return his warmest thanks to those who had supported him with their votes and influence during the past campaign. For a long period of years, the electors of West Peterborough had stood by him in all his contests, and he appreciated their good will to the fullest extent. However, the methods of his opponents had, for the moment, prevailed, but their success was only temporary, and he felt sure that the Liberal party would soon come to its own again, as there was an opportunity of doing in the present contest. He was glad to see the unanimity that marked the nomination proceedings, in the selection of Mr. Hall; and he was equally pleased with the hearty manner in which he had accepted the responsibility. The opponents of the late administration in Ontario were lied out of power, as the late Laurier administration had been lied out of power.

According to the promises of the Whitney administration, they were to reduce the expenditures of the province when they came into power. We see what they have done—more than doubled them—increased the provincial expenditure from 4 1-4 millions in 1905 to nearly ten millions in 1911, nearly a million dollars a year. They were going to improve our educational system. This had been done by crippling our educational system, so that we had so great a scarcity of teachers, that about a third of the schools in Peterborough county were without qualified teachers, and many of them without teachers of any kind. The License administration was to be taken out of the region of politics altogether. We saw how that had been done by the beautiful neutrality of all the license officials, from the inspector up during the recent election contest. There was not a hotel keeper in Peterborough who dares call his soul his own, and on the other hand, some hotel keepers are held in such dread or favour, that not a license official dares, or does, enforce the law. The expenditure that was formerly borne by the province in the maintenance of unfortunates in our public institutions, has been, by the present government, thrown upon the municipalities and the extra taxation of railways to meet this levy on the municipality, is only partially enjoyed by the municipalities themselves. Our water power, and power interests are being interfered with, by the favours and undue advantages given the western part of the province, to the evident detriment of Peterborough especially. The colonization road money in Harvey, Cavendish and Galway, was being frittered away among a few partizan favourites. Our fishery and game laws were the objects of farcical administration. With Ontario the greatest agricultural province in the Dominion, it has actually lost in population during the past ten years, through the inaction of the Whitney government. When the Ross government was in power, it "discovered," as Mr Whitney said, "the land of the stunted poplar"; that is, that government opened up a splendid area of new country in Northern Ontario, by exploration, and revealed its tremendous mineral and agricultural resources. That government, in the face of the opposition of Mr. Whitney and his friends, started the Provincial railway as a colonization railway, so as to settle the great agricultural belt in the north. How had the present government used this railway? Instead of using it to place settlers on splendid farming lands, on fair and attractive conditions, the miner and speculator, and in some cases the mining shark, are having all the advantages.

The population of the northern sections of Peterborough had grown less in the past five years and no adequate provision had been made for bringing in new population and developing the splendid agricultural resources of the province. The government, however, would like to gain a little popularity from the work of the Agricultural College, which they condemned for so many years. The farmers and wage earners could not afford to send their clever and ambitious sons and daughters to the Normal schools, as they could do to the Model schools, by whose abolition, they had been blocked in their ambition to rise, and the result was that the teaching profession was starved, and the Public schools suffer. Great promises were made as to what the Whitney government would do for the working classes, but no attempt has been made to regulate the hours of labour in the workman's interests, or to make practical the law that would provide compensation for injuries received in the course of his work through the negligence of employers of labour. No attempt had been made throughout the province to make the hospitals through the province more advantageous and beneficial to the working classes. The administration of the Succession Duties Act was not being well looked after. Large estates were undervalued and small estates had to contribute the full pound of flesh. These and other matters would be subjects for thought and decision by the electors. The great virtues and great enterprise of the Whitney government had, like a great many acts of administration, been rammed down the people's throats, but when one began to discuss the merits of their administration, the big claims made grew weak, and many weak spots were made apparent. The bluff of Sir James Whitney, that he is bringing on the elections to save a paltry fifteen thousand dollars for the bye-elections, is too thin. When the matter was analyzed, it would be seen that by bringing on the election at the end of three years, instead of four, that there was a loss of over $25,000 by bringing on the enormous expenditure of a general election a year before its time, not to count the much greater loss to the business interests of the country by bringing on the elections at a time of the year when business reaped its greatest harvest. Sir James Whitney boosted of his courage, but he was not above bringing on the elections so as to get the advantage of the "Borden swing of victory" and also at a time when the public would have to make the choice between neglecting their business and adequately discussing public matters, so that he stood to gain the advantage of an insufficient criticism of his policy and administration. There was a great deal in this that could be destructively criticised, and the Liberals of West Peterborough must dismiss the idea that the big Whitney majority, or the majority of 480 in West Peterborough could not be wiped out. In 1904 Mr. Hall, their energetic candidate, had to face a majority of 350, and he wiped it out and won over a strong candidate by a majority of 180. He had the same energy still, and if the Liberals would take off their coats and throw themselves into the work, the victory could be won, and the riding redeemed, as it was seven years ago. This needed that every Liberal should do his share and that thorough organization would be effected so that the greatest possible strength of the Liberal support would be developed.

Mr. G. N. Gordon's Remarks.

Mr. G. N. Gordon, the secretary of the West Peterborough Liberal Association, was called upon by the President, and he dealt vigorously and eloquently with the subject of the Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act. He went on to explain that for the death of the workman the family could only obtain under the Workmen's Compensation Act, $1,500.00, or three years' wages, which ever was the greater. This, he declared was wrong; that at least $2,500.00 should be given in case of death, or 5 years' wages. Nothing had been done to substantially benefit the workman by this Government although the promise that a new Workmen's Compensation Act would be passed without delay and although some years have passed the draft bill has not yet been submitted.

Mr. Gordon went on further to say that the doctrine of common employment in the Act, should be changed so that if death or injury were caused the workmen, by following instructions and directions of a more experienced employee and through that employee's negligence, then the employer should be held liable for the negligence.

Mr. Gordon then dealt with the question of technical education and contended that subjects taken up in the schools of electrical engineering, and the education generally of apprentices for their special lines of work should be given free by demonstrators and teachers from the Technical school in Toronto, or the different colleges, and night sessions held, say, four or five times a week, in industrial centres like Peterborough. He suggested that text books should be loaned to all pupils to these night schools upon a deposit being made to be returned upon the return of the text books. This would save hundreds and hundreds of dollars to Peterborough alone, which and to other correspondence schools in the United States.

There were plenty of opportunities for the Government to take up this course of instruction of those who largely populated industrial centres, but except in Toronto there was no opportunity for the ambitious young man desiring to improve himself to obtain the highest place as a master mechanic.

Then Mr. Gordon took up Mr. Hall's record as a member of the Dominion House. He spoke of the Armouries as being an everlasting monument to Mr. Hall's industry and energy. Mr Hall had placed a chain of wharves from one end of this Riding to the other on the Trent Canal system. He had developed the Trent Canal system on every vantage point. He had improved the mail system throughout the Riding, by changing, in some places, delivery, from three times a week to daily, and inaugurated postal delivery for the City of Peterborough.

The drowned lands of the County did open a larger issue and Mr. Hall had taken this matter up so vigorously that the Government recognized the claims of these farmers, who had suffered by their lands being submerged, and as a result of Mr. Hall's efforts alone many thousands of dollars in damages had been awarded and paid by the Dominion Government in the Counties of Peterborough and Northumberland. Mr. George A. Gillespie, he said, had put up a most vigorous and creditable fight against the Government candidate, with the Whitney Government on the flood tide of popularity, and Mr. Gillespie's support of Mr. Hall in this campaign was one of the best omens of success that had been seen.

In conclusion, Mr. Gordon made an earnest appeal to all his fellow-Liberals to support Mr. Hall, and make this campaign such a whirlwind of success that would overcome all the opposition which had been offered and which would seat Mr. Hall as the next member from Peterborough in the local Legislature, with first-class chances of a portfolio in the new Liberal Government.

Mr. J. J. Duffus.

Mr. J. J. Duffus said that in choosing Mr. Hall the Liberal party had selected a man they could depend upon—a live man, whom people would know as their member. During his term as member of the Dominion Government he had done a great deal for the constituency, probably more than any one man had ben able to do in any one session, and he would give West Peterborough a representation in the Legislature such as the Riding was worthy of. In the last election the Conservatives carried on a campaign of flag-waving and raised the disloyalty cry, but in spite of that the Whitney Government, through its Hydro-Electric Commission, was going to sell power in Detroit. The speaker was confident that Mr. Hall could redeem West Peterborough, as he had redeemed it in the Dominion House.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane.

Mr. Andrew McFarlane said that Mr. Hall was a live candidate, and a better selection could not have been made. In regard to the Whitney Government Mr. McFarlane said that he could not see any credit in their taking people's money to fight private capital, as had been done in connection with the Hydro-Electric Commission. He thought the manner in which they had fought the Cataract Company of Hamilton, because that concern was controlled by Liberals, was a disgrace. In conclusion, Mr. McFarlane said that in Mr. Hall they would have a candidate who would be "on the job" all the time, and they should give him their strongest support.

The meeting was brought to a close with enthusiastic cheers for the King and the candidate.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I see by the Times that Mr. Burnham has offered to resign his seat, to give it to Hon. Mr. White, Minister of Finance. That doesn't suit me. That's a little too much. Now, I and others have been enough disappointed in voting to send a supporter to Mr. Borden, by the way he has made up his cabinet, taking in three of the very kind of men we voted against. And I for one, won't stand for giving up a seat fairly won to give a seat to a renegade Grit in a Tory cabinet.

Yours truly,
Old Style Tory.

GOOD THINGS TO KNOW

The hands can be cleansed better with warm water than with cold, but they should always be rinsed afterwards with cold water, as this keeps them in better condition.

Sweet oil applied with a soft flannel is excellent for cleaning bronze. Brush all the dust out first, then rub the object with the oil, using as little as possible. Polish first with a soft duster, then with a chamois leather.

As soon as the cooking has been cleared away pour a few drops of oil of lavender into a basin of boiling water. In a very short time the odour of the cooking will have disappeared, and the air of the apartment be pure and fresh.

A new specific has been introduced under the generic name of "pudlo," the object of which is to render cement waterproof. It is a white powder, which is added in the proportion of about 5 per cent. by weight to the constructional material.

For half-an-hour after each meal children should be encouraged to rest quietly, and, however great their inclination to dash off and continue their games, they must be taught to restrain themselves while their food is allowed to settle.

To save time in shelling peas wash the peas thoroughly and put to boil in the pods. When they are done the pods will burst, and can be skimmed off, while the peas go to the bottom. The flavour surpasses that of the peas shelled before cooking.

Do not pile music nor books on top of the piano. Do not adorn it with bric-a-brac. All objects piled on top detract from the tone of the instrument. Open the lid of the piano now and then to let in the air and let out the sound. One cannot produce good singing tones with the mouth closed. Sounds to be clear, full and beautiful need air to vibrate in.

For veal and ham pie make a pie-crust, not very rich, and put it round the sides of a deep pie-dish. In the bottom and above put layers of thin sliced ham, thin sliced raw potatoes, onions either chopped or sliced very fine, and veal cut from the shoulder into small pieces. Season with pepper and salt. Fill the dish with any good gravy left from roasts, or with water thickened with flour and butter. Cover with crust, and bake for about one and a half hours. Cover the pie with good, thick brown paper if it gets too brown.

Ringing Praise For "No. 10." Prescribed By Him 47 Years Ago.

Mr. Miles Maroney, Blissfield, N. B., says: "I had occasion to visit the Rev. Gentleman for treatment for lung trouble, which proved to be of such a serious nature that my friends looked upon my recovery as almost hopeless but after taking his No. 10 Lung Tonic I am thankful to say I am in perfect health, and I recommend No. 10 to all the world."

Mrs. Malcolm Livingston, Rumford Falls, Me., says: "I cannot praise your No. 10 Lung Tonic too highly, because it cured me of throat trouble of long standing—it is now four years ago and I have not been troubled since."

Mr. Daniel McCarthy, Wood's Island, N. F., writes: "Thank God! my little girl is now well and able to go to school—your No. 10 saved her life, and I give you a thousand thanks that she is well again."

Mr. Jno. Aylward, Campbellton, N. B., writes: "While traveling on the Gaspé Coast I contracted a severe cold, which settled upon my lungs. I procured your No. 10 Lung Tonic just in the nick of time to save my life. After one month's use I felt like a new man, and I recommend it as the surest and best remedy I know of."

Mrs. George Desmarais, St. Jean, P. Q., says: "I can speak in the highest favor of your No. 10 Lung Tonic, as I suffered for a long time from lung trouble—and could get nothing to cure me until I tried your remedy. I used it regularly, and to my great surprise I got well, and now am completely cured. It is with sincere thanks and gratitude that I recommend this price less remedy."

Mrs. Wm. Nar. Lavigne, Bathurst, N. B., writes: "I cannot find fitting words to say enough for your No. 10 Lung Tonic. It is indispensable to every home. It has done wonders for me when other remedies failed, and we are never without it in the home. The cures that have been made down here by this remedy are hard to believe—they are so wonderful. Everybody ought to use it."

Mr. Alex. H. McRae, Carnoustie, Sask., says: "I am glad you are pushing your medicines this way. Have used many kinds of cough medicine, but I never found anything to equal yours. Your No. 10 is all you claim for it. Believe your sales will be large out here, as these people appreciate a good thing."

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

ANOTHER ENTHUSIAST TALKS OF THE WESTERN COUNTRY

Mr. R. B. Hill, representing the Grand Pacific Land Co., of Winnipeg, Man., formerly of the McLean Publishing Co., is in the city to-day, a guest at the Oriental.

Mr. Hill's business in the city, is to secure a representative for the company here, their former representative having gone to Toronto.

Mr. Hill, in conversation with an Examiner reporter this afternoon, gave some facts about the west, that may prove interesting to local people.

Being situated at Bow Island, a thriving little gas city, about half way between the rushing business centres of Medicine Hat and Lethbridge, Mr. Hill could give more definite information about that district. To show just how rapidly western cities grow, Mr. Hill said that two years ago, Bow Island did not exist, there being nothing but farming country, and to-day the place has 400 of a population. He explained that this might not be considered a very fast growth for the west, but being situated so near to two other large business centres, it was pretty fast growing. Mr. Hill gave a very interesting account of the gas wells situated at the Island, and how the gas is harvested. He said that the volume of gas emitted from the big well, which is 2,200 feet deep, is 28,000,000 feet every 24 hours. It has a pressure of 300 lbs. to the square inch. This is the greatest flow of gas known in the world. Mr. Hill said that when standing a considerable distance from the well, one would imagine there was a great eruption going on in the bowels of the earth, the rumbling and thunder is so great.

In explaining how the gas was manufactured, Mr. Hill said that on the top of the main pipe, there was an immense weight and this is constructed in such a manner that it will rise and fall according to the pressure. To attempt to screw a top down tight on the pipe, he said, would only mean the blowing up of the whole concern.

Mr. Hill said that this part of the country was a very prosperous farming district and thousands of acres were under cultivation by farmers from Ontario. The Bow River valley is regarded as the best farming district of the west.

Mr. Hill will visit Montreal and Ottawa before returning. His time in this city is limited.

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

"SHE was far too good and honourable a woman to care a particle about truthfulness as a means to an easy conscience; she did not mind how much she suffered if it was necessary to the happiness of others that it should be so."—De Morgan.

"I know nothing on earth would please her so much as to have me sign this letter 'With love,' and I really wanted to, but it wouldn't have been true, so I didn't."

The speaker folded her letter with an air of conscious rectitude. She is a young school marm. She was writing to one of her little pupils who is devoted to her. The little girl was seriously ill with a disease that threatened to blind her for life.

I wonder if the Recording Angel put down a very big and shining white mark for that display of rectitude.

Do you think he did?

The little married lady who has been wearing her trousseau for three years acquired a new gown the other day. She has been saving for and planning and thinking about this gown for months. And when it came, it was a MESS—no other word could possibly describe it. For some unknown reason the dressmaker had selected that particular gown of which to make the worst botch of the season. Furthermore, the features which made the gown impossible were things which could not be altered.

Can you imagine anyone who would care so much about exact truthfulness "as a means to an easy conscience" as to tell the little married lady who has been wearing her trousseau for three years that her first new gown was totally impossible?

And yet I know several people who did.

Yes, I can see some of my readers sitting up in shocked surprise and saying, "What's this? Is Ruth Cameron advising me to tell lies to please people?"

I shouldn't put it just that way.

But I certainly do think that there are some lies that are more forgivable than some truth telling.

I once knew a horse trader who, contrary to precedent, was known and honoured in the community as a thoroughly honest man. He was telling me once how he sold his horses. "I never tell any lies, Miss Cameron," he said. "I just put the horse's best foot forward. I say he has a fine coat and good knee action and a finely shaped head, but I don't mention any of his poor points except, of course, real defects that any honest man would speak of. I never tell any lies and I always sell my horses and I never yet had one turned back on me."

Take that man's ideal of truth and apply it to social relations and I think you have a better happiness-producer than uncompromising, unnecessary truth speaking.

There are many kinds of honesty. There is the honesty that sees defects with pitiless eye and mentions them with a consciousness of virtue.

There is also an honesty that sees even the jewel in the toad's head and knows when to be silent and when to speak.

Of course, this doctrine is one that can easily be distorted to wrong and selfish uses. But the inside heart of us that knows when we are doing wrong, no matter how cleverly we try to deceive it with some intellectual justification, tells us when we do that.

So you won't misuse my doctrine that way, will you?

A Splendid Sermon

At the morning service in the Mark Street Methodist Church, a magnificent sermon was delivered to the congregation by Mr. Line, a young speaker, whose oratorical powers show great promise. Mr. Line is a student in the Victoria College, and is at present working on a mission at Bethel. He took for his subject, "Blessed are the pure in heart, for they shall see God." The speaker proceeded to enlarge upon the subject and his words were listened to with marked appreciation.

BROKE HIS ARM

Leo. McCabe, son of Mr. John McCabe, Gilmour street, was the victim of a very painful accident on Saturday. While standing on a chair on the verandah, engaged in removing some dead vines, he lost his balance and fell to the ground, with his arm doubled beneath him, with the result that he sustained a severe fracture of the arm, just above the wrist. Medical aid was summoned and he is resting easily to-day.

Funeral Of Joseph Glass

The funeral of the late Joseph Glass which was held on Saturday afternoon from the family residence, Parnell street, to Little Lake cemetery was largely attended, a long cortege following the remains to their last resting place. There was a large turnout of members of the Moulders' Union, No. 191, of which the deceased was a member. The pall bearers, all members of the Moulders' Union, were Messrs. David Spence, Jos. Crowe, Edward O'Brien, John Law, John Robertson, Sr., and Jeremiah Wright. Rev. J. G. Brown of the St. James' Methodist Church, conducted the service.

A BUSH FIRE

A railroad man, in conversation with the Examiner this morning, reported the existence of a large bush fire at a place called Faulkner's, on the Belleville line. The fire, which was located a few yards off the G. T. R. right of way, has destroyed a considerable amount of good, standing timber, and is at present confining its depredations to an adjacent swamp, where it will probably remain until the first fall of snow or rain smothers it.

BLACKLISTER

Two local men were arraigned in the Police Court this morning, on charges of drunkenness. One paid a fine of $2.00 and the other, a blacklister, paid the usual $10.00.

Magistrate Dumble, having returned from a week's holidays, presided.

GOLF

A competition of mixed foursomes, captained by Mrs. Coulthard, the ladies' captain, against foursomes, captained by Mr. Wainwright, the men's captain, was played off on Saturday afternoon, and was won by Mrs. Coulthard's side. The players and visitors were afterwards entertained at tea by Mr. Wainwright.

Among those competing were Mesdames Matthews, Gardiner, Coulthard, Sanderson, Campbell, Hall, Hill, Frederick, Perkes and Trebilcock; Messrs. Wainwright, Henderson, Mowat, Neil, Blanchet, Matthews and Ross.

SERIOUS CHARGE

Chief Newton of the Belleville Police Department, arrived in the city this morning, and returned on the 1.40 train with the two local men who are charged with defrauding the Canadian Express Co., in charge.

T. A. S. NOTES

A regular meeting of St. Peter's T. A. S. was held yesterday afternoon, with the vice-president, Mr. Albert New, in the chair. Several new members were initiated into the society. It was decided to hold a social evening on Thursday night of this week, when a good programme will be given. A debating club will be organized on Wednesday night of this week.

MUSIC AND DRAMA

THE PRIVATE SECRETARY.

Like wine, "The Private Secretary" seems to improve with age, and the hearty laughter that swept through the audiences at Saturday's matinee and evening presentations at the Grand, proved beyond doubt, that Chas. Hawtrey's famous comedy has lost none of its powers to amuse. It was given under most favourable auspices by a clever company of English artists, and as a result Peterborough has never seen a more enjoyable production of the comedy. Mr. C. Bancroft in the title role added to the laurels he won here last season by his clever portrayal of the Rev. Robert Spaulding. His characterization of the part differs from some other well known portrayers of the role, in that he makes the curate less inane and more human, but none of the fun is lost in this interpretation, and Saturday's audiences laughed until the tears came perilously close to rolling down their cheeks.

He is supported by a cast of sterling merit and there is not a weak spot apparent in the presentation. Mr. Joseph Clancy gave a capital interpretation of the part of Mr. Cattermole, the crabbed uncle from India and Mr. Shirley Braithwaite won favour by his funny presentation of Mr. Sidney Gibson, the ambitious tailor of Bond street. The feminine roles were all in good hands and the whole production was above the average. No more wholesome or clever fun has been provided a Peterborough audience in a long time.

Peterborough play-goers will be interested in learning of the fate of "The French Maid" Company, which appeared at the Grand some weeks ago. The Toronto Star weekly, says: Twenty-six stranded actors and actresses landed high and dry in Toronto this morning from a tour of New Ontario. All but nine of the company subsequently raised sufficient wind to ease themselves off the rocks and embark for Philadelphia. Of the remaining nine, three are men, four are women, two are girls of fifteen or less. One of these young ladies is accompanied by her mother. The other is alone and penniless.

The French Maid Company was organized in Philadelphia last August by Weinberger and Kaelkaer. It was managed by Walter M. Leslie of Toronto, well known here in his connection with the Majestic Theatre. The show opened in Vineland, New Jersey, and played through to Nova Scotia, New Brunswick, Quebec and Northern Ontario, to all appearances, meeting with fair success. The French Maid is described as a nice little musical comedy.

At Barrie a quarrel is said to have occurred in the management. Messrs. Weinberger and Kaelkaer arrived and a great argument took place between them, and Mr. Leslie. Subsequently the company played to a house of $783 at Sudbury on Thursday night, Mr. Reese, the treasurer, made an announcement yesterday morning.

"I am sorry, ladies and gentlemen, we can't go on. We will have to each shift for ourselves.

He then distributed the money said to be available, amounting to $11 each.

By clubbing together the stranded actors got a theatrical rate of $5.20 from the railway company, which brought them all to Toronto.

Stene Robertston and his wife, who played "leading straights" in the company, were scurrying about town today trying to get the female members of the party placed with shows at the local theatres. He met with no success. He says he will attach the properties, as Messrs. Weinberger and Kaelkaer have a rating in Bradstreets.

URIC ACID SUFFERING

Uric acid is an accumulation of poison which finds lodgment in the eyes a when the kidneys fail to remove it from the blood. In the kidneys and bladder it forms stones, in the joints and muscles it causes rheumatism. In any case the pain and suffering is almost beyond human endurance. Uric acid is promptly removed from the system when the kidneys are kept healthy and active by using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

THE ART OF SPEECH MAKING.

A London Club is Training Men to Relieve a Long Suffering Public.

A unique club, known as the Public Speaking Club of Great Britain, has been experimenting with some extraordinary methods of training nervous and bashful men in the art of speech making. A characteristic feature of the instructions is the quaint conceit of speeches in the dark. As soon as the bashful man mounts the platform all the lights are turned off, and under the cover of the friendly darkness the speaker gradually loses his self-consciousness. As he regains his composure the lights are gradually turned up, but when he begins to stutter and stumble down they go again until he begins to talk common sense. After two or three months steady practice, however, members are generally able to talk with the lights up, and they are ready for the bristling arena of British politics or for the more patient arbiters of the bar.

But the new club isn't confined in membership to politicians and lawyers. Clergymen, teachers, businessmen, university professors and professional lecturers are all numbered in its membership, with a liberal sprinkling of men about town. These latter are many of them retired army and navy officers, others are recruited from the gilded ranks of clubland, where the after-dinner bore reigns supreme.

For the relief of a long-suffering public some very curious methods are used to discourage this variety of public eloquence. A man rises to make a speech with something definite to say and a limited time in which to say it. The audience of fellow members listens patiently till presently he begins to ramble. Gradually hands steal up in protest, and when a sufficient number are displayed a stern warden rings a huge gong over the speaker's head. Clang! The victim is obliged to begin all over again and generally travels a straighter and narrower path to the end of his subject.

Shiloh's Cure quickly stops coughs, cures colds, heals the throat and lungs. 25 cents.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

The opening games in the Junior Collegiate Class Basketball League were played on Saturday morning, and two very fast games was the result. The first game brought the Giants and the White Sox together, and after a very exciting game the Sox five carried off the game, thanks to the excellent shooting of their centre, O. Cavanagh, by a score of 15 to 6. The second game brought the Athletics and Hungry Five together and after a very fine exhibition of team play on the part of the Hungry Five they pulled out a victory by a score of 14 to 8. The games on Tuesday will bring the Athletics and Giants and Hungry Five and White Sox together.

Some of the members of the Physical Department journeyed out to Warsaw on Saturday night to conduct the physical work for the Young Men's Club of that place. There was a fine turnout of the members present, and they have decided to organize a junior club for the younger boys of the village. They have asked that the Association send out a man or two every Saturday night to assist in carrying on their work, and the Association have offered their assistance.

The Intermediate Leaders' Corps meets to-night at 6.45 for floor work.

Senior Class to-night at 8 p.m.

Tuesday—Junior Collegiate Class, 4.15; Business Men's Class, 5.45; Business Boys' Class, 7; Intermediate Class, 8.10.

THE UNION BANK

The temporary wooden structure in front of the new Union Bank building was removed this morning, disclosing in all its architectural beauty the stone facade of the new bank. While possessing simplicity in tone, the general style of the building from an outside point of view is a pleasing one, this effect being heightened by the gilt lettering of the bank's name which has been placed.

AMPUTATION NECESSARY

The many friends of Mr. John Smith, of Fraserville, will regret very much to learn that amputation of his left hand has been deemed necessary. For some time Mr. Smith has been suffering greatly from cancer, for which he took treatment in Markham, but the pain became unendurable, and he was forced to return home and amputation is the last resource. This will be performed in Peterborough, about the latter part of the week, by Dr. Turner of Millbrook and probably an assistant.

LAID TO REST

The funeral procession of Master Walter Johnson, which left the residence of his parents, 166 Hunter St. East was headed by a number of the school mates of the deceased lad. Interment took place at the Little Lake cemetery about three o'clock, at which the Rev. Robert Pogue officiated. Six of the lads acted as pallbearers.

The relatives have the sympathy of a large circle of friends, many of whom were present at the funeral.

FISHING PARTIES BACK AFTER ENJOYABLE OUTING

The Ketchecum Lake and the Jack's Lake fishing parties have returned to the city after a most enjoyable two weeks' outing at their respective fishing and hunting camps. The Jack's Lake party, which consisted of Messrs. W. S. Davidson, W. J. Thompson, W. H. Denham, Alex. Elliott, and E. C. McLeod, arrived home yesterday and the members report a thoroughly successful vacation. The weather conditions could not have been improved upon and the fishing was good all through. The balance of the Ketchecum Lake party compriaing Messrs. H. C. Winch, R. J. Munro, Robert Stuart, J. E. Belcher, R. Dobie, H. Nesbitt and T. H. Hooper came back to the city, on Saturday night, with the report that the outing was one of the most successful in the history of the club.

WEST ENDS DEFEATED IN A CLOSE GAME IN TORONTO

The West End Rugby Clug succeeded in giving the Toronto Central Y.M.C.A. team a much closer argument in Toronto on Saturday than they did here a week ago and the Centrals were lucky to win by 16 points to 10. They showed a complete reversal of form and had the Peterborough team had any system on the back division they would have won handily. As it was they had a much of the play as the homesters. The West Ends had to pick up a back division, as none of the rear guard who played last Saturday were available. Minorgan, Copping, Corkery, Johnston and Craig were all absentees, and some recruiting had to be done among the Peterborough boys who are going to school in Toronto. Gus Richardson and Rankin were dug up and the back division had to go into the game without any system or with little practice. It was lucky for the Centrals as the Toronto Y.M.C.A. boys fell all over themselves during the game and failed to show any of the snappy catching and running they did here. Early in the game they outscored the Petes, mainly because Richardson's kicking was not up to the mark on account of no practice, but in the last quarter Kirn did the booting and his long punts turned the tide in Peterborough's favour and they landed ten points in a few minutes. Centrals scored an unconverted try on a fumble in the first quarter, and held West Ends scoreless. Neither team scored in the second quarter but Centrals came strong in the third, and annexed a rouge and two unconverted tries. Peterborough rallied in the last quarter when Kirn booted over for a rouge. A few moments later Gilbert fell on a loose ball for a try which was not converted. Three kicks to the dead-line brought the Petes score to 10 before the final whistle blew.

Peterborough's line played a splendid game with Gilbert starring. He was always in the game, and his good tackling was always helpful. Langley played a useful game at the other end of the line, and Roger and Turner made some great gains by line plunging. Kirn's kicking and all-round good work was a feature of the back division.

The line-up was as follows:

Kirn, back. Rankin, Richardson, Rice, halves; Denison, quarter.
Scrimmage, Hill, Webb, Ecclestone.
Inside wings, Thompson, Turner.
Middle Wings, Hogan, Davidson.
Outside wings, Langley, Gilbert.

The game was played at Scarboro Beach.

Centrals won the round by 38 to 10, putting Peterborough out of the running.

All Senior Runners Must Have C. A. A. U. Cards

Both of last year's winners are entered again this year in the Examiner Thanksgiving Day road races. Albert Smoke, the Chemong Indian, who galloped home a half mile in front of his field last year, will face the starter again a week from to-day, and Frank Leahy, the junior winner last year, sent in his entry on Saturday. The Douro youngster is running under the colours of St. Peter's T.A.S. The Smoke family will be well represented in the senior race, as Saturday's entries also brought to light Billy Smoke, of Alderville, who is a cousin of the fleet-footed Albert, and who has some good performances to his credit. With the two Indians, Willis, the English runner, Harold Smith of the Y.M.C.A., J. E. Lean, of Cambourne, and other good men in the running, the senior race should prove about the hardest fought in the history of the event.

Senior contestants are reminded that the race is sanctioned by the Canadian Amateur Athletic Union and that every senior runner must be registered with the C.A.A.U. to be eligible. Application blanks may be obtained at the Examiner office and senior entrants should call at once and see that they are registered with the C.A.A.U. This is highly important, as only holders of C.A.A.U. tickets will be allowed to start.

EASTERN LEAGUE PRESIDENT HOLIDAYING AT WEDLOCK'S

Mr. Edward O. Barrow, President of the Eastern Baseball League, of New York, formerly of Toronto, was in the city to-day, a guest at the National. He is accompanied by his wife and two children. He, with his family, left this afternoon for Mr. Wedlock's, on the Otonabee, where they will spend a few days holidays. Mr. Barrow witnessed the three games in the world's series that have been played, but as the games were delayed by rain, he did not wait to witness the remaining games.

Not Pleased With The Hall

Examiner Special:

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 23.—It seems that the Duke and Duchess of Connaught are not altogether pleased with Rideau Hall, in fact their Comptroller of household has intimated plainly to the Government that it is not fit for a royal residence, and Hon. F. D. Monk, Minister of Public Works, has ordered sweeping alterations and improvements at considerable cost.

T.A.S. Athletes Will Meet

There will be a meeting of all those interested in the Athletics of the T. A. S. this ebening. The appointment of a physical director will be considered and any suggestions for the furtherance of the Athletic Society will be invited so that the classes may commence at once. The matter of procuring equipments has already been gone into. All players interested in the T.A.S. Hockey Club are especially requested to attend to-night's meeting.

A PERFECT MAN.

There is a man who never drinks,
Nor smokes, nor chews, nor swears,
Who never gambles, never flirts
And shuns all sinful snares—

There is a man who never does
A thing that is not right;
His wife can tell just where he is
At morning, noon and night—
"He's Dead."

BURN Occo SCRANTON COAL

All Saints' Team Are Champions

At Brinton Carpet Meadows Oct. 21, All Saints had to take the field without Gash and Edwards, owing to injuries, while Park street substituted Hitchen (the Havelock star) for Boycott and a new man was tried in place of Bobby Irwin, which trial, by the way, was fortunate for their opponents, as he did not show the speed or tackling powers of little Bobby. All Saints kicked off against a slight breeze, before a big crowd. Park street attacked immediately, but were driven back. Mid-field play followed for a time, until Park street broke away and Smith, the Park street captain, getting possession, scored the first goal with a beautiful side shot.

Straight from the centre kick, All Saints made things warm for their opponents, and during a scrimmage, the Park street goal escaped somewhat luckily, a big kick by Dawson bringing relief, but the Saints were soon back again and the halves following up their forwards in a judicious manner, kept up a bombardment until Monk got the leather and banged it through, thus equalizing the score. Half time was called just afterwards, with the score standing one all.

The second half started off with a once a cracker. All Saints ran down and Hooper just missed with a nice drive. From the goal kick, away dashed Park street, but a timely clearance by little Hull relieved the situation and the Saints were pressing again E. Dawson just missing with a great shot. For a time Park street took up the running, but the Saints' backs and halves were in great form, kicking and tackling splendidly and easily holding the crack Park street forwards. The referee gave a foul against the Saints for Vickers mixing up with Milburn and the ball was lobbed into the Saints' goal, but Gamble cleared nicely. The whistle sounded just afterwards, the game ending in a draw, giving All Saints the championship of the Church League, which carries with it the J. H. Burnham trophy and medals given by the league.

Mr. W. Abbot gave good satisfaction as referee. The teams lined up as follows:

All Saints		Park Street
	Goal
Calladine		Taylor
	Backs
Gamble		Donnell
Hull		Renshaw
	Half Backs
Vickers		Allen
Hooper (capt.)		Dawson
Hardie		Milburn

CASCARETS CURE A BILIOUS HEADACHE

Gently but Thoroughly Cleanse Your Liver, Stomach and Bowels and You Feel Great by Morning

You're bilious, you have a throbbing sensation in your head, a bad taste in your mouth, your eyes burn, your skin is yellow, with dark rings under your eyes; your lips are parched. No wonder you feel ugly, mean and ill tempered. Your system is full of bile not properly passed off, and what you need is a cleaning up inside. Don't continue being a bilious nuisance to yourself and those who love you, and don't resort to harsh physics that irritate and injure. Remember that every disorder of the stomach, liver and intestines can be quickly cured by morning with gentle, thorough Cascarets — they work while you sleep. A 10-cent box from your druggist will keep you and the entire family feeling good for months. Children love to take Cascarets, because they taste good and never gripe or sicken.

IN GENERAL

Whatever is worth doing is worth doing well.

Observation begets knowledge, and knowledge is power.

Do not lose your grip of the present by vain perplexities about the future.

Difficulties strengthen the mind as well as labour does the body.—Seneca.

Cheerful tempers manufacture solace and joy out of every unpromising material.

There's a heap of difference between the qualities we display and the qualities we possess.

To Hold Banquet.—The Mark St. Athletic Club will hold a banquet to-morrow evening.

Wherever I find a great deal of gratitude in a poor man I take it for granted a rich man.—Pope.

A man that astonishes at first soon makes people impatient if he does not continue in the same key.—Walpole.

We cannot always be doing a great work, but we can always be doing something that belongs to our condition.

Probabilities.—Moderate southwest gales, with showers to-night. Tuesday, fresh, westerly winds, fair and cooler.

She—"And that scar, Major. Did you get it during an engagement?" He (absently)—"No; the first week of our honeymoon."

Storage.—A limited amount of first-class storage space. Apply Peterborough Harware Co., warehouse opposite C.P.R. station.

The Man—"We need no ring to plight our troth." The Maid—"Oh, yes, we do. None of your sleight-of-hand tricks with me."

It is not putting things in the right place that bothers a man so much as finding the right place after he has put things in it.

Houses to Rent.—We have desirable houses to rent, ranging from $7.00 per month up. M. Carton, C. J. Carroll, 372 Water street. Phone 822.

If you want to become intelligent you must take your own little pitcher to the well of knowledge and dip it in yourself.—Archdeacon Westcott.

Dental Practice. — Dr Middleton, 374½ George street, (over McWilliam's fur store) has taken over the practice of W. H. Munning, dentist.

Madrigal Club.—The Madrigal Club will meet for rehearsal at the Conservatory of Music to-morrow night. A full attendance of members is expected.

Mrs. Hix—"I don't believe in those faith cures brought about by the laying on of hands." Mrs. Dix—"Well, I do. I cured my little boy of the cigarette habit in that way."

"When I was engaged to her she made me give up drinking, smoking, and cricket for her sake. Then I gave up something for my own sake." "What was that?" "The girl."

Painting and Decorating.—Painting paperhanging, graining, etc. All work quickly and neatly executed. Country work specially attended to. —Arthur Guppy, 558 Water street.

That is a good day in which you make some one happy. It is astonishing how little it takes to make one happy. Feel that the day is wasted in which you have not succeeded in this.

The only freedom I care about is the freedom to do right; the freedom to do wrong I am ready to part with on the cheapest terms to any one who will take it of me.—Professor Huxley.

"Ma," inquired Bobby, "hasn't pa a queer idea of Heaven?" "Well, I think not, Bobby. Why?" "I heard him say that the week you spent at the seashore seemed like Heaven to him."

Assumed Charge.—Mr. Gilchrist of the Y.M.C.A., and Rev. Mr. Ross of Peterborough, took charge of the services at Knox Church yesterday, in the absence of Rev. Mr. Keith, who is seriously ill at his home.

Pupils, Attention!—Miss Geraldine King wishes to announce that she is prepared to receive pupils in vocal and instrumental music, commencing September 1st, 1911, at 290 Charlotte street. Both phones 134.

"Oh, what a shame! I am inexpressibly shocked to hear it. And how soon after your marriage did he begin to display the cloven hoof?" "Why, at about the same time he began to cultivate the cloven breath."

"Bob, I promised you a bicycle if you passed your examinations, and here you have failed completely. What in all the world have you been doing with all your time?" "I've been learning to ride a bicycle, father."

First Boy—"Your folk ain't as rich as ours. My father and mother go driving every day." Second Boy—"My father drives every day, too." First Boy—"I don't believe it! What does he drive?" Second Boy—"Nails."

"What is that awful yelling?" "Oh, there's a dentist next door, it's probably somebody getting a tooth out." "No, not next door. I mean in the flat overhead." "Oh, that's probably Newed's baby getting a tooth in!"

Mr. Flasher, how do you account for the fact that I found a piece of rubber tyre in one of the sausages I bought here last week?" "My dear madam, that only goes to show that the motor car is replacing the horse everywhere."

A hardened criminal, convicted of a grave crime, said to the judge—"I'm not so bad a man, your honour, as you may think. If you'd only give me time for reflection and repentance——" "Very well," said the judge, "I'll give you fifteen years!"

Music and Languages Taught.—Prof. D. Schlochow, late of Toronto and London, is prepared to take pupils in German, French and Music. For full particulars, apply at his Studio, The Music Building, Charlotte street. J. M. Green Music Co., Ltd., Greene Phone 595.

"Don't you know," said the policeman to the servant, as she was dumping a pail of garbage in the open street, "that what you are doing is against the law?" "Oh, don't talk to me about the law," replied the girl: "it's all I can do to keep the Ten Commandments!"

Never in the history of any country, in any age, has there been such a mighty work before the youth of our land as there is to-day; and we might say never were young men as ignorant of it and unfitted for their work. Each one wants the other to row the boat while he catches the fish.

"I am sorry to be critical, my dear," said Mr. Lambkin, "but this pie is not the kind that mother used to make—not by a long shot." "It's too bad, Henry," said Mrs. Lambkin, amiably. "I don't know what to do about it. Perhaps you'd better ring her up on the 'phone and tell her. She sent it over this afternoon."

An At-Home.—The Ladies' Aid of St. Peter's will be at home on Wednesday afternoon, October 25th, from 3 to 6, and also in the evening, at the T. A. S. rooms. The occasion will be in the form of a shower for the children of St. Vincent's Home. Anything useful, either made or unmade for boys or girls, will be acceptable.

Card of Thanks. — Mrs. Milburn wishes to express, through the medium of the Examiner, her heartfelt gratitude and thanks to Lansdowne Lodge, No. 25, Sons of England, to her neighbours and to the employees of the Canadian General Electric Company, for their help and sympathy to her in her bereavement through the loss of her husband.

New Music Studio.—At the James M. Greene Music Co., Limited, 185 and 187 Charlotte street, 'Phone 595 Herbert C. Treneer, A. T. C. M., Organist and Choir Master of St. Andrew's Church, will receive pupils for piano and theory. Pupils prepared for College or Conservatory examinations, if desired. A thorough and technical training guaranteed with special attention to interpretation. For terms, etc., apply to address mentioned above.

Flour.—You cannot make bread unless you get the right flour. James R. Bell represents the leading Flour Mills in Canada—Reindeer, Quaker, Mikado, Pride of the West, etc. Potatoes are still $1.35 per bag; onions, 35c per peck; excellent cooking and eating apples, 20c and 25c per peck.—James R. Bell, 161 Hunter street; 'phone, 455; branch store, 43 Hunter street, East City.

Paddy Again.—One day an Irishman met an Englishman, and accosted him thus—"Do you know in what month of the year my wife talks the least?" "Well, I suppose when she catches cold and loses her voice," said the Englishman. "Not at all. It is in February," said Paddy. "Why is that?" asked the Englishman. "Because February has the fewest days," said Paddy.

The Irish Boy Speaks.—At a Scriptural examination a small Irish boy was asked, "What will become of the proud man?" "He will be turned into an animal," was the quick reply. "Why do you say that, Mike?" said the astonished teacher. "Because," explained the lad, "the Bible says that he that humbleth himself shall be exalted, and he that exalteth himself shall be a baste."

Blaming the Weather.—At one time during a season of heavy fog a London daily paper offered a prize for the best fog story. The story here given won the prize. A merchant received a telephone message one morning from one of his clerks: "Hello, Mr. Smith," said the clerk over the wire. "I cannot come down to the shop this morning on account of the fog. I have not yet arrived home yesterday."

Victory from Defeat.—Said the president of one of the great universities in addressing his students:—"Show me the young man who has had failure and has now won his way to success, and I will back him." A man who has never had any failures—whose course has been one of unbroken prosperity—has not the resources of strength and endurance stored away in his life that he has who has suffered defeats, and then has risen again and pressed forward to victory.

Patronize Home Industry.—There is no need of sending to Toronto, or elsewhere, for showcases, or store-fixtures of any kind. Patronize the Peterborough Showcase Co., a well-equipped factory, for turning out large contracts, as well as small ones. The material and workmanship is of the best. Prices are right, and terms to suit all people. Any one intending to equip their stores with showcases, wallcases, etc., for the coming Christmas trade, by sending their order to the factory by the 30th of September, will be allowed a discount of 10 per cent. on orders exceeding $75.—W. THEOBALD, Manager; Factory, 709 Water street. 'Phone 1153.

RISING IN THE NORTH

The Chinese Revolution Shows Activity in a New Field

MORE REBEL VICTORIES

Pekin, Oct. 24.—The revolutionary spirit is now manifesting itself in the north as well as in the south. Those who heretofore have believed that the northern provinces might rally around the Government are now of the opinion that secessions will follow in rapid succession.

The precautionary measures taken in Manchuria, where the Government does not permit mention of the revolution, show the anti-Government spirit in the far north. There are persistent reports that risings have been planned for the next few days in the immediate vicinity of the capital. It may be that these will not be fulfilled, but they indicate a widespread sympathy with the revolt.

The diplomatic corps have discussed the necessity of maintaining communication between Tientsin and Pekin. The military commanders report only sufficient troops to protect the legation quarter in Pekin and the foreign settlement in Tientsin, which number approximately 1,000 and 3,500 respectively. Consequently, in a serious emergency, only Japanese would be immediately available from the garrisons at Port Arthur and Dalny.

The legations have not yet considered seriously the suggestion of an English paper in Shanghai, that the Manchus, when desperate, might endeavor secretly to encourage the ignorant multitude to attack the foreigners, and thereby attain foreign intervention, which would militate in their favor, they being the only established dynasty.

It is argued that such machinations will prove more dangerous to the Manchus than to anyone else, because it is known that the rebel organization elsewhere is able the restrain its adherents. The Manchus, however, are apparently following a weak and vacillating policy, which conceivably might be followed by desperate measures.

A prominent Chinese official of western education, in discussing this possibility, gave it to be understood that precautions against such a manoeuvre should not be overlooked. The increase in the activity of the press shows either defiance or relaxation of the censorship, whether from venality or sympathy on the part of the police is unknown. The newspapers are publishing reports of rebel victories which have not yet been attained, and of Government calamities more serious than have yet been suffered, and in so doing they are displaying a greater degree of temerity than usual.

Gen. Yin Tchang, the War Minister, seems to have pushed his troops through the passes on the Honan-Hupeh border without resistance. Some, therefore, are of the opinion that he intends to attack promptly. He has, however, less troops under his command than heretofore supposed. It is not generally believed that he has above 15,000, of which only two battalions are Manchus. They are guarding the railway in the rear. Other troops intended for the Hankow campaign have not been sent owing to the fear of their desertion. There was also necessity for the retention of a strong force near Pekin.

Gen. Yin Tchang sent back several military attaches who attempted to follow the army, although they all possessed passports from the Chinese Foreign Board. The British and American attaches left here for Shanghai yesterday, intending to proceed to Hankow up the Yangtsekiang. It is believed that Yin Tchang, Manchu-like, desires to give battle, although the half-hearted spirit of his troops may deter him. On the other hand, Yuan Shikai, Chinese-like, is temporarily with the rebels. Yuan Shikai has refused to leave Changte in the special cars which have been sent for him, but there is evidence that he has despatched trusted adherents of former days as emissaries to the rebel leaders. It is believed that he is endeavoring to reach a compromise between the rebels and the throne on the basis of immediate constitutional government.

The foreign customs commissioner at Changsha has telegraphed the inspector-general of customs here that the city revolted. The officials were killed and the viceroy fled. The foreign customs men took refuge in the river boats.

It is officially stated that the diplomatic body has informed the Chinese Government that it is unable to rely on the subject of indemnities, which is so complicated and important that China had better approach the individual Governments direct.

Gunboats Have Disappeared.

Hankow, Oct. 24.—(Delay in transmission)—The Imperial gunboats have proceeded down the river and their whereabouts are unknown. The movements of the Imperial forces are a mystery. The revolutionaries believe that the Imperialists have scattered northwards.

The revolutionists have been advancing cautiously and are meeting with only guerilla opposition. Many of the rebels have cut off their queues, indicating that they will win or die.

The city of Ichang, in Hupeh Province, was taken Thursday without a fight. Recruits are flocking to Wuchang.

Trolley's 1,200 Mile Run.

Atlantic City, N.J., Oct. 24.—A trolley car that had been driven by its own motor on its own wheels all the way from St. Louis reached here to become the exhibit of chief interest at the opening of the convention of the American Electric Railway Association. Delegates from all parts of the United States are attending the meeting.

Will Oppose Merger.

Montreal, Oct. 24.—The Board of Control yesterday reported against the proposed street railway amalgamation, and a caucus of aldermen unanimously and practically without discussion, pledged the City Council to accept the further recommendation to oppose the ratification of the merger when the question comes before the Public Utilities Commission to-day.

BANK IS PLUNDERED

Fort William Police However Soon Recover the Spoils

CLERK ARRESTED

Fort William, Oct. 24.—One of the most daring robberies that ever took place in this section occurred yesterday when A. R. Running, until two months ago accountant in the local branch of the Royal Bank, at 9 o'clock held up the teller at the point of a gun and took between $5,000 and $6,000.

Running entered the bank, and the teller, H. J. Dickson, offered to assist him to remove his trunk. He pulled out a revolver and compelled the teller to hand over a part of the money inside his cage. He backed out of the bank and started down Victoria avenue, followed by several persons to whom the teller had shouted the alarm.

The police captured Running in the coal dock section in half an hour. He offered no resistance. Running came here about six months ago. His former home was Brockville, Ont. He formerly worked in Winnipeg, at the British North American Bank. The money stolen was found in Running's room in a valise, amounting to $4,835, and bank officials say that was the amount taken.

The young man was to have been married next Thursday to a local girl. He wanted to take a honeymoon tour and was without sufficient means. Friends think his mind is unbalanced. He has not confessed.

Faces Murder Charge.

Cornwall, Oct. 24.—Of four criminal and one civil cases at the Cornwall fall assizes, which opened to-day, the case of outstanding interest is that of the King v. McRae, in which F. D. McRae, ex-reeve of Lancaster Township, is charged with the murder of William Shaw, druggist, of Carp, Ont.

The tragedy took place on July 1, near the residence of D. C. McRae, Bridge End, Lancaster Township, Glengarry, where Shaw had been one of a party which is said to have made a futile attempt to recover possession of the infant child of Dr. and Mrs. Magee of Carp. The pair had quarrelled along religious lines, Dr. Magee being a Methodist and his wife by birth and education a Roman Catholic.

After the birth of their first child last spring, troubles began and multiplied. Finally Mrs. Magee left home with the child and went to the residence of her father in Glengarry.

It was on the occasion of Dr. Magee's second attempt to get possession of his child that the fatal shooting occurred Dr. Magee was accompanied by his brother, his druggist, Shaw, who was fatally shot, and a constable named Uren from Bainsville

Bravery Medal For Jennings.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—For his bravery in rescuing a drowning man at Niagara-on-the-Lake on Aug. 25, A. H. Jennings will receive a medal from the Royal Humane Society of Canada.

Mr. Jennings jumped from the deck of the Corona, while the boat was at the wharf, and rescued a man in the water below, who had fallen overboard in the dark. The act involved considerable danger, and the investigation committee of the society unanimously decided that he should be awarded a medal.

Women For Jury.

Los Angeles, Cal., Oct. 24.—That women may be drafted to complete the jury which is to pass upon the guilt or innocence of James B. McNamara is one of the interesting possibilities incident to the recent victory of women suffrage in the State of California.

Clarence S. Darrow, senior counsel for the defence, says "The matter is by no means a joke. There is no legal or constitutional reason so far as I can see which would bar that contingency."

To Second Address From Throne.

Quebec, Oct. 24.—Albert Sevigny, M.P. for Dorchester, has been invited by Premier Borden to second in French the address of the Lower House in answer to the speech from the throne, at the opening of the new Parliament in November next, and he has accepted. Sevigny is an anti-navy man.

NO ARRESTS YET.

Dick Tragedy In Toronto as Mysterious as Ever.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—Despite the efforts of some of the jury another adjournment was made in the inquest into the death of J. Walter Dick last evening, no arrests having yet been made.

Detective Tipton was placed in the witness box and swore to having followed up many suggested clues, but without the least success.

Since the time Dick was struck three weeks ago last Saturday evening the detectives have been working hard on the case and though several times they felt almost assured that an arrest would be made in a day or two, they have, as yet, not been warranted in taking any suspects into custody.

Hope of securing the man who struck Dick has not yet been given up, but on the contrary the detectives are still following several clues and feel confident that they will soon have gleaned sufficient information to run down a man whom they have suspected almost from the start.

Where Dick spent the intervening time after leaving the athletic grounds and nine o'clock is still a mystery, yet the mystery is not nearly so deep as a fortnight ago.

Coroner Graham repeated his belief that it would be unwise to close the investigation without an arrest, but went so far as to say that should the matter not be straightened out by the end of another two weeks, he would allow the jury to retire and bring in a verdict.

The new crown attorney, R. H. Greer, last evening conducted his first inquest.

TELEGRAPHIC BRIEFS.

George Lawrence, the new Manitoba Minister of Agriculture, was re-elected by acclamation for Killarney yesterday.

The Royal Commission on Industrial Training and Technical Education is off on its final tour, which will be through the New England States.

Beachville, Ont., has adopted a Hydro-electric power bylaw by a vote of 93 to 5. The village will require at the outset something over 100 horsepower.

A new merger, to be called the Canadian Jewellers, Limited, has secured a charter from the federal authorities. The authorised capital is $5,000,000.

Guiseppi and Pietro De Santio, father and son, residing in a cabin in Arcadia, N.Y., were shot to pieces by two Italians, who called at their home for robbery.

It is now determined that William Ryder, found dead at White's Mount in King's County, N.B., on October 11, with three bullets in his body, was murdered.

Monday marked an epoch in the history of Waterloo. The Evangelical Lutheran Seminary, the first Lutheran theological seminary in Canada was formally opened.

The Greek steamer Georgios XXX., grain laden, was wrecked at the entrance of the Gironde Estuary, France, during a storm. Of the crew of 22 only seven were saved.

William P. Martin, a laborer at the C. P. R. repair shops, West Toronto, was instantly killed yesterday when assisting in the removal of the steel plate from the front of an engine.

John H. Jewell, principal of the firm of J. H. Jewell & Co., Toronto, bankers and brokers, was stricken with paralysis as he was leaving his office last night and died at 1.50 this morning.

Bequests totalling $75,000 to educational and charitable institutions are made in the will of the late Thomas Douglas Smith, one of the old-timers in the West, who died in Winnipeg last spring.

Petitions have been circulated throughout Digby County, N.S., praying for a commutation of Harry Wilson's death sentence to life imprisonment. He was convicted of the murder of his brother.

Madero Feared Assassination.

San Antonio, Texas, Oct. 24.—A statement was made here yesterday by a friend of Francisco I. Madero that the President-elect of Mexico has abandoned his trip to Piedras Negras because of reports that reached him from San Antonio that his assassination was planned.

Winnipeg Electric Is Sold.

Winnipeg, Oct. 24.—All holdings of the Winnipeg Electric Co., which supplies gas, power, and street railway services to Winnipeg and vicinity, have been purchased by the F. R. Reese Engineering Co., an American concern backed by large capital.

CABINET CHANGES

British Ministers Undergo a General Shifting

CHURCHILL AFFECTED

London, Oct. 24.—The British Cabinet has undergone an important reconstruction, rumors of which have been in circulation for some weeks past.

Winston Spencer Churchill, the Home Secretary, becomes First Lord of the Admiralty, while Reginald McKenna lays down the Admiralty portfolio to assume the Home Secretaryship. Earl Carrington, President of the Board of Agriculture, becomes Lord of the Privy Seal. C. E. Hob-

HON. WINSTON CHURCHILL.

house, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, is appointed Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. Walter Runciman retires from the Presidency of the Board of Education to become President of the Board of Agriculture, while the Presidency of the Board of Education has been assumed by J. A. Pease, the former Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.

Sir Edward Strathcey, Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Agriculture, and the Rt. Hon. Alfred Emmott, M.P. for Oldham, and Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, have been promoted to the peerage.

With the exception of the exchange of offices by Mr. Churchill and Mr McKenna, the Cabinet shuffle causes little comment. The Unionists express the fear that the change made will enable the Government to reduce the naval estimates, Mr. Churchill being considered one of the economists of the Cabinet.

Brokers on Trial.

New York, Oct. 24.—Simon Jacob Hernig, better known as George Graham Rice; Bernard H. Scheftels, Geo. Sullivan, otherwise known as "Red Letter" Sullivan, Charles B. Stone, Charles E. Belser, John Delaney and Ralph E. Waterman, composing the brokerage firm of B. H. Scheftels & Co., were yesterday afternoon placed on trial in the U. S. Circuit Court, charged with using the mails in a scheme to defraud investors and with obtaining money by false pretences. Their operations covered the whole of the United States and portions of Canada.

These men and others were captured in a raid in the Scheftels office here in September, 1910, when similar descents were made upon offices of the firm in Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Milwaukee Detroit and Providence.

The trial continues to-day, and is expected to last several weeks.

A. C. Boyce For Cabinet.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—A. C. Boyce of West Algoma may be the new Solicitor-General. A few days ago it was a toss-up whether this semi-Ministerial office would come to Ontario or go down to Nova Scotia. The odds are now lining up in favor of Ontario with A. C. Boyce as the likely man. Quebec had the Solicitor-Generalship for many years, but Quebec has fared well in recent preferments.

There is a general idea that there is still something coming to Ontario instead of what this province did last month. Mr. Boyce is a good lawyer and good fighter and his friends here say the post is as good as his.

Child Not Drowned.

Bath, Me., Oct. 24.—That three-year-old Martin Howard Keefe, jr., whose body was found in a mill pond Saturday morning by his mother, Mildred Keefe, was not drowned, was the report made by Medical Examiner R. H. Donnell, following an autopsy yesterday. The cause of death cannot be determined until the stomach and other organs have been thoroughly examined. They have been sent to the Bowdoin College medical school.

The mother was arraigned before Judge A. J. Donton in the Municipal Court yesterday, charged with murder and entered a plea of not guilty.

Flooded the Magazines.

Toulon, Oct. 24.—A repetition of the Liberte disaster was probably averted yesterday by the presence of mind of the commander of the battleship Suffren. As the vessel was preparing to leave here escaping steam overheated the partitions between the coal bunkers and the magazines, causing an outbreak of fire.

The commander without delay flooded the magazines and extinguished the flames.

CABINET CHANGES
British Ministers Undergo a General Shifting
CHURCHILL AFFECTED
London, Oct. 24.—The British Cabinet has undergone an important reconstruction, rumors of which have been in circulation for some weeks past.
Winston Spencer Churchill, the Home Secretary, becomes First Lord of the Admiralty, while Reginald McKenna lays down the Admiralty portfolio to assume the Home Secretaryship. Earl Carrington, President of the Board of Agriculture, becomes Lord of the Privy Seal. C. E. Hob-

HON. WINSTON CHURCHILL.
house, Financial Secretary to the Treasury, is appointed Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster. Walter Runciman retires from the Presidency of the Board of Education to become President of the Board of Agriculture, while the Presidency of the Board of Education has been assumed by J. A. Pease, the former Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster.
Sir Edward Strathcey, Parliamentary Secretary of the Board of Agriculture, and the Rt. Hon. Alfred Emmott, M.P. for Oldham, and Deputy Speaker of the House of Commons, have been promoted to the peerage.
With the exception of the exchange of offices by Mr. Churchill and Mr McKenna, the Cabinet shuffle causes little comment. The Unionists express the fear that the change made will enable the Government to reduce the naval estimates, Mr. Churchill being considered one of the economists of the Cabinet.

Autumn is the Time
— FOR — GLASSES
WHY?
The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boon at this season of the year. This no doubt accounts for much of the present increased demand for Glasses.
Appointment for examining the eyes for Glasses is usually necessary.

Banker Walsh Dead.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—John R. Walsh, former banker, publisher and railroad owner, released a week ago from the Leavenworth Federal Penitentiary, died yesterday of heart disease.

Walsh was 74 years old. He gained pre-eminence in financial circles through astute business methods. It was on Dec. 16, 1905, however, that the financier overstepped the national banking laws in his conduct of the Chicago National Bank, of which he was president. That institution failed. On Jan. 3, 1907, Walsh was indicted on 160 counts, charged with "wrecking" the bank. Through three years of litigation, the financier fought desperately to stave off a prison sentence, but the Supreme Court of the United States on Jan. 17, 1910, refused an appeal, and on the 19th the former bank president began his five-year term at Leavenworth Penitentiary.

Last month Walsh appeared before the federal parole board of Leavenworth and applied for a parole, being eligible under the laws. His parole was granted Oct. 14, and the banker released after having served a year and a half of his five-year sentence.

Jeered Cook at Copenhagen.

Copenhagen, Oct. 24.—Dr. Fred. A. Cook, who was so enthusiastically welcomed here after his alleged discovery of the north pole two years ago, arrived here last night. He was accompanied by his wife. Owing to the threatening attitude of the crowd, Dr. Cook was escorted to his carriage by a detachment of police. The mob followed, jeering and hooting.

The explorer said he had given up his projected European lecture tour and will lecture only in this city. The newspapers denounce him, some of them recommending demonstrations of disapproval at his lecture.

Outbreak of Diphtheria.

Montreal, Oct. 24.—The Protestant School Commissioners, declared the medical health officer of the city yesterday, had ordered that the Madison avenue school in Montreal West should be closed for the present owing to five cases of diphtheria, which had broken out in the place.

Health officials are at the school making a thorough examination.

Last week 29 cases of the disease were reported in the city. It was not thought by the health authorities that there was any grave danger of the disease becoming epidemic.

Opposition For Ferguson.

Brockville, Oct. 24.—G. Howard Ferguson, the sitting Conservative member for Grenville, and mentioned as likely Cabinet material in the Whitney Government, is to have opposition in his fight for re-nomination. Mayor F. S. Evanson of Prescott has announced that he will give Mr. Ferguson a run in the convention, which has been called for Nov. 1 at Spencerville. Evanson says Ferguson should retire and give some one else a chance.

The Brockville Conservatives will pick a candidate on November 1.

OTTUMWA WOMAN CURED

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Ottumwa, Iowa.—"For years I was almost a constant sufferer from female trouble in all its dreadful forms; shooting pains all over my body, sick headache, spinal weakness, dizziness, depression, and everything that was horrid. I tried many doctors in different parts of the United States, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than all the doctors. I feel it my duty to tell you these facts. My heart is full of gratitude to you for my cure."—Mrs. HARRIET E. WAMPLER, 524 S. Ransom Street, Ottumwa, Iowa.

Consider This Advice.

No woman should submit to a surgical operation, which may mean death, until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous medicine, made only from roots and herbs, has for thirty years proved to be the most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism. Women residing in almost every city and town in the United States bear willing testimony to the wonderful virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Mrs. Pinkham, at Lynn, Mass., invites all sick women to write her for advice. Her advice is free, confidential, and always helpful.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

Then he once more adjusted his helmet-receiver and sat back and sighed, letting the hot current from his electric fan play on his face. But the tropical air seemed devitalised, bereft of its oxygen. He was dimly conscious of the passage of time, of the muffled and monotonous drone of the fan, of the casual ship-noises far below deck. But nothing came to stir his responder into life. There was not a ship or station to be picked up. The day had deepened into evening, and nothing had come to help him solve his problem.

Already, on the ship's bridge, the navigating officer in soiled duck had picked up the Toajiras Light. Behind that light lay the flat and miasmal Locombian coast. And somewhere, still farther to the southwest, armies were being arrayed against each other. Somewhere, across the deepening night, men were ambushing and shooting. Peons dragged out of peaceful valleys, "volunteers" commandeered at the point of the bayonet, unattached citizens forcibly seised in cafes and the open streets, were being set at one another's throats, because it suited the plans of a placid-eyed and lethargic conspirator who wrung power and money out of the optimism of a deluded and childlike people.

McKinnon, as he sat in his hot and stifling station, wondered if his mission had failed. He asked himself if he had not been outmaneuvered, from the first.

The weight of this seeming failure grew heavier and heavier on his spirit. He felt as though every dead body in that Locombian warfare was pressing down on him, as though the blood from every gunshot wound was submerging him in a river of self-hate.

He turned back to his apparatus, sullenly, wearily, desperately. But call and tune and call again as he might, he could get nothing. He wondered if, by any chance, Duran and his government were already a thing of the past; if the Laminian and all she carried had come too late; if Guariqui had already fallen. Then he mopped his face again, and told himself that the heat had got on his nerves. Any one, when tired and half-cocked, he muttered, would feel dispirited.

He pulled himself together, with an effort, and coerced his attention on the instruments before him. The thing was not over,he doggedly maintained; he still had his fighting-chance.

His watch above the responder was interrupted by a peremptory rattle of his cabin door. He was, at Alicia's suggestion, keeping his wireless station under lock and key, though it had long since slipped his mind that he had locked himself in. He opened his door, guardedly, and was both relieved and disconcerted to see the figure of Captain Yandel swaying there.

"What're you picking up?" demanded the captain, thickly. His face was an almost apoplectic red, and a heavy odour of brandy drifted into the close little cabin. Yet the squat, wide-shouldered figure stood erect and steady enough on the ludicrously short and wide-planted legs. McKinnon wondered how many years he would last, in such a climate. Then he marvelled at the thought of how slowly men were able to kill themselves: the sheer pertinacity of life amazed him, as he peered up at the hulk before him, and in some way knew that it would drag on and on through its sottish years, that the overheated blood and the hardening arteries and the long-abused body would clamour for their own, would fight for life and movement, to the bitter end.

"I haven't picked up anything," answered the thoughtful-eyed man at the operating-table. "And I've been hugging this coherer for four hours."

"Can't you get that dam'ed Puerto Locombia operator?"

"I can keep calling."

"Well, keep at him till he answers. I want to know what they're doin' with that tin-born republic o' theirs. And as soon as you get anything let me know."

He turned away, looked up at the night, swayed a little, slowly regained his equilibrium, and wandered forward to the darkness of the bridge.

McKinnon's hand went out obediently to the switch, his dynamo purred and hummed, and he caught up the lever-handle of his key. The great blue spark exploded from the coils and leaped and hissed from knob to knob across the spark-gap. "Pt-Ba," "Pt-Ba," he called, perfunctorily.

He looked up to see the restless captain back at his door again, stupidly watching his spark. The operator knew he was calling a dead station, but he played out his part.

"I might do something, if they'd give me a little more power from the engine-room," he said, by way of excuse.

"Then you'll get your power," declared the autocrat of his little world. "You'll get power enough, if that's all that's wrong," he repeated, as he made his way once more toward the bridge.

McKinnon switched off and waited until Captain Yandel's order had time to be acted on. Then he tested his spark again. The eruption, as the contact-points of his despatching-key came together, seemed to stab and tear a sudden hole in the silence. It roared and cannonaded out through the little cabin, until the night echoed with it; it spit and hissed from the mastheads, aggressively, incisively, as he continued to move the contact-lever up and down, slow and strong, and sent his call arrowing out through the darkness: "Pt-Ba." "Pt-Ba." But interpolated between each call for "Puerto Locombia" was an equally impatient and anxious Morse prayer for "Cruiser Princeton—Cruiser Princeton."

"That's almost enough to wake the dead," he mentally assured himself as he adjusted his "set," switched off, and pressed the 'phones close in to his ears.

Through these 'phones, as he listened, came a sound as feeble and minute as the tick of that insect known as a death-watch. His first thought was that it could be nothing more than a mere "echo-signal," from too high intensity. His second thought convinced him that this was out of the question; too long a time had elapsed between his own send and those coherent dots and dashes creeping into his startled ear. It was an outside message, a call being intercepted by his antennæ. Yet the signal that he was reading was the same as his own "Pt-Ba," "Pt-Ba."

McKinnon's hand once more darted out to his switch, and his face was alert and changing with his changing thought as he caught up his key-lever. And again the blue spark exploded across the spark-gap, and the cabin walls threw back the lightning-like flash and pulse of the illumination. Already he had forgotten the heat, the depressing sense of frustration, the brooding consciousness of impending defeat that had weighed upon him. Switching off, he sat with inclined head, intently, raptly listening.

He was startled to feel a huge and ape-like hand suddenly take hold of his arm.

"What're you getting?" demanded the owner of the arm.

It was Ganley standing there close beside him. His dark face, wet with perspiration, shone in the strong side-light as though it had been oiled. His peering eyes showed in two thin crescents of white, out of the heavy shadow made by the projecting eye-bones.

"Nothing," was McKinnon's sharp retort. "I'm only trying to get something."

He shook the detaining hand from his arm, and gave all his attention to his call. But the intruder was not to be so easily overridden.

"Are you with us?" he demanded, pregnantly, as the preoccupied operator again caught up the phone-set.

"Yes—yes, I'm with you," cried the man, stooping over the responder. "But I'm trying to operate!"

"What in hell does this operating count if you're with us?" persisted the placid-toned Ganley, determined, apparently, on a policy of obstruction.

"It's this call that's going to save both our scalps," was the abstracted yet hurried retort.

"How save my scalp?" demanded Ganley, with a detaining hand on the other's fore-arm.

The stooping McKinnon straightened up and wheeled on him, every nerve ready to snap like an over-strained lowstring.

"I've got to catch this call! Don't talk—keep away from me!"

Ganley looked at him heavily. He did not speak. But a third voice thundered abruptly and unexpectedly through the hot cabin. It was Captain Yandel's, belligerent, stentorian, bull-like.

"Come out o' that station!"

The man addressed did not move.

"Come out o' there and stop interferin' with my men!"

Ganley turned his head slowly about and gazed at the ship's master. But otherwise he showed no sign of having heard.

"Are you comin' out o' there?" demanded that apoplectic-faced officer, in a roar of inebriate and affronted authority. There was no evading his blind and unreasoning anger. Ganley shrugged a massive shoulder.

"Since you ask me so politely, I s'pose so," he conceded, with his mirthless laugh. Then he placidly turned about and stepped to the doorway to the open deck.

"Now you get below-decks where you belong!"

The gaze of the two men met and locked; it was like the clash and lock of elk-antlers.

In that interlocked gaze lay animal-like challenge and counter-challenge, threat and counter-threat, malignant fortitude and an even more malignant defiance.

Ganley, with a lip-curl of contempt, thrust his hands slowly down in his pockets, and then turned on his heel and went below.

"What're you gettin'?" Captain Yandel demanded of the man chapleted with the shining band of steel ending in two small black knobs.

"They don't answer!" cried McKinnon, with a gasp of exasperation.

"Don't answer?" demanded the captain.

"No, I've lost them!" was the bitter cry of the man bent over his coherer.

The ship's master's blasphemy was both prolonged and voluble.

"And you ain't goin' to get 'em?"

"I've lost them," was the repeated and almost hopeless answer. The morose-eyed officer peered at the operator's drawn and sweat-stained face.

"You're makin' a devil of a nice mess o' this business, between you!" he declared, with another oath of disgust.

The wireless-operator only stared at his instruments, silently, challengingly, combatively.

CHAPTER XIX
THE INTERCEPTED CALL

It was two hours later that a great wide-shouldered figure in white duck passed quietly along the empty bridge-deck. This ghost-like figure cautiously tried the door of the wireless room, but found it securely locked. Then it crept about to the half-open shutter and stood there, minute after minute, in an attitude of listening. Beyond the unbroken drone of the electric fan there was nothing to be heard from within. And the cabin itself was in utter darkness.

The man at the window waited for still another space of time, peering back and forth along the deck to make sure that his movements were unobserved. Then he raised a cautious arm and slid the barred shutter farther along its groove.

The damp wood rasped and stuttered a little, for all his caution, as he pushed it, and he drew quickly back from the window. For he had heard the sound of a sudden half-articulate sigh, followed by the stir of a body moving impatiently on a mattress, and then the quick pad of bare feet crossing the cabin floor.

It was McKinnon, startled out of his sleep of utter weariness by the momentary sound of the moving shutter.

He turned on the single-globed, green-shaded electric that swung low over his operating-table. He stood there in his crumpled madras pajamas, looking dazedly and a little sleepily about the narrow room.

Then, automatically, from sheer force of habit, he adjusted his "set" over his head, swung a sleepy hand out to his tuner-levers, pressed the phones close over his ears, and listened.

He grew tired of standing there half-leaning against the sharp table edge, as he listened, for the responder had given no sign of life. So he dropped into the chair before his instrument, and sat there, yawning sleepily, with ludicrously wandering eyes, his elbows spread wide and resting on the edge of the unpainted pine board.

The man at the shuttered window could see his face, half in the strong light of the shaded electric globe. He could see the bony hand move back and forth to the tuner and shift and re-shift the buttons in the slotted box-top columned with numerals. He could hear the operator's low mumble of disappointment as he lifted the "set" from his head, disarranging more than ever his already tousled hair. Then the listener drew closer for a sudden little sound, half-grunt, half-cry, had broken from McKinnon's lips.

The phones were once more held down hard on his ears as he stooped forward, this time wide-awake.

The coherer had stirred and quivered into life. A faint and febrile little shower of ticks was pounding minutely against his ear-drums. Some one was "sending."

He reached out and drew up the form-pad before him as he listened. The call was coming clearly now, repeated again and again. "Pt-Ba," "Pt-Ba," came the query through the night. McKinnon, as he listened and "tuned up" to the other man's tensity, could recognise the nature of the "send" as one would recognise the accent of a Westerner in Boston or a Londoner in Dublin. It was the unmistakable yet undefinable inflection and cadence of a navy man. It was an American battleship of some sort, calling Puerto Locombia.

McKinnon was on his feet again, tingling with excitement. He threw down his switch-lever, caught up his key, and sent the answering call rattlin g and exploding across his spark-gap, loud above the purr of the wakened dynamo.

Then he turned again to his phones and listened. They had not tuned up to him; they had not picked him up. For still again came the call "Pt-Ba," "Pt-Ba." It was out of the hours for sending. The engine-room had diminished his power, leaving him without voltage enough to make a "splash" that would reach the warship.

But his hand went out to his form-pad and he bent over it, busy with his transcription, as the noise pulsing and creeping in through his receivers translated itself into intelligibility.

This is cruiser Princeton lying off harbor of Torreblanca. Send word of Guariqui situation. Mobile despatch two days ago reports protection wanted for American interests. Please instruct our consul send immediate advice.

Lieutenant Verdu.

Then came a minute or two of silence, and then the call again, followed by the repeated message:

Pt-Ba: Are you asleep? Why does Pirneeton get no answer?

Lieutenant Verdu.

And still again came the silence, and still again the call, indignant, peremptory, to the appreciatively trained ear as eloquent of impatience in its microphonic dots and dashes as the human voice itself could be.

Automatically, McKinnon wrote out the despatches, word for word, as a matter of record.

His chance had come at last: all he now needed was power. It would take him but a minute to slip down to the engine-room, he concluded, as he threw on a striped green bath-robe with a hood like a monk's cowl. Then he could see for himself that they were slinging the right voltage up to him.

He sprang for the cabin door, unlocked it, and swung it open. As he leaped out across the door-sill he ran head-on into the arms of Ganley.

He scarcely looked up. His one thought was to reach that engine-room and to reach it without loss of time. He accepted the momentary obstruction as nothing more than a clumsy seaman who had scarcely been given time to step aside. He struggled to edge about the unyielding bulk, swinging to one side with a preoccupied half-growl of impatience. It was not until he found himself seized and almost carried back into his cabin that he saw either the meaning or the menace of the situation.

(To be continued.)

When She Attempted to Work, so Exhausted Was the Nervous System

The Feeble, Wasted Nerves Were Restored and Revitalized by

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

Nervous prostration is a terrible disease to all who understand its symptoms. At times the sufferer feels comparatively well, but with slight exertion the dreadful helplessness returns and all strength and vitality seems to leave the system.

This letter from Mrs. Martin very well describes the terrible conditions in which many a sufferer finds herself. She also tells how she regained health and strength by using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food after all other treatments had failed.

Mrs. Edwin Martin, Ayer's Cliff, Que., writes: "Before I began using Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I was in a terrible condition from nervous exhaustion and prostration. Dizzy spells would come over me and I would fall to the floor. The weakness was so great that I could not so much as sweep the floor without fainting, but the nerve food helped me after the doctors failed. It has done wonders in building up my nervous system. I can do my own housework now and washing, and feel that this great medicine has been a God-send to me. I think it is the best of medicine."

OMEMEE ITEMS

OMEMEE, October 17th. — Mrs. Balfour and Miss Carrie were in Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Elva Thompson of the Ross Memorial Hospital, Lindsay, was at home on Friday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. Reid of Vancouver, B.C., are visiting the latter's mother, Mrs. Evans.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. T. W. McLean on Friday, and left a fine baby girl.

Mrs. McPherson was in Peterborough on Monday.

On Wednesday afternoon the annual thank offering of the W. F. M. S. of the Presbyterian Church was held. Mrs. Currie occupied the chair and opened the service with hymn 434 followed by prayer. Mrs. Keith of Peterborough, was present and gave an address on India. The speaker was very familiar with her topic, having been connected with mission work in India for two years. She contrasted the lives of those of our own land with those of the women of India. While the "Go ye into all the world," of our Saviour does not mean that every person must be a foreign missionary, each can give of their substance and prayers and thus help on the work. Mrs. Keith said she was greatly struck by the variety of the different churches in India, all denominations working together and trying to uplift humanity. She went on to describe the different zenanas—that part of the house occupied by the women. Each village is made up of a certain caste, the lowest being the "sweepers." All of the quarters assigned the women have no windows opening on the street, but open toward a court-yard in the centre of the house. Thus, while they are not prisoners, they are isolated and secluded. The better class of people live on the second floor of a house, while the lowest dwell in mud huts, built on the ground. The minds of the eastern women are undeveloped, and they have to be taught like children. Generally speaking, the women of India live a most unhappy life. A large number of them are widows, there being one in every 26 out of a total of 144,000,000 women. When a woman becomes a widow she is despised by all and sometimes these young widows seek death rather than endure the scorn and hatred of those around them. Mrs. Keith pointed out the fact that those unfortunate women have as much right to the freedom and happiness that the Gospel affords as any in our own fair Dominion, and closed her address by an urgent apeal to the women present to do all in their power to assist in the furtherance of God's Kingdom.

A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Keith for her very interesting and helpful address, the motion being moved by Mrs. Williamson, and seconded by Mrs. Morrison.

Mesdames Hodgetts and Kelly sang a duet, "Abide with Me," which was much appreciated, and the meeting closed with hymn 452.

At the conclusion of the session the ladies of the society served tea in the school room of the church.

Master Arthur Herd has gone to Woodstock to join his parents who are living in that place.

Mrs. Wm. Stephenson was in Peterborough on Monday.

Mrs. R. Burns spent a few days in Toronto last week.

Last Thursday Mr. Charles Banks met with a very unfortunate accident. He was on the threshing machine when his foot slipped, and to save himself from falling he clutched at the wheel, his hand coming in contact with the cogs and being badly crushed.

The anniversary services of the Presbyterian church will be held on Sunday, October 29. On the following Monday evening (Thanksgiving Day) a concert and lecture will be given. Further particulars will be given later.

On Monday evening a concert was given in the school room of the Methodist church, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid. The programme was well received, especially the numbers given by Mrs. Miller of Peterborough, and Mrs. Irvine of Lindsay. Mrs. Miller's "Shoogu-Shoo," was insistently encored, to which she responded with "Needles and Pins," an old favourite. Mrs. Irvine, who is a clear expressive reader, gave two selections which were very interesting. She also sang a solo, "The Swallows." Mr. Melville Earl's piano solo received the hearty applause it merited, as did solos by Mrs. Bryson and Miss Poast. The main feature of the programme was a dialogue, "How the Story Grew," given by a number of young ladies. This was followed by a few remarks from the pastor Rev. R. Burns and God Save the King.

IT WAS STONE IN THE BLADDER

GIN PILLS PASSED IT

"Five years ago, I was taken down with what the doctors called Inflammation of the Bladder—intense pains in the back and loins, and difficulty in urinating, and the attacks, which became more frequent, amounted to unbearable agony. I became so weak that I could not walk across the floor.

My wife read in the papers about GIN PILLS and sent for a box. From the very first, I felt that GIN PILLS were doing me good. The pain was relieved at once, and the attacks were less frequent.

In six weeks, the Stone in the Bladder came away. When I recall how I suffered and how now I am healthy and able to work, I cannot express myself strongly enough when I speak of what GIN PILLS have done for me". JOHN HERMAN, Hamilton, Ont.

Mrs. T. McConnell of Omemee, spent a few days with friends in the vicinity last week.

Mr. Harry Elmhirst and Mr. William Edwards, Jr., attended Norwood Fair.

Mr. A. Keitel, who has been ill with the rheumatism, has recovered.

The Misses Tilly and Gertie Esson spent Thursday in the village.

Miss Cora Speirs spent Wednesday with her aunt, Mrs. A. Speirs.

Mr. Fred Speirs and Miss Mary Gall, of Keene, were the guests of the Misses Esson on Sunday.

RESTORE GRAY HAIR TO NATURAL COLOR

By Common Garden Sage, a Simple Remedy for Dandruff, Falling, Faded, Gray Hair.

The old idea of using sage for darkening the hair is again coming in vogue. Our grandmothers used to have dark, glossy hair at the age of seventy-five, while our mothers have white hair before they are fifty. Our grandmothers used to make a "sage tea" and apply it to their hair. The tea made their hair soft and glossy, and gradually restored the natural color.

One objection to using such a preparation was the trouble of making it, especially as it had to be made every two or three days, on account of souring quickly. This objection has been overcome, and by asking almost any first-class druggist for Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy the public can get a superior preparation of sage, with the admixture of sulphur, another valuable remedy for hair and scalp troubles. Daily use of this preparation will not only quickly restore the color of the hair, but will also stop the hair from falling out and make it grow.

This preparation is offered to the public at fifty cents a bottle, and is recommended and sold by all druggists. Special Agents, Warne Drug Co.

FORMING A CHILD'S CHARACTER

If the child is born self-willed and rebellious, tact and patience, and above all firmness, are the virtues which the parents will stand most in need of. The child must find out that you are stronger than he and that he has to bow to your will and that the better the grace with which he does it the more comfortable things will be for him.

The future outlook for the child who, when told to do something, refuses, flies into a temper, cries and altogether makes himself thoroughly objectionable, is not of the rosiest. Now is the time for you to exert your authority and to stick to it; if you give way but half an inch the child will see through you at once, he will lose his respect for you and for your word, and will never get it back.

Wait until the fit of temper is over, then explain fondly the foolishness and the uselessness of it.

A great deal of discrimination should be exercised in this matter of punishment. The first thing to discover is whether the offence was the outcome of wilful disobedience or of ill-health; a child will do many things when unwell or delicate that it would not do if it were quite well, and though the offence must not be passed over, the punishment should be light.

The child, when soothed, should be spoken to kindly and told that though he is not well that is no excuse for his naughtiness. Delicate children should, of course, be always particularly gently treated, but the parents must bear in mind that poor health is no justification for over-indulgence.

It is a great temptation to give an ailing child everything more or less for which he asks, to overlook his faults, and to make excuses for him on every possible occasion. But it is a temptation which we should strive against, for it is a sure way of ruining the child's character and of making a peevish and uncontrolled man of him, not only on those probably frequent occasions when his will is coerced, but at all times.

Teach your sons to wait upon their sisters, instilling into them from the earliest days that most winning of man's qualities—chivalry.

Do not trample upon the imaginative tendencies of your children as so many parents do, thinking that they are unnatural. If you but look round with observing eyes at the hundreds of men and women who are utterly commonplace, prosaic, and uninteresting, you will take good care that you do not add to their number and you will do all you can to foster and encourage the imaginative minds of your children.

Some of the purest happiness in the world is that one obtains through a vivid, far-reaching imagination. Let your children believe in the fairies and in Santa Claus and other charming make believes, let them read Hans Andersen and the well beloved Grimm, teach them to love flowers and birds, bring them up as near to nature as it is possible.

Do not begin to educate them too early; letters and figures are a very unimportant part of the early upbringing. What you have got to do is to turn the children into strong, healthy men and women, and this cannot be done if they are shut up in the house, confusing their poor little brains with tiresome lessons that, when weighed against the glorious gift of health, go so entirely to the wall. Rather let them live out of doors from the time they get up until bedtime, and let their first lessons be those wondrous ones to be found in the growing things of the earth.

Never try to extract obedience from children by coaxing or bribery, for it will make them cunning and deceitful; they must learn that they have to do what they are told because the person who tells them is older and wiser than they. Parents should, therefore, be careful not to give unwise commands or tyrannical ones, and they must never allow the children to argue about a given order.

The word has been spoken and the word must be obeyed.

Teach as early as possible the lesson of generosity. Be sure not to overwhelm children with praise when they do the right thing in this way, because after all they are only doing what all well bred, right minded human beings do as a matter of course.

CHEER UP!

BY ROY GILRAY.

"Have a ray of sunshine
Ev'ry day to spare;
There are souls in shadow
Always, here and there;
Sad, unloved they wander,
Having missed the way;
Won't you try to help them
With a golden ray?
—James Rowe.

The cheerful live longest in years, and afterward in our affections. A cheerful man is pre-eminently a useful man. He does not cramp his mind, nor take half-views of men and things. He knows there is much misery, but misery need not be the rule of life.

"A merry heart doeth good like medicine." Health is the condition of wisdom, and the sign is cheerfulness.

There is good philosophy in the saying, "Laugh and grow fat." If everybody knew the power of laughter as a health tonic and life-prolonger, the tinge of sadness which now clouds humanity's face would largely disappear.

The power of laughter was given us to serve a wise purpose. It is Nature's device for exercising the internal organs and giving us pleasure at the same time. Laughter begins in the lungs and diaphragm, setting the liver, stomach, and other internal organs into a quick vibration, which gives a pleasant sensation and exercise, almost equal to horseback riding. The heart beats faster, sends the blood bounding through the body, increases the respiration, and gives warmth and glow to the whole system.

Laughter brightens the eye, expands the chest, forces the poisoned air from the least-used lung cells, and tends to restore that condition we call good health. A jolly physician is often better than his pills.

"A laugh is just like sunshine,
It freshens all the day,
It tips the peak of life with light,
And drives the clouds away;
The soul grows glad that hears it,
And feels its courage strong—
A laugh is just like sunshine
For cheering folks along."

Without cheerfulness there can be no healthy action, physical, mental, or moral, for it is the normal atmosphere of our being. Thousands of people die annually from depressed spirits, disappointed hopes, thwarted ambitions, and premature exhaustion. We have not even leisure to die a natural death; we keep going at high pressure until the boiler bursts.

It is not the troubles of to-day, but those of to-morrow, next week, next year that whiten our heads, and wrinkle our brows.

Smile for a change. The world is taking your photograph. Throw to the winds your woe-begone face, your many ills, your numerous sorcheer up. Why, man alive, in a ten-minute walk you may meet a score of people worse off than you, and here you are digging your own grave, and playing pallbearer into the bargain!

Smile, even though it is through your tears, which speedily dry; and cheer up!

We should train ourselves to turn from all shadows and discouragements, taking our lesson from turned, its flowers always turn round and face the light. There is always a bright side. If there is no bright side, then polish up the dark side and look at that instead.

If you live in Grumbling Alley, where the air is bad, the house damp, the water impure, where birds never come and sing in the street, where all is gloomy and sad, decide at once to "flit." Move over into Thanksgiving Avenue, where there are plenty of houses to let. There, the air is pure, the houses good, the sun shines all day, the birds are always singing; where everybody is happy as can be.

If a word or two will render a man happy, he must be a wretch indeed who will not give it. It is like lighting another man's candle with your own, which loses none of its brilliancy by what the other gains.

Scatter your flowers as you go; you may never go this way again.

"Laugh and the world laughs with you;
Weep, and you weep alone;
For the sad old earth must borrow its mirth,
But has trouble enough of its own.

"Rejoice, and men will seek you;
Grieve, and they turn and go;
They want full measure of all your pleasure,
But they do not need yur woe."
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

Fortunately the old-time employer, who use to go through his place of business every day with a whip, so to speak, stirring everybody up, driving everybody, scolding and swearing, is rapidly disappearing. Men are finding that there is something better than the slave-driving methods. They are discovering that harmony is a great business producer, that kindness, appealing to the best instead of the worst in employees, produces the highest results.

Up-to-date business men find that the more comfortable and the happier they can make their employees the more work they will accomplish, and the better its quality. Everybody does his best when appreciated.

Sunshine in the home has a powerful influence on the happiness of the breadwinner.

A mechanic, on being questioned why he always appeared to be in a merry mood, replied: "I have one of the best wives; and, when I go to work, she always has a kind word of encouragement for me; and, when I go home, she meets me with a smile and a kiss; and then tea is sure to be ready, and she has done so many little things through the day to please me, that I cannot find it in my heart to speak an unkind word to anybody."

"How old are you Sambo?" said a gentleman to a coloured man. "How old, massa?" replied the darkey. "If you reckon by the years, sah, I'se twenty-five; but if you goes by the fun I'se 'ad, I guess I'se a hundred."

"'Tis easy enough to be pleasant,
When life flows along like a song;
But the man worth while is the man who will smile
When everything goes dead wrong;
For the test of the heart is trouble,
And it always comes with the years;
And the smile that is worth the praise of the earth
Is the smile that comes through tears."
—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

EVERETT COLBY'S EXPERIENCES IN AN ENGLISH ELECTION CAMPAIGN

Everett Colby of New Jersey political fame tells in the Outlook of his experiences in a recent English election campaign. Mr. Colby took a hand chiefly because he wanted to see how it was done, although he was hot for the Liberal side.

"The evening I arrived in London," he says, "I saw a notice to the effect that the Liberal campaign managers, called whips, were in need of volunteer automobiles to work at the polls. The law prohibits the hiring of rigs of any description to get out to vote.

"Thinking it would be a good way to get a glimpse of their party machinery I wrote a note offering the use of my car. Somewhat to my surprise I received, not a note, but a telegram in reply telling me where to go the following day. So I appeared at the appointed time and place.

"The committee room at which I reported was an empty store. The outside was decorated with Liberal colours and the windows plastered with Liberal cartoons. Inside the only furniture was a table on which were a plan of the district and a copy of the registry list.

"As I entered a vender of party ribbons, buttons and flags offered them for sale, but one of the committee instantly stepped up to me and informed me that a purchase within the headquarters might invalidate the entire election. This was my eyeopener as to the severity of the corrupt practices act.

EVERY CAR CARRIES NUMBER

"I introduced myself as an American, but they said they already knew that by the way I talked. Before sending me out they decorated my car with the party colours, a picture of the candidate and the mystic figures '181' on a huge piece of cardboard. I found that every car is numbered to prevent confusion. But on this occasion the object was 'to throw a scare' into our opponents by making them think we had 181 cars at work in their district.

"The method of getting out the vote was much the same as at home and with the exception of a rock that struck my chauffeur in the head and some mud that was thrown at us from time to time the day was uneventful.

"I think it speaks pretty well for America that, with all the campaigning I had done during the last few years, when divisions were marked and the issues of the sort that bite in, I had to go to England to witness the first hostile and overt act of violence against a candidate for office or his friends.

"The two things that most impressed me during the day were the thoroughness with which the party work was done and the absence of corruption of any form. The card index system is perfect; not an elector escapes. The committee not only knows every name on the register, but knows just what time every voter wants to be called for.

"To this end there is kept in each committee room a book, divided into compartments, a compartment for each half-hour while the polls are open, into which are placed slips made up by the canvassers before the election, giving the name and address of the voter and the hour he wants to come to the polls.

"Every party voter as he casts his ballot and walks out of the booth hands a card to one of the workers notifying headquarters that he has cast his vote, so that his name may be checked upon the register.

"The workers attached to the automobile squadron are furnished with little electric flashlights with which to find the numbers of the houses in the more poorly lighted streets. I felt quite like Sherlock Holmes, or Dick, the Old Sleuth, and was having the time of my life following the workers, when, literally speaking, I 'put my foot in it.'

BREACH OF ELECTION ETIQUETTE

"At one house we found the door open, but no one answered the bell. Seeing a court in the rear, it occurred to me to pass through and try to find some one. But before I had gone far I was dragged back with the warning that if I was seen placing my foot over the threshold without invitation from the owner it would cost the votes of every one in the house. It seems the Briton is very touchy on this point.

"The reason that the campaign work in England is more thorough than in the United States is, strange as it may seem, due not to the perfection of the law but to its defects. The original registry list is made up in a very haphazard and casual way by the Supervisor of the Poor in every parish without apparently any serious attempt at accuracy. Then it is left to the party workers to complete.

"This is done before a Revisory Barrister, who holds court once a year for the purpose of hearing claims and objections. At these hearings there are many bitter political quarrels. In 1898 the Revision Court, sitting in Liverpool, heard 13,000 claims and objections, out of a total electorate of 84,000. The trick of padding the registry is known outside of the United States.

"Now this responsibility for correcting and completing the registration, falling entirely as it does on the candidate and the party workers, gives them a better knowledge of conditions than when the registry is prepared or supposed to be prepared by election officers.

"Another reason for this thoroughness is that the corrupt practices act is so severe and so rigidly enforced and so limits the number of workers who may receive pay at an election that it forces the friends of the candidate into the field as volunteer canvassers.

"This results too, in one of the most attractive features of the British campaign, the work done by the women, who are extraordinary efficient; almost all the relatives of the candidate taking a conspicuous part and the candidate's wife always being called upon at a meeting to say a few words. I should think that the volunteer workers at the polls in England outnumbers ours 8 to 1.

"I believe that the corrupt practices act and the vigour with which it is enforced constitute the most potent factor in the improved conduct of elections. Of course, like all statutes that go to the extreme, many of its provisions, such as those dealing with treating and undue influence, become nugatory and ridiculous; but the moral effect has been exceedingly beneficial. Not only does it strictly limit the amount a candidate may spend, but it makes it dangerous for the candidate if other people spend money in his behalf, even though it be without his knowledge.

WORKERS CANNOT VOTE

"It provides the number of workers who may receive pay for their work, and disqualifies them from voting. The law also compels the candidate and his manager or agent, as he is called, to file a declaration under oath giving an account of all disbursements with vouchers and a statement of every dollar received and the name of the person who got it.

"No ballots are distributed outside of the polling booth; every voter has registration number, and a record of his vote is kept from one to two years. This last provision prevents many forms of fraud from being perpetrated, but is in theory, if not in fact, an infringement upon the secrecy of the ballot, and I doubt if it would be received with favour at home.

"When the voter enters the voting place he receives a ballot which is detached from a stub, both the stub and the ballot bearing the same number. The voter then retires to a booth and marks his ballot as he sees fit and comes out and drops it in the box, while at the same time the election officer marks the voter's registration number on the stub.

"When the polls are closed the ballots are counted in the presence of the candidate or his agent and the result is publicly announced. Then the registry list, the ballot box and the book of stubs are sealed up and sent to the clerk of the crown, who keeps them subject to the order of the courts. By this method the courts for a period of two or three years can trace every ballot back to the person who casts it.

"On the day before the election, in one of the districts I was visiting, a Liberal worker came to the candidate and reported that a neighbouring borough was in good shape and loyal but something needed to be done to stir it up. The worker wanted sufficient money to hire a coach and four which he could decorate and drive about the borough to call the attention of the voters to the fact that they must be up and doing. But the candidate said he had already reached his legal limit of expenditure and therefore could do no more.

UNLAWFUL TO HIRE COACH

"I suggested that I might hire the coach, but that too was found to be illegal, as I had said a few words at one of the candidate's meetings, thereby becoming his agent, and any expenditures of mine would have to be included in the candidate's statement. So the project of the coach had to be abandoned.

"I attended an interesting meeting in London, at which John Burns spoke. I was surprised, on reaching the hall, to see a squad of police drawn up before the door, the sidewalk for half a block each side of the entrance cleared and a crowd of people herded like sheep on the opposite side of the street.

"A policeman opened the door of my cab and led me up to one of the three doors, all of which were closed, locked and apparently bolted. He then knocked. There was a scuffle within, a small window cut in the door was opened and a faint and mysterious voice inquired what was wanted. The policeman said that a gentleman wanted to get in.

"'Who is he?'

"'I don't know.'

"'Then to me, 'Who are you?'

"'My name is Colby.'

"'Are you alone?'

"'I am.'

"'Wait a minute.'

"The window was closed and I heard the chap within run off to consult the officials. Then I turned to the officer and inquired what all this nonsense was about, and he replied, with the solemn and subdued air with which they all discuss the German invasion, 'Hist! Women!'

"And sure enough, to scare a few women they had a force around the building almost as large, with the possible exception of a corps of engineers and the Signal Service, as was called out a few weeks later to capture two men asleep in a house in Houndsditch.

"Soon after the Burns meeting I was invited to visit a friend who was a candidate for parliament. The house was full of Liberal politicians, big and little. I arrived on Sunday. a big meeting was scheduled for Monday evening and the election was to be on Tuesday. Monday afternoon Churchill went out to play golf; the other men in the party scattered, but the women, according to a good old English custom which properly emphasizes the superiority of our sex, stuck to the work of canvassing until it was dark and time to return for dinner, which, by the way, was a most informal affair.

"There were five meetings scheduled for the evening, so that various squads left the table from time to time, were hustled into motors and sent off to the different points to keep the pot boiling until the candidate arrived. Then, too, the ladies straggled in from their canvassing after dinner had begun, tired but full of enthusiasm and with interesting tales of conquest in arguments with their neighbours. Churchill was quite unmoved by all the excitement, and refused to be hurried, and finally, when his friends were obliged to drag him from the dinner room, he quietly took his cup from the table and finished his coffee at the door.

CHURCHILL'S FIGURE

"There is no doubt about it; he is an exceedingly interesting piece of work, stoop-shouldered and only of medium height, without a suggestion of colour in his face, and with his light hair brushed straight back from his forehead until it meets the hair on the back of his head coming the other way, which then flares out like fans over and behind his ears; and, with a nose that looks as though it might turn up at any moment, but doesn't, the impression one receives is not that of great beauty, or of one physically very strong.

Thousands Now Use This 'Low-Cost Cough Syrup

A Family Supply for 50c, Saving You $2—The Quickest, Best Thing You Ever Used, or Money Refunded.

The prompt and positive results given by this inexpensive cough medicine have caused it to be used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy. It gives instant relief and will usually wipe out the most obstinate, deep-seated cough inside of 24 hours. It quickly succeeds, even in whooping cough and croup.

A 50-cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most pleasant and effective cough remedy that money could buy, at a saving of $2. Easily prepared in five minutes—full directions in package.

Children take Pinex Cough Syrup willingly, because it tastes good. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both excellent features. Splendid for hoarseness, throat tickle, bronchitis, etc., and a prompt, successful remedy for incipient lung trouble.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of imported Norway White Pine extract and is rich in guaiacol and other natural healing pine elements. Simply mix it with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is in wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will gladly get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

JOHN FRANKLIN BAKER

The quaint, stately village of Trappe, Md., has no Broadway and no "Great White Ways" of glint and glass, but it has its John Franklin Baker, and to-day the quiet, easy-going folk of Trappe, Md., wouldn't trade J. F. Baker for ninety-nine wagonloads of Broadway's bright lights and seventy-seven 'Pullman carfuls of imported, genuine "Gay White Way hilarity." Last Tuesday J. F. Baker waded into one of the celebrated Mathewson's celebrated fadeaway pills and murdered it for as celebrated a home run as will ever go on record.

Last Monday J. F. Baker landed upon a similar pill propelled by the mighty Marquard, who totals $11,000 in cold Broadway tin, and shot the blighted sphere into the turbulent bleachers for a round trip. Each time J. F. Baker unburdened himself of his long-distance swat he plucked the game out of the fire and landed it high, dry and blistered for the world's champion Athletics.

And, further, J. F. Baker is the identical fellow whose life's blood has been quoted at par by the thirsty Giants and the same doomed Quaker that McGraw's unbridled tribe paid the flattering compliment of threatening with assassination, slaughter, bifurcation and other bodily ills. Notwithstanding J. F. Baker twice turned the harpoon in the rankling bosoms of the Giants, and, as has been emphatically stated, won two battles for the Athletics which would have gone to the National Leaguers but for his four-bag wallops.

SLUGGER BEING LIONIZED

If J. F. Baker is not as genuine, haloed and blown in the box score a hero as any mortal ever dared, be, the quiet, easy-going folk of Trappe, Md., have another guess coming. In Philadelphia, the City of Brotherly Love, J. F. Baker has come in for all the brotherly, sisterly and every civilized kind of love the million Quakers could muster on such short action.

Quakertown is stark looney on the omnipotent subject of J. F. Baker. Quakerites are loco on the magic contortions of J. F. Baker's bat. In the two days that the gallant third sacker has fared forth to the plate to face two of the bravest twirlers in baseball and delivered the goods each time in a manner that brought even the rabidest of the Gothamites to their feet in admiration, J. F. Baker has cinched all records for sudden heroism. Briefly, lucidly and unprejudicedly, if the Athletics are again the world's champions when the present series is dead, it will be J. F. Baker who made them thus.

Baker's advent is not that of some unknown bush leaguer who leaps comet-like into the public eye and clogs it up for six feverish ticks of the baseball clock. For two years the Philadelphian has been cutting his way through the rank and file and fiddlesticks of the American Leaguers. In 1909 Baker was hitched up with the Philadelphia machine and went through the year at a steady-eyed gait, batting .307 and fielding .920.

MAIN ATHLETIC COG

Although the figures that lay bare J. F. Baker's performances during the 1910 season are considerably under those of 1909, the third baseman must have been accumulating skill in wholesale lots. In 1910 he batted 283. This year, however, Baker was one of the cogs that moved the Athletics to the top of the American League. He hit the pill regularly with an average of .334, and contributed fourteen home runs to his record before the season closed.

His reputation for pinch hitting and all-around rallying at times when things were going rough for his team and clouting the ball for safeties when safeties meant runs inspired the Giants with divers ruminations, one of which came out in Tuesday's game.

The particular instance was the behaviour of Snodgrass when he airily lit, feet foremost, into J. F. Baker's unsuspecting uniform, ripping it to shreds and entirely ruining the tailoring of the same. Fortunately, J. F. Baker escaped intact, and will be able to resume his action against the New Yorkers with a normal pulse and a most intelligent hickory stick to-morrow.

INDIGESTION GOES IN FIVE MINUTES

Heartburn, Dyspepsia, Gas and Other Stomach Misery Vanishes

If what you just ate is souring on your stomach or lies like a lump of lead, refusing to digest, or you belch Gas and Eructate sour, undigested food, or have a feeling of Dizziness, Heartburn, Fullness, Nausea, Bad taste in mouth and stomach headache—this is Indigestion.

A full case of Pape's Diapepsin costs only 50 cents and will thoroughly cure your out-of-order stomach, and leave sufficient about the house in case some one else in the family may suffer from stomach trouble or Indigestion.

Ask your pharmacist to show you the formula plainly written on these 50-cent cases, then you will understand why Dyspeptic trouble of all kinds must go, and why Diapepsin always relieves sour, out-of-order stomachs or Indigestion in five minutes. Diapepsin is harmless and tastes like candy, though each dose contains power sufficient to digest and prepare for assimilation into the blood all the food you eat; besides, it makes you go to the table with a healthy appetite; but, what will please you most, is that you will feel that your stomach and intestines are clean and fresh, and you will not need to resort to laxatives or liver pills for Biliousness or Constipation.

This city will have many Diapepsin cranks, as some people will call them. But you will be cranky about this splendid stomach preparation, too, if you ever get a little for Indigestion or Gastritis or any other Stomach misery.

Get some Pape's Diapepsin now, this minute, and forever rid yourself of Stomach Trouble and Indigestion.

THE FIRST CASE

LONDON, OCT. 21.—In the Court of Criminal Appeal, before the Lord Chief Justice and Justices Darling and Hamilton, the first case of a death sentence being quashed was recorded. Justice Darling expressed regret, without giving the opinion of the court on the question of guilt, that there existed no means of ordering a retrial.

Charles Ellsom, a young man convicted of the murder of Rose Rendler, in Clerkenwell, by strangling her, appealed against his conviction, and succeeded, being released from custody.

Comyns Carr, for the prisoner, contended that there were serious inconsistencies between the two statements made by a witness named Fletcher, who had said that the prisoner confessed his guilt to him. Counsel said that he had no opportunity of cross-examining Fletcher on the difference between the two statements, and that the difference was not taken into account by the Judge in summing up.

Mr. Bodkin, who appeared for the Crown, said a second or subsequent statement made by any one always amplified a first statement, and there was ample evidence to go to the jury, apart from Fletcher's statement.

Justice Darling, giving the decision of the court, said that this case, besides being one of great gravity, because it was a capital case, was of exceptioned importance in regard to that court because it was the first capital case in which the court had felt it necessary to set aside a conviction. They thought it necessary to say they did not in this case express the slightest opinion as to whether really the appellant was guilty or not guilty.

CANNOT RAISE RATES.

Publishers Win Fight Against the Express Company.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—The express companies were foiled yesterday in their attempt to secure the permission of the Dominion Railway Commissioners to cancel section D. of their rate tariff the section fixing the charges on books, calendars, posters, and similar printed matter.

The application was opposed by the Toronto, Winnipeg and Montreal Boards of Trade, the Canadian Manufacturers' Association, and the Canadian Bill Posters' Association, as well as by individual manufacturers. J. E. Walsh represented them.

The protest was made that the rates of section D had permitted the booksellers to build up a big business in books, and that the cancellation of this section would work a great injury.

For the commissioners, Justice Mabee turned down the express carriers' application. "The express companies argue that section D is discriminatory, and urge that the shippers in classes covered by section D are favored in the matter of rates," he said. "The answer to that is that the post-office department puts in force special rates on certain classes of commodities, and it is optional for the express companies to meet those rates. They are not forced to reduce their rates, they are responsible for the result. The discrimination is not undue; it is caused by the rates of the postal department."

MAKE IT A CRIME.

Toronto Charity Workers Would Punish Wife Deserters.

Toronto, Oct. 24.—The Associated Charities decided at their meeting, held in the City Hall yesterday afternoon, to take steps to have a law passed making it a criminal offence for a man to desert his wife and leave her in want. The suggested enactment is substantially as follows: Any husband who shall without just cause desert or refuse to provide for the support of his wife or children shall be guilty of an indictable offence and liable to a fine not exceeding $1,000 or a term of imprisonment not exceeding two years with hard labor, the earnings from such labor to go to the support of his wife. The Associated Charities will ask the mayor and the Board of Control to support the measure, and the local members of the Dominion House to introduce the measure at Ottawa.

At present it is not an indictable offence for a man to desert his wife. About the only protection a woman is afforded is an order of protection, which can be granted if it is shown that she is in danger of maltreatment.

The association thought also that charitable organizations should be empowered to lay information against a husband in case the wife refused.

Cannot Fix Rates.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—The board of conciliation in the dispute between the Grand Trunk Railway Co. and its machinists have come to the conclusion that owing to the G. T. R.'s system of payment it is not possible for them to lay down any schedule of minimum rate.

"The majority of the board strongly recommend that the master mechanics take up with their foreman the cases where lower rates of wages obtain, and make advances in pay according to the merit and qualification of the individual."

May Abolish Labor Gazette.

Ottawa, Oct. 24.—The departmental reorganization which is coming may cause among other things the disappearance of The Labor Gazette. This, a monthly publication of department of labor, is looked upon as useless in its present form, either as an statistical compilation or as an unbiased record of labor information. It costs $50,000 a year under the new regime, and it will cease publication or will be transferred into usefulness.

Pure Food Crusade In New York.

New York, Oct. 24.—The crusade against impure food continues with zeal in New York. Two men were sent to jail, one for thirty days and one for twenty days, and a large number of other persons were given fines ranging from $40 to $100, in the trial yesterday of cases charging violations of the pure food law. Butchers, fish dealers, milk purveyors, candy stand keepers and restaurant proprietors formed a majority of the defendants.

Steamer Strikes Shoal.

Halifax, N.S., Oct. 24.—The Norwegian steamship Halovdan, Capt. Jeruldsen, struck on a shoal three miles west of Fourchu Head, C.B., at 2.30 o'clock yesterday morning. The ship was from southern ports for Montreal with a cargo of nitrate, her cargo consisting of about 6,000 tons of this material. The steamer is broken in two, only part of the funnel above water, and she will be a total loss. The crew landed safely.

Earl of Onslow Dead.

London, Oct. 24.—The Earl of Onslow died yesterday.

William Hillier Onslow, fourth Earl of Onslow, had been chairman of committees and Deputy Speaker in the House of Lords since 1895. He was a Conservative. An ancestor, Sir Richard Onslow, was a Parliamentarian; he urged Cromwell to assume the kingship, but afterwards assisted the Restoration.

The fourth Earl of Onslow was born in 1853. He was Under-Secretary for the Colonies in 1887-88; Parliamentary Secretary to the Board of Trade, 1888; Governor and commander-in-chief of New Zealand 1889-92; President of the Board of Agriculture 1903-05; in Lord Salisbury's and Mr. Balfour's Ministries.

Fish and Brain.

The saying that fish is the best brain food comes of an old long tongue windbag years ago saying: "Thought is impossible without phosphorous." So a Swiss chemist, knowing that fish contained phosphorous, put two and two together, and brought forth a saying that will never die.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 23.—Wheat prices today felt the pressure of sales by large owners and for the first time in nearly a week suffered a material setback. The close was at a decline of 3-8c and 1-2c to 3-4c net. The end left corn 1 1-8c to 1 5-8c lower; oats down 1-8c to 3-4c and hog products less costly by a nickel to a dime.

The Liverpool market closed to-day unchanged to ½d lower than Saturday on wheat and ½d lower on corn. At Antwerp wheat closed ½c lower, at Berlin ½c lower, at Paris ½c higher, and at Budapest ½c higher.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—The foreign demand for Manitoba spring wheat continues fairly good, and, as bids for No. 2 and No. 3 northern for prompt shipment were 2d higher than Saturday, sales of several loads were made, and some business was done in sample and feed wheat.

The local demand for oats is fair at firm prices. Malting barley is in demand at 51.02½ per bushel, ex-store, but the offerings are small. Exporters are bidding 56c to 57c for buckwheat.

The European demand for spring wheat flour is fairly good, and sales of third grades were made to Liverpool at 27s 6d, with 27s bid for more and refused. Winter Wheat, 90 per cents., were sold to Leith at 24s 9d and Glasgow bid 24s 6d. Local trade is fairly active and firm. Sales of bran for export account were made at $22.50 per ton, Montreal freights.

Cheese is quieter. The exports for the week being only 56,071 boxes, against 63,342 a year ago. Butter is firm. Exports for week, 401 packages, against 236 last year. Eggs firm under a good demand. Dressed hogs are 25c lower.

New York Dairy Market.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Butter—Firm; receipts, 5900; creameries, 28c to 32c; state dairy, 27c to 30c; process, 26½c to 25c; factory, current make, 25½c to 26½c.

Cheese—Steady; receipts, 2822; state, whole milk, 13½c to 14½c; state dairies, 14½c to 14¾c.

Eggs—Irregular; receipts, 479; fresh to extras, 34c to 35c; refrigerator, 23c to 31c; state, Pennsylvania and nearby, henery, 32c to 35c; do., gathered, brown and mixed, 30c to 32c; western gathered, whites, 32c to 36c.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Union Stock Yards.

TORONTO, Oct. 23.—Receipts of live stock at the Union Stock Yards were 119 cars—2218 cattle, 811 hogs, 1079 sheep and lambs and 28 calves.

Exporters.

The S. & S. Company bought 71 export steers, 1219 lbs. each, at $6.75 to $6.

Butchers.

Prime picked lots of butchers sold at $6.90 to $6; loads of good, $6.60 to $6.75; medium, $6.15 to $6.45; common, $4 to $5.75; bulls, $3.60 to $5; cows, $3 to $5.25; canners, $2.50 to $2.

Stockers and Feeders.

Distillery steers, 900 to 1050 lbs. each, $4.60 to $5; steers, 800 to 900 lbs. each, $4.25 to $4.50; stockers, 500 to 700 lbs., at $3.50 to $4.

Milkers and Springers.

A moderate supply of good to choice milkers sold at from $60 to $77 each. Medium cows are worth from $40 to $50 each.

Veal Calves.

About 30 calves sold at from $4 to $7.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

Ten hundred and seventy-nine sheep and lambs sold as follows: Sheep, ewes, $3.50 to $4; rams, $3 per cwt., and lambs $5 to $5.65 per cwt., the bulk going at $5.60.

Hogs.

W. J. Johnston, Gunns (Limited) reported $6.10, fed and watered at the market, and $5.75 to drovers for hogs f.o.b. cars.

Montreal Live Stock.

MONTREAL, Oct. 23.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts of live stock for the week ending Oct. 21 were 2340 cattle, 2576 sheep and lambs, 2200 hogs and 650 calves. The offerings on the market this morning amounted to 1250 cattle, 2200 sheep and lambs, 1500 hogs and 250 calves.

There was no further change in the condition of the market for cattle since last Wednesday, prices being about steady as the decline. The supply was large, which consisted principally of rough stock from the northwest; consequently good to choice steers were not plentiful, for which the demand was fairly good from local and Quebec buyers. The trade in common stock was rather slow, as the offerings of such were in excess of the requirements.

A few picked extra choice steers, which would have brought $6.10 per 100 lbs. two weeks ago, sold at $5.90 to $6, and odd loads of northwest ranch steers and holsters, weighing on an average 1200 lbs. each, brought $5.60, and rough, small cattle, $4 to $4.25.

In small lots, choice steers sold at $5.60 to $5.75; good at $5.30 to $5.60; fairly good at $5 to $5.25; fair at $4.85 to $4.75, and common at $4 to $4.25 per 100 lbs. There were a number of cows on the market, which brought from $3 to $4. The demand for canning stock was fair, of which the supply was fairly large, and sales of bulls were made at $3.50 to $3.85, and cows at $1.50 to $3 per 100 lbs. A few good bulls, suitable for the butcher trade, sold at $4.75 to $4.90.

Owing to the more liberal supplies of hogs, a weaker feeling developed in the market, and prices scored a further decline of 25c to 50c per 100 pounds since last Wednesday. At this reduction the demand from packers was good, and a fairly active trade was done, with sales of selected lots at $6 to $6.20 per 100 lbs., weighed off cars.

Supplies of sheep were larger, and in excess of the requirements of the trade, consequently the tone of the market was weaker, and prices declined 25c per 100 pounds, with sales at $3.25 to $3.50. There was no change in lambs, for which the demand was good at $5 to $5.90 per 100 pounds.

A few grass-fed calves sold at 3c to 4½c per pound, and the others at from $4 to $10 each, as to size and quality.

East Buffalo Cattle Market.

EAST BUFFALO, Oct. 23.—Cattle—Receipts, 6000 head; market 25c to 40c lower; prime steers, $7.25 to $7.40; butcher grades, $6.75 to $6.75; cows, $3.25 to $4.75.

Calves—Receipts 1400 head; market active; cull to choice, $5.50 to $8.25.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 10,000 head; market lambs active and steady, sheep slow; choice lambs, $6.25 to $6.35; cull to fair, $4.75 to $6; yearlings, $4 to $4.50, sheep, $2 to $3.65.

BOSTON'S EARTHQUAKES.

They Have Shaken Up the City Seventeen Times Since 1638.

Boston is generally regarded as outside the earthquake zone and therefore immune from shocks of this kind. People living in San Francisco believed the same of their city prior to the great quake of 1906, with as little reason.

As a matter of fact, Boston has been more or less seriously shaken by seismic disturbances no less than seventeen times since 1638, when the pilgrim colony, which had eighteen years before been established at Plymouth, was alarmed by an earthquake with vibrations that lasted twenty days.

The last time Boston had a shock was Sunday, March 20, 1904, when earth tremors radiating from St. John, N. B., to Hartford, Conn., jarred the city in a fashion that alarmed the residents.

Of the first earthquake, Bradford's history declares, it was "greate and fearful," and continuing says:

"It was in this place heard before it was felte. It came with a rumbling noyse or low murmure like unto remeate thunder. As ye noyse approached neere the earth began to shake. It was observed ye seamen for divers years together after this earthquake were not so hot and seasonable for the ripening of corn as formerly."

Of the earthquakes recorded, many were of great severity. Some damaged houses and churches, ripped up fences, closed old springs and opened new ones. At times the earthquakes came with such frequency as to make it appear the early settlers of this region suffered an epidemic of them.

The earthquake that destroyed Lisbon in November, 1755, was felt here, curiously enough. As if this were not enough three other shocks occurred the same week, all of great severity.—Boston Journal.

BASEBALL COACHING.

The Way Manager Jennings of the Tigers Works His Signals.

Baseball coaching in the big leagues is an exact science. It is so studied, so guarded, that it is almost impossible to fathom. In "Watch His Arm," by Hugh Fullerton, in the American Magazine, Hughie Jennings tells how he works his signals.

"I change almost every day," says Jennings. "I change every time I suspect there is danger of the meanings being read. I am a believer in as few signals as possible and of giving them when they count, and I find that a lot of antics are effective in covering up the signals. The opposing players get tired of trying to see me give a signal, and usually if I have any important order to give I can yell it at the top of my voice and no one would notice. I like to rely upon the judgment of the men themselves, provided I can find men who have judgment. But there are some who must be signaled. Suppose a batter is up with one ball and one strike called and I discover what ball is to be pitched and desire to inform the hitter. I have been yelling and kicking and playing clown. I yell 'E-yah!' but in a different tone from that I used before. The batter knows I want him to look for a signal. I may kick my foot in the air three times, meaning 'Let the next one go,' or pull four blades of grass, meaning 'Hit the next one.'"

Air Bubble Power.

Inventor Schroeder, an Australian, has devised a system of propelling boats by air bubbles. His idea is to force air through a system of holes in the bottom of the vessel, which are so arranged that there is practically an air cushion between the bottom and the water. Only small engine power is required, as the inventor does not rely on the forcible expulsion of air for his motive power, but on the lifting power of the air bubbles themselves. By shutting off the air from some of the holes near the stern the bow can be made to rise so that the ship goes astern. The boats are expected to be able to travel at unheard of speeds and are unsinkable. The invention has already been tested by the admiralty experts.

Trimmed the Princes.

King George is particular regarding the training of his sons. Two of the younger boys not long ago were riding near his majesty when the cavalcade passed men who were working on the road. The men removed their hats, and the king at once doffed his own hat. His majesty noticed that the boys in the enthusiasm of their gallop had not followed his example. He immediately called a halt, took the princes back to the workmen and ordered them to remove their hats.

"I shall never ask him for his advice again."

"What's the matter?"

"He never thinks what I have made up my mind to do is right."—Detroit Free Press.

FOUR THOUSAND PEOPLE WERE KILLED IN BOMBARDMENT OF FORT BY ITALIAN ARMY

British Consul Seriously Wounded and Several British Subjects Were Killed During Fight.

GREAT LOSS OF LIFE

Special Wire to the Examiner.

MALTA, OCT. 24.— Couriers and mail matter which have evaded the strict Italian censorship and arrived here, indicate the bombardment of Benghazi by Rear Admiral Aubrey on the nineteenth, was a much more serious affair than given out. It seems that the Turkish garrison refused to surrender and the Italian fleet turned their guns on the town with disastrous effect, killing four thousand people, including a number of British subjects who had taken refuge in the British consulate, which was blown to pieces by shells from the Italian guns. Among the seriously injured was John Francis Jones, British Consul. When the Italian marines attempted to land they were repulsed with great loss. After another bombardment the landing was accomplished and the Italian flag now flies.

THIS LADY GIVES A SPLENDID REASON

WHY SHE WOULD NOT BE WITHOUT DODD'S KIDNEY PILLS IN THE HOUSE.

They helped her husband and cured her own Rheumatism, Dropsy and Gravel of thirteen years' standing.

Cando, Sask., Oct. 23. —(Special).— "I would not be without Dodd's Kidney Pills in the house," exclaims Mrs. Jno. C. MacKenzie, of this place. And those who have heard Mrs. MacKenzie's story do not wonder that she is so emphatic.

"I was a victim for about twelve or thirteen years of Bladder and Kidney trouble," Mrs. McKenzie says. "It grew into Rheumatism, Dropsy and Gravel. Doctors attended me but they did not do me any good.

"My husband had used Dodd's Kidney Pills with good results so I decided to give them a trial. Before I had finished the first box I was greatly benefitted."

Dodd's Kidney Pills benefit and cure permanently all who suffer from any form of Kidney Disease. They cure the Kidneys and cured Kidneys strain the poison that causes the disease out of the blood. That's why Dodd's Kidney Pills never fail to cure Rheumatism, Dropsy and Gravel.

CLAIMS $10,000

Widow of Late Hugh Darke is Claiming That Amount From the Canadian General Electric Company.

CASES AT ASSIZES

All the cases for the Fall Assizes of the High Court of Justice have been filed. There are three civil cases and one criminal case, which is that of the Crown vs. Sam Newell.

The civil cases are as follows:

Grace Hillier vs. Canadian Chicle Co. Bennet and Goodwill will represent the plaintiff, while O'Connell and Gordon will act in the interests of the Chicle Co.. The claim is for $1500 under the Workingmen's Compensation for Injuries Act, and $3,000 as liable under the common law. The claim also is that the said Grace Hillier was requested to leave her ordinary employment of packing gum and feed a roller, where her gloved hand caught, with the result that a finger was amputated and the hand permanently injured.

The 2nd case is the Bank of Ottawa vs. Thos. W. McDonough and Miss McDonough. The claim is, that on the 3rd of January the defendants made a joint and promissory note, in which each promised to pay the bank $2,500 on demand. Up to March 12th, 1910, they paid claimants $1,046.50, but since then paid nothing. The plaintiffs therefore claim the sum of $1282.62, the balance of note and interest. Also cost of action.

The third case is that of Catherine Darke, widow of late Hugh Darke, vs. the Canadian General Electric Co. O'Connell and Gordon are appearing for the plaintiff, while Hall, Hayes & Hall are appearing for the defence. The claim is for $10,000 damages and the cost of the action. The action being brought under the 'Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act,' and also 'Ontario Factories Act.' Plaintiff charges that Hugh Darke came to his death through negligence of the defendants and through a negligent system in carrying on work in their factory.

NEW YORK SCORED TWICE IN FIRST ATHLETICS MAKE THREE IN THE FOURTH

Both Teams Hitting Ball Harder Than in Any Previous Battles---New York Scored on Devore's Single, Doyle's Triple and Snodgrass' Sacrifice Fly---Mathewson Fanned Lord, Oldring and Baker in the Athletics' First Innings.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., OCT. 24. — There was great joy among baseball enthusiasts, and railway officials got busy immediately with special trains from all directions, when it was authoritatively announced this morning that while Shibe Park diamond was rather sodden from the recent rains, there would be a game this afternoon. There is a brisk wind from the north-west, making it more rugby than baseball weather. The probable line-up is as follows:

New York, N.Y. — Devore, left; Doyle, second; Snodgrass, centre; Murray, right ;Merkle, first; Herzog, third; Fletcher, short-stop; Meyers, catcher; Mathewson, pitcher.

Philadelphia—Lord, left; Oldring, centre; Collins, second; Baker, third; Murphy, right; Davis, first; Barry, shortstop; Thomas, catcher; Bender, pitcher.

The betting odds are decidedly in favour of the Athletics for to-day's game. Of course, they are to be discounted somewhat by the fact of the Athletics being the home team. Muggsy McGraw's Giants have a "Never die" inspiration this morning that indicated the Athletics will have no walk-over.

First Innings.

Giants — Devore singled. Doyle tripled to centre, scoring Devore; Doyle came home on Snodgrass' fly to Lord. Merkle fanned.—Two Athletics—Lord fanned, so did Collins; Oldring singled to centre; Baker came up, whereupon Mathewson and Meyers held a conference. He fanned —No runs.

Second Innings.

Giants— Herzog lifted to Oldring. Fletcher singled over Barry. Baker, Bender and Thomas let Meyer's fly drop between them. Fletcher out at second ,Thomas to Collins. Mathewson grounded out, Bender to first. No runs.

Athletics — Murphy hit over right fence for two bases. He was safe at third on Mathewson's wild pitch to second in an attempt to catch him off the bag. He was run down by Meyers. Barry made an infield single. Thomas fouled out. No runs.

Third Innings.

Giants— Devore lifted to Oldring; Doyle flew to Baker. Snodgrass bounded out via Barry. No runs.

Athletics— Bender out Fletcher to Merkle. Lord singled to right and was forced at second, Fletcher to Doyle, on Oldring's grounder. Collins fanned. No runs.

Fourth Innings.

Giants— Murray popped to Baker. Merkle fanned. Herzog out to Davis. No runs.

Athletics—Baker doubled to centre, and scored on Murphy's double to left. Murphy scored on Davis' double. Davis reached third on Barry's slam to Herzog. Barry out at first. Davis came home on Thomas' fly to Murray. Bender out on a sensational pickup and throw by Fletcher. Three runs.

Marquard and Ames are warming up.

Fifth Innings.

Giants—Baker made great pickup and throw off Fletcher's grounder. Meyers doubled to right. Meyers out at third after a short passed ball. Mathewson walked. Devore popped to Lord. No runs.

Athletics—Lord was easy, Merkle to Mathewson. Herzog made a pretty stop of Oldring's hard grounder. Collins singled to right. Baker doubled scoring Collins, going to third on the throw. One run.

Sixth Innings.

Giants— Doyle walked. Snodgrass called out on strikes. Doyle was doubled up at first on Murray's fouled fly to Baker. A stupid play and bad coaching. No runs.

Athletics — Herzog made a nice play of Davis' grounder. Barry safe when Snodgrass misjudged his fly. Barry went to third on Thomas' hit to Fletcher. Herzog threw out Bender. No runs.

Seventh Innings.

Giants—Merkle fanned for the fourth time. Herzog lifted to Oldring. Fletcher singled to centre. Chief Meyers easy, Collins to Davis. No runs.

Athletics. —Lord was safe when Fletcher fumbled his grounder. Oldring bunted and was out beautifully, Merkle to Doyle. Collins bunted out, Merkle unassisted. Baker was passed. Murphy grounded out to Merkle.

Eighth Innings.

Giants—Becker batting for Mathewson, was easy, Collins to Davis. Devore singled to left. Doyle forced Devore at second, on a hit to Collins. Snodgrass was safe on Baker's fumble. Murray fouled to Thomas. —No runs.

Athletics—Wiltse went into the box for the Giants. He fanned Davis. Barry doubled to right and went to third on Fletcher's muff of Murray's return on Thomas' hit to Herzog; Bary was run down betwen third and home by Herzog. Thomas went to second on the play. Bender was easy, Merkle unassisted.—No runs.

Ninth Innings.

Giants— Merkle doubled to right. Herzog grounded out, Baker to Davis. Merkle taking third. Fletcher lifted to Collins. Meyers out via Collins and Davis and the game was over.

IT IS CLAIMED CYANIDE POISON PURCHASED BY CLERGYMAN WAS FOUND INTACT IN ROOM

BOSTON, MASS., OCT. 23.—That some one else intimate with Avis Linnell and not Rev. Clarence V. Richeson, gave the girl the drug that killed her, will be one of the chief points for the defence when the Cambridge pastor is placed on trial, was vouched for to-day by one of the closest personal friends of Moses Grant Edmands, father of Richeson's fiancee.

According to this same friend, the Edmands family will also attempt to set up an alibi for Richeson, and it is declared Miss Edmands herself is ready to take the stand and swear that the pastor was with her all day on the Saturday Miss Linnell was given the poison.

In addition, it is declared, Edmands will produce in court a bottle of cyanide of potassium, said to have been found in Richeson's room. This will be submitted, it is said, to Druggist Wm. Hahn, and he will be asked if it does not contain the exact amount of cyanide he gave Richeson when the latter asked for poison "to kill a dog."

Richeson, composed and calm as ever, slept well last night in the Charles street jail. He awakened early and called for the morning papers. He read every line printed about the Linnell case, but made absolutely no comment.

INSISTS ON PRISON FARE

Richeson insists on living as the other prisoners in jail live. He was told he might have his food sent in to him, but declared he was content to eat the prison fare.

Richeson talks freely with the jailors on all matters except the Linnell murder On this subject he is mum He persistently refuses to see reporters or police officials.

Abandoning their efforts to secure a statement from Richeson, the police to-day began a search of every hotel and restaurant in Boston, in an effort to discover where Richeson and Miss Linnell spent their time together.

The statement, coming from one of the closest friends of Moses Grant Edmands, that the defence will seek to lay Miss Linnell's death at the door of a former suitor, came as a distinct surprise. Up to date there had never been mentioned any man other than Dr. Richeson in whom Miss Linnell had shown even a passing interest The Edmands family, it is declared, claims to be in possession of information that this other man was responsible for Miss Linnell's condition, and that he either gave her the drug to kill her, or that she took it with suicidal intent when she learned that her disgrace soon must become public.

SEARCHED HIS ROOMS

To bear out this contention, the defence, in the hands of Attorney Dunbar, a son of James R. Dunbar, Edmands' personal attorney, is said to have in its possession a bottle of cyanide of potassium, found in Richeson's rooms.

It is not denied that Richeson's rooms were searched by private detectives before the police searched them last Friday. These private detectives, Dunbar admits, were in his employ, and he has assumed full responsibility for their acts. They took away from Richeson's rooms a suit case full of stuff. It is said they found the bottle of drug said to have been sold to Richeson by Hahn. This bottle, the defence claims, contains exactly the amount of cyanide that Richeson secured from Hahn. It will be set up that Richeson really did want to kill a dog, but that he never used any of the poison, and that it was not from this supply that Miss Linnell secured the drug that killed her.

DINED WITH THE DEAD GIRL

Deputy Superintendent Watts said definitely to-day that he has information of a direct character that Mr Richeson dined with Miss Linnell on the afternoon of the day on which the girl took the fatal dose. This information, Deputy Watts said, came from a young woman who is not a member of the Young Women's Christian Association household. She met Miss Linnell on the street late Saturday afternoon.

"Miss Linnell told me," said Deputy Watt's informant. "that she had just dined with Richeson, and that she was going home, as she was suffering from a headache."

The cafe in which the couple had dined is also known to the police, and the employes there are said to have verified the statement of the young woman as to visits made by the Cambridge pastor and the Conservatory of Music pupil.

The stomach of the dead girl is in the hands of a chemist, however, and while the analysis will be principally to determine the amount of cyanide of potassium taken into the stomach, it is believed that sufficient traces of the medicine will remain to determine its nature.

SERVICES AT HIS CHURCH

Although there appeared to be a bit more of prayerful solemnity than usual, the morning worship at the Immanuel Baptist Church, Cambridge, yesterday, was without reference of any kind to the plight of the congregation's pastor. It had been reported that Mr. Richeson would resign his pastorate through a letter to some member of the church, to be read at the morning service, but no letter was forthcoming.

Under the guidance of Rev. Dr. Geo. Cross, who supplied the pulpit for the absent pastor, the service passed off just as did those of last Sunday and every other Sunday during the year and a half that Mr. Richeson has been connected with the church.

Phil R Dunbar, the accused man's lawyer, has advised him not to resign nor make a public statement

SENDING BACK PRESENTS

Miss L. V. Richeson, a sister of the imprisoned clergyman, arrived here late last night from Saranac Lake, N.Y., where she has been engaged as a hospital nurse. She expressed complete confidence in her brother's innocence. It was her earnest wish, naturally, to see him at the earliest possible moment, but she found the prison regulations too strict to overcome yesterday. Miss Richeson is understood to be a guest at the Brookline home of Grant Edmands, the wealthy father of Miss Violet Edmands, who was to have been married to Mr Richeson on October 31. Miss Edmands herself is said to be ill as a result of the shock which she received when her clergyman lover was taken to jail. Dr T H Baldwin, the Edmands' family physician, has made frequent visits to the Edmands' home in Devon street during the past few days.

It has also been reported that Mr. Richeson has released his fiancee from her engagement, but her father, when questioned about the matter over the telephone to-day, refused to discuss it. In any event, the Edmands family to-day was engaged in boxing and shipping back the numerous wedding presents

A STIRRING APPEAL TO THE YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES MADE AT BIG RALLY

Mr. Karl Lehmann Holds a Large Audience of Young Church Workers Spellbound, While He Reveals the Magnitude of the Christian Endeavour Work Throughout the Land.

AN INSPIRING ADDRESS

A concentrated gathering of the Young People's Societies of the city was held in St. Andrew's church last night, where, after electing a president, in the person of Rev. James Rollins, to succeed the Rev. H. R. Trumpour, who recently left for other fields of labour, they listened attentively to a stirring and inspiring message from Mr. Karl Lehmann, secretary of the Interstate Christian Endeavour Society.

Picture a tall, well proportioned figure and a head surmounted by abundant dark hair, with large dark eyes, sometimes wistful, always gentle, and a chin that indicates determination. With these a moderate toned voice, with a slight American twang—that is Mr. Karl Lehmann, one of the noted leaders of the great Christian Endeavour movement throughout British North America.

For thirty-seven minutes last evening, he held the large audience of young workers spellbound with his eloquence, while with insistent emphasis and self conviction, he elucidated the responsibilities that face the young church worker of to-day.

Christian Endeavour Society—the initial letters of these three words, (C. E. S.) are symbolical of three great words, namely, Consecration, Enthusiasm and Service. I was amazed, said the speaker, upon my arrival in a certain town in one of the western States to observe some posters announcing my coming, terming me Consecrated Dynamite. I have often wished since that I had never seen that. The thought of it makes me feel nervous, when I step on a public platform to address an audience. Speaking of consecration, I firmly believe that the young men and women of to-day will nobly respond to the call to consecrate their services to the Lord. People are learning more and more, to avoid straddling the fence, or advocating a religion that is good only on Sunday. What the young people need to-day is something definite.

The second letter represents enthusiasm. A great many young people are afraid of that word. Enthusiasm is supreme, virtue Emerson has said, "Without enthusiasm, no one will succeed." Speaking of enthusiasm, I never saw such a striking example of it as I saw in Quebec two weeks before the election. They could talk more politics down there in five minutes, than a westerner could in as many hours. If they had as much enthusiasm for spiritual things, they would turn the country upside down in six months. Enthusiasm is the most contagious thing in the world. It is deep rooted, intense consecration.

Service is the third and last word. The people who are in service for the Lord, are the happiest people on earth. How you live and what you do, is what counts.

Mr. Lehmann interspersed his remarks with many stories of vivid interest, and concluded with a stirring appeal to the young people for greater efforts, and the need of personal soul salvation.

Some Christian Endeavour Facts.

Movement commenced in 1881 in the State of Maine.

To-day 87 denominations take Christian Endeavour up as a special class of work.

It represents an inter-denominational work.

There are no Christian Endeavour societies in Peterborough.

Christian Endeavour has a total membership of over 4,000,000.

The combined Christian Endeavours of the continent average $1,000,000 per year for Foreign Missions.

Consecrated Dynamite.

The Christian Endeavour by concentrated and consecrated effort, were successful in preventing the Johnson-Jeffries prize fight films from being exhibited throughout the world.

If it's illegal to hold a prize fight, it's illegal to show prize fight films.

Christian Endeavourers were successful in securing the election of Judge Lindsay in Denver by a 13,000 majority on a government ticket.

Remember the three words, C.E.S., Consecration, Enthusiasm, Service.

PREPARING FOR SEASON

The Executive committee of the Canadian Club met yesterday to re-organise for the coming season. It is hoped to have at least two meetings before the close of the year, addressed by speakers of national reputation. Further details will be announced later.

A resolution was also carried expressing the regret of the members at the resignation of Mr. Hodgson, who is leaving the city. Mr. Hodgson has been a valued and active member of the Executive since the formation of the Club.

KANE IS FREED

Young Man Sent Up for Trial on Charge of Getting Money Under False Pretences Was Allowed to Go on Suspended Sentence

WILL REPORT TO CHIEF

Edward Kane was tried before His Honour Judge Huycke this morning in the County Court and proven guilty of uttering and getting money under false pretenses. He was allowed to go on suspended sentence but will be required to report to Chief Thompson monthly.

It will be remembered that Kane was tried in the police court some time ago before Magistrate Dumble, when he was charged with forgery, it being alleged that he had, by forging the name of John Kane, Fisheries Inspector, obtained the cheque from the post office and presented it to the bank, where he obtained the money by presenting himself as brother of the rightful owner of the cheque ,and was sent up for trial, with the above result.

A large number of witnesses were examined. Mr. R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney, prosecuted, while Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence. In defending his client, Mr. Gordon drew attention to the extreme youth of the boy and also pointed out that it was his first offence and in view of this, he asked that leniency be exercised in order that he be given a fair chance to reform.

BOY'S FOOT BADLY SCALDED

Mother Says Zam-Buk Acted Like Magic

Mrs. E. Capell, 31 Sydney Street, Hamilton, tells how beneficial Zam-Buk proved in her family. She writes: "My little boy, aged one and a half years, put his foot into a pot of boiling water. The foot was so badly scalded that the skin came off with his stockings, and he had a shocking scald, from instep to toes.

"I at once sent for a supply of Zam-Buk, and as soon as this was applied, it seemed to act like magic and gave him ease. It was good to tell that Zam-Buk stopped the pain, because up to applying it I had to nurse the child all the time, but soon after I applied Zam-Buk he was anxious to get on the floor and go on with his play.

"I only used four boxes of Zam-Buk and the scald was then entirely healed, so I consider this the best investment I ever made. I believe Zam-Buk would have cured the scald even more quickly had the boy been lying down all the time, but after beginning with Zam-Buk it made the sore so easy that he was soon on his feet and playing about again.

"I might also tell you that my next boy to him, aged five years, had some bad broken chilblains. We used Zam-Buk on these also, and it cured them. For sores of any kind, I shall in future use only Zam-Buk."

Housekeepers everywhere speak similarly of Zam-Buk. It is a sure cure for eczema, rashes, ringworm, chapped hands, scurvy, heat rashes, cuts, burns, ulcers, discharging sores, abscesses, piles, inflammation, festering and all skin injuries and diseases. 50c. box, all druggists and stores, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto, for price. For skin diseases use only Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

LOCAL OPTION AND THE THREE-FIFTHS.

Local option fights are scheduled for four cities, thirteen towns, twenty villages and forty-six township municipalities at the coming municipal elections. Among the cities is Belleville; and Burleigh is the only township in the Peterborough list. The number of licenses at stake is 278, of which 71 are in the four cities; 65 in the thirteen towns; 40 in the twenty villages, and 102 in the forty-six townships. What will add to the interest of the contests, or to the sharpness of discussion in the general elections, is the fact that the two events will come before the public almost contemperaneously; a circumstance that will give point to the three-fifths clause, which the temperance people regard with such strong reprobation, and to which the Whitney government adheres with so much obstinate fatuity.

THE AFTERMATH.

In the matter of reciprocity, there is considerable locking of the stable after the horse is stolen. The farmers find that, after voting down reciprocity by the help of the combines, which operate to lessen prices to the producer, they have lost a bank of money by their action ,and now the pulp producers begin to see their loss. A couple of Swedes are in this country. They are paper manufacturers. Sweden is a great pulp producing country, and Canada is one of her chief competitors. These wide-awake Swedes say that Sweden will gain immensely by the defeat of reciprocity in Canada. They think that the United States will lower the duty on paper from Sweden, which they will not do for Canada, so long as the restrictions on export of pulp wood in the log, are maintained. Sweden will thus find a ready and good market for the 250,000 tons of pulp it has every year for export.

HAVE ONLY TO ASK.

Mr .Premier Borden seems to have an inexhaustible fund of snub for his followers, who gave him his large majority, as a protest against anti-British and anti-Protestant influences, and no end of favours to the anti-British element par excellence in the elected membership of Parliament. He began by giving the three best places in his cabinet to the Nationalists, all anti-naval and anti-British. Then he gave a more poisonous Nationalist, if possible, the deputy-speakership. Now he has honoured the Nationalists and humbled the flag-wavers anew. He has selected Mr. Alfred Sevigny, M.P., for Dorchester, to second the address in reply to the speech from the throne. That is, a Nationalist, who direly threatened Mr. Borden if he did not repeal the Canadian navy, is selected to talk back to the king's representative. Mr. Sevigny is the gentleman who wept over the woes of poor Canadian children to be made "meat for cannon" (chair a canon), on Canadian and British war ships. Mr. Borden has evidently hung out before the eyes of the Nationalists, the obliging shopkeeper's sign—"If you don't see what you want, ask for it."

A GOOD START.

Mr. Borden went into power with everything in his favour. He found Canada swinging along at a great pace in the highway of prosperity. He found the national coffers full to overflowing, and has every chance to "make good". But if he doesn't make better use of his opportunities than he has shown in his cabinet making, the big lump of real money will not last long. If the money is as readily sacrificed as Mr. Borden sacrificed his followers and the principles on which they were elected as his supporters, the money will not do the country much good.

Mr. Borden comes into possession of the biggest national revenue and the biggest surplus in the history of the country. The total revenue for the past year is nearly 116 million dollars — $117,780,469.78. Take from this a total expenditure for the year, $87, 774,196.33, and we have the enormous surplus of $30,006,311. This is a good start and is spare cash representing the price of three Dreadnoughts, so that Mr. Borden is in a position, without any troublesome financing, to carry out his policy if Mr. Bourassa will let him, of giving Great Britain the price of three Dreadnoughts.

MANY SORRY.

The Galt Reporter (Conservative) says:

"Many Conservatives are sorry that Mr. Andrew Broder was passed over in the selection for the Department of Agriculture."

Not only "many Conservatives are sorry," but many Liberals, who are concerned for the best administration of our agricultural interests, are sorry too. Mr. Broder was eminently fitted for the position, being a practical farmer, acquainted with the requirements of the farming interests. Those who heard Mr. Broder speak when he visited Peterborough, in company with Mr. Borden, were impressed with his strong personality and his large grasp of agricultural conditions, and no one would have been disappointed if he had been given the portfolio of agriculture, and he would have got it if the portfolio had gone on merit. But Mr. Broder was sacrificed along with the many other sacrifices of consistency and principle that Mr. Borden made in the gigantic compromise he brought into play in the selection of his cabinet. He sacrificed the "loyalty" by which he won in Ontario on the altar of Nationalist interests; he sacrificed the partyism of his Toronto Tory following, and took into his cabinet an unspeakable Grit, to please the monopolist combines and capitalistic interests. With a majority of 73 in Ontario containing many good men, he went outside the members of his elect followers to get two of his ministers, and there was a shuffle all round, a deal that brought the marked cards on the table. His followers may grumble with good cause, but there is at this moment no man suffering more from the fruits of compromise and lack of spinal column as displayed in cabinet making, than Mr. Borden, himself, and his troubles are only beginning.

TO BE EXPLAINED.

Col. Matheson, provincial treasurer, is, it is said, about to retire, and Hon. Mr. Foy is also booked for a judgeship. But before these two gentlemen resign their responsibility, there is something that they should explain, something in which both are concerned, something in which the public interest is concerned, in which both seem to have a considerable to answer for. When the Farmers' Bank went to pieces there was $35,000 of the money of the Province involved in the wreckage. It is well known that Dr. Beattie Nesbitt was the determining factor in the failure of the bank. He wanted money to get his grip on the Keeley mine which swallowed up half a million of the bank's money, and he wanted a loan of $25,000 from the Farmers' Bank, of which he was the first president. The Toronto World also wanted a loan of $10,000; but there was little in the bank, which was on its last legs. The World got Mr. Matheson, the custodian of the money of the people of Ontario to increase the deposit of the province in the dying bank from $10,000 to $35,000. That gave $35,000 for distribution, and the World got its $10,000 loan and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt got his $25,000. The collapse of the Bank left these sums a loss to the province. This may not be the exact condition of things, but it was something very like it. But there seems to be no doubt of the fact that Hon. Mr. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer, risked $35,000 of the people's money in a bank that was tottering to its fall. He must have known that there was a big risk, for the Conservative papers had told him that the Bank was rotten from the beginning, and a financial expert like Col. Matheson must have known too much about its condition to justify his yielding to the solicitation of one prominent Conservative to adventure more money in the Farmers' Bank to meet the demands of another prominent Conservative, who got away with $25,000 of the people's money, and is still away. He is not yet caught, and there is no evading the fact that he was allowed to slip out of the country under the very eye of the Attorney General's department and, in spite of this department, is still away, enjoying his spoils; when, as a matter of fact, according to reports, all the Attorney General's department has to do is to stretch forth its hand across the border and bring the culprit within reach of justice. There is something for both Hon. Mr. Matheson and Hon. Mr. Foy to explain. The latter should tell, before he retires from office, what induced him to put $25,000 of the people's money into the vaults of a moribund bank for the benefit of a Conservative party heeler, and Hon. Mr. Foy is called upon to explain how the culprit was allowed to get out of the country and to stay out of it in the enjoyment of his spoils. The people will have the double explanation before the middle of next December, or know the reason why.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

Hon. Mr. Borden's Finance Minister seems to be the white-flower of a seatless life.

There will be a plebiscite on the Canadian naval question. Mr. Borden says so; at least Mr. Bourassa says so, which is the same thing.

The Montreal Star says that "sinister forces have been admitted by Mr. Borden into his cabinet." There was certainly little diplomatic dexterity shown in some of his cabinet selections.

Mr. A. J. Balfour, the Conservative leader, says that Canada's decision on the question of reciprocity, is of "imperial importance." This is stately rubbish. All that condemnation of reciprocity in Canada means, so far, is giving first place to anti-Imperial interests and influences.

Hon. Premier Borden is to spend a week in golfing to recuperate and strengthen him for the arduous work of the session. If he shows the same skill on the links in getting the ball into a hole that he showed in getting himself into a hole in his cabinet-making, he is a splendid runner-up for the championship.

Some of the shareholders of the defunct Farmers' Bank are to petition the Dominion Government for relief. Mr. Crothers, a member of Mr. Borden's cabinet, was elected on the platform of the Government recouping the sufferers by the bank's failure. The Whitney Government can not be expected to help. It contributed $35,000 to the losses and gave its share of relief to the Toronto World, $10,000 and Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, $25,000.

The Montreal Gazette occupies half a column to prove that no money was spent in Ontario to defeat reciprocity and elect Borden candidates. Some persons of guileless credulity may believe that; such as, say, Mr. Matheson, Provincial Treasurer in the Whitney Government, who was innocent enough to believe that the Farmers' Bank was a safe place to put in $25,000 of the people's money, when Dr. Beattie Nesbitt was hanging round the corner waiting for the deposit to be made.

"UNDER CANVAS"

"Acta Victoriana," the official publication of Victoria University, has the following interesting contribution entitled "Under Canvas," by W. F. Huycke, son of His Honour Judge Huycke, of this city:

We, a party of that much-censured body, the Canadian militia, were on the way to put in our annual training at Petewawa Camp, where we arrived safe and sound after a long, but interesting journey, of which some of the most outstanding features were a sleepless night, an early plunge in the St. Lawrence, repeated singing of hackneyed songs and weary stop-overs, waiting to change cars. Petewawa Camp is situated on the shore of the Ottawa River, a mile or two above the junction of the turbulent Petewawa with the more placid waters of the majestic Ottawa. From the cliff overlooking the river we can see the stately Laurentian Hills, their slopes clad with evergreens, and the river, arched like a bow, sparkling in between. Nestling on the Quebec side is a fort, a relic of fur-trading days, but now changed by the caprice of fate into an attempt at a summer resort. For miles around is the bush, with here and there a settler's clearing, but these the Government bought up, thus creating an uninhabited region, used only for trial shooting to increase the efficiency of the Canadian artillery. Here are stationed permanent corps from spring to early fall, and here gather volunteers from points as far east as Prince Edward Island to points as far west as Winnipeg.

We had barely reached our allotted quarters, had something to eat, and were busily engaged upon the preliminary duties of pitching camp, when we encountered what no camper likes to meet before he is prepared—a heavy rain. So the next few minutes was spent in standing in a circle round the tent-pole, and waiting like the guests at the close of a Vic. reception, for somebody to start something. But the shower passed away as quickly as it came up, and an hour later on one would have thought it had rained, the water sinking away with astonishing rapidity into the sandy soil.

The next morning work began in earnest, and we made our initial appearance before the guns, the latest weapon the Militia Department has seen fit to adopt—huge, ponderous affairs, capable of discharging projectiles of sixty pounds weight. Our hours were from 6 a.m. to 4 p.m., of course with periods off for meals. Our work was to qualify for gun-laying, or range finding, and as to pass this test a total of ninety had to be obtained from one hundred and twenty, considerable accuracy and speed were required from each individual. So there we were, shivering in the early morning, as we tried to get a line on a misty target or sweltering in the heat of the midsummer sun, as it beat down on the sandy plain, or hastily seeking cover when a sudden shower drifted over from the Laurentians.

All the time, however, was not spent in drill. The Ottawa proved a good place to spend a little of one's spare time, and the fishing, also, was said to be good in the vicinity. Marvellous tales were told of the bass and whitefish that were only waiting to be caught, so several of the disciples of Izaak Walton set out to try their luck, but the return of these piscatorial artists greatly resembled the number of Liberals elected in the City of Toronto in the recent election. If one found the camp too dull he had only to walk to Petewawa Village ,which consisted of two stores, one house, and a railway station. There he could imagine himself in the noise and glare of the city, for did not one of the stores have a restaurant, lit by one lamp, and a gramophone which ground out "Silver Bells" with metallic distinctness.

But by far the most interesting and important period came when what we had been doing for the past week was to be tested, and when it was our turn to fire in competition for the Challenge Cup, open to all the heavy batteries of militia in Canada.

One good heave by ten men and six heavy horses, and the gun is in motion, moving off first at a walk, at a gallop over exposed places; down a little hill, with two men jamming on the brakes, and with the muzzle swinging dangerously near the heads as the gun goes over a rut, till, with a final burst of speed, the spot chosen by the battery commander is reached. Signallers take the range as given by the range-finders, the gun is unlimbered; the horses gallop to a spot under cover, and the layer, with all possible speed puts the gun on the target—an old limber or a few square yards of canvas three or four miles away. The gun is loaded, everyone stands clear, and then the lanyard is pulled. A flash is seen, a deafening explosion is heard, and the gun recoils, tearing up the earth in the rear, while the shell can be heard rushing through the air till it explodes amid a cloud of dust near the target. As repeated rounds are fired the range is corrected, and shells are plumped down within a few yards of the target ,the shrapnel flying and tearing everything round. But the order, "Cease firing," is heard; the gun teams gallop back, limber up, and are off, with a grimy, tired, but happy gun crew keeping up as best it can.

That is how the big guns are worked at Petewawa.

"AT HOME"

Pleasant in the extreme was the evening spent in the S. O. E. Hall last evening, where the Woodmen of the World held an "At Home." The order was well represented by the ladies as well as the gentlemen and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was spent. The Woodmen orchestra furnished delightful music during the games and other musical numbers were rendered. Dr. Harrison, of Toronto, the Head Consul Commander, gave an inspiring address, in which he urged those who were already members, to introduce others into the society, not only to further its interests but for the benefit of themselves. Progressive euchre was engaged in and the prize winners were Mrs. W. S. Campbell and Mr. James Vallery. A number of the members supplied abundant refreshments, which were thoroughly appreciated by all.

Following was the musical programme:

Selection—The Woodmen orchestra.
Solo—Miss Mable Penrose.
Selection—The Woodmen orchestra.
Solo—Mr. J. P. Nash.
Selection—The Woodmen orchestra.
God Save the King.

BASKETBALL

TORONTO, OCT. 24.—The launching of the new organization to control basketball was successfully undertaken by delegates from several towns and clubs meeting at the Central Y. M. C. A. The Ontario Basketball League was formed by representatives of interested clubs from Toronto West End and Central, Orillia, St. Catharines, Ottawa, Hamilton and St. James, Toronto, while Stratford, Brantford, London, Galt, Paris, Woodstock, Sault Ste Marie, Peterborough, Port Arthur, Fort William, and All Saints, Toronto, were represented by proxy.

Dr. R. M. Pescock of Toronto, was elected Secretary-Treasurer, and an Executive of strong men is being formed. It was decided that all groups should furnish winners before February 1, and in order to expedite matters interested clubs are asked to send entries to the Secretary, at 415 Yonge street, as early as possible, so that groups and schedules can be drawn up. It is desired to include every club playing basketball in the Province, and this seems likely. The junior age limit was not fixed, but more than two games as senior will disqualify a man from playing intermediate.

CHEERING THE BRAVE HEART

Some people who have not the habit of whistling to keep their courage up get the impression that he who whistles always has his courage up. They fail to see that some natures refuse to be downed or to down others, but keep up a lively show of good cheer regardless of what the facts may be. When all the time these very whistlers may at heart be as heavy as lead, and in need of every bit of sympathy and encouragement possible.

This is hardly fair.

It's a mighty fine thing to just remember that human beings, generally speaking, are about evenly served with reasons for joy and reasons for sorrow; if it looks different to you, it is because you cannot see underneath the surface, it happens to be your lot to have a surface complaint while your neighbour has one that is despeated; that is all the difference. And the kind word, the helpful talk, the little act of consideration, may touch a starved need in that woman who seems so cheery, quite as much as they do in you, whose face is drawn with care lines.

A physical illustration comes to mind; a certain woman went about all her life doing little thoughtful kindnesses to ailing folks. At her death it was discovered that she had secretly nursed a slow-growing cancer for a quarter of a century; a loathsome disease from which she must have suffered tortures beyond the conception of those to whom she ministered. Every one had envied her her wealth and comfortable existence. It had never occurred to any one to lift the veil and find a reason for her intense sympathy with physical suffering; or, better still, to take it for granted that there was a good reason. They had let her dive and die among them, doing for them, bestowing her strength upon them, and never once questioning her life—her need of sympathetic visitors, of a word of cheer, of a new book or a bracing article to read.

It is well to go through life on the principle that every human being has a cross; whether or not you can see it, it is there; so be kind and offer little attentions—in the dark. Do not deny to brave spirits the uplift you give so readily to those whose grief advertise themselves.

JUNIOR RACE

I am an amateur in good standing and am under eighteen years of age. I wish to be entered in the Examiner Junior Road Race on Thanksgiving Day.

Contestants are required to fill out the blanks in connection with whichever race they desire to enter and send in thiscoupon to he sporting editor of the Peterboro Examiner as soon as possible.

SPLENDID PRIZES FOR THE EXAMINER ROAD RACES

As already intimated, the prizes for the Examiner road races on Thanksgiving Day will be more valuable than any yet given for those events and when they are put on exhibition, as they will be, to-morrow, this opinion will be coincided with by those who see them.

The first man to cross the line in the senior race, in addition to holding the Examiner trophy, emblematic of the championship of the Midland District for one year, will receive a beautiful diamond ring, undoubtedly the finest prize the Examner has yet offered. The second man will be rewarded with a splendid 14 karat gold watch, the third will get a genuine garnet ring, the stone of unusual size and the setting unusually fine. The fourth prize is a very pretty pearl tie pin.

The junior prizes are little less valuable than those offered in the senior competition. The winner will be given a remarkably handsome gold watch of standard make, a little beauty, well worth running many times the distance for. A gold ring will be the reward of the second youngster to finish and a tie pin will be given the third. For fourth prize a coat sweater of the best manufacture will be offered. The names of the officials will be announced in a day or two.

SIX OUTSIDE RUNNERS FOR THE SENIOR RACE HOLNBECK IS LATEST

An interesting feature of the Examiner road race this year is that, of the ten entries so far, no less than six are from runners living outside of Peterborough. The latest to come to hand is from G. Holnbeck, of Cobourg, who ran third in the junior Examiner race last year. Holnbeck is well known in Peterborough, having played cover-point for the junior Cobourg team against the Grillers last winter, and caught for the Cobourg Midland League team against Peterborough during the past summer. He is a big, husky youngster, in his eighteenth year and ran a good race without any training last year. He is in fine shape now and is confident of making a good showing in the ten mile event. Other outside runners already entered are Willis of Toronto, J. E. Lean of Cambourne, W. Smoke of Alderville, Albert Smoke of Chemong, and J. Worthley of Ennismore. The four Peterborough runners in line are Harold Smith of the Y. M.C.A., Sidney Knott, and Morris and Scot Montgomery. The entries in so far, assure the success of the senior race, as there are as many as there were last year, and the quality is much better. There is every indication of a hard fought battle all the way down the line. Following are the entries in both races so far:

Senior.

1 Harold Smith, Peterborough Y.M.C.A.
2 J. Worthley, Ennismore.
3 J. E. Lean, Cambourne, Ont.
4 W. Willis, Toronto.
5 Sidney Knott, Peterborough.
6 Scott Montgomery, Peterborough.
7 Morris Montgomery, Peterborough.
8 W. Smoke, Alderville.
9 Albert Smoke, Chemong.
10 G. Holnbeck, Cobourg, Ont.

Junior Race.

1 P. L. Crowley, Peterborough.
2 Thos. McAuliffe, Ennismore.
3 Rupert Brady, Peterborough.
4 Leonard Board, Peterborough.
5 J. Mahon, Peterborough.
6 Cecil Armstrong, Peterborough Y.M.C.A.
7 Alex. Murdock, Peterborough.
8 Beresford Hamilton, Lakefield Preparatory school.
9 Frank Leahy.
10 Tommy Barnett, Peterborough.
11 Cecil Brown, Peterborough Y.M.C.A.
12 Alex Darling, Peterborough Y.M.C.A.
13 O. Taylor, Peterborough Y.M.C.A.

The Weather Man Must Have Grudge

NEW YORK, OCT. 23. The Weather Man must have a decided grudge against world's series baseball, otherwise he would turn off the tap and allow the sun to come out and dry up the ball ground at Philadelphia and New York. It has rained off and on—principally on—for over a week, commencing a week ago Sunday, and there is no indication of a cessation at the present writing. It has been a driving rain from the east, and the grounds, especially Shibe Park, are nothing but swimming pools, which will take some days hard work to get in shape for baseball.

The probabilities are that there will not be a game before Wednesday, although every effort will be made to get the grounds ready for a game tomorrow.

THE ENFORCED IDLENESS

With this long secession of hostilities, brought about by the continued rain, the question has arisen whether the batting is likely to be increased.

The argument appears to be with the pitchers. If the batters are to improve in their work they must do so without practice. It is generally conceded that in the two departments of the game the pitchers can better afford to remain idle than the fellows who are expected to start the runs and then push them around.

There is another question to be considered. That is as to the general effect upon both teams because or the enforced idleness which they are taking. It has usually been the result of long idleness that the players become dull and less nimble of effort. That is natural enough in view of the fact that a ball player in the active season of competition is more or less like a thoroughbred. When he remains idle and has no opportunity to exercise and to keep his muscles pliable and ready to respond to a quick demand upon them, he is often less effective on the field for a day or two.

MAY AFFECT THE SCORE

In this instance the players of one club are as likely to suffer from inactivity as those of the other. Both may escape it, but should there be an apparent "slowing up" it is possible that the score of the game to be played to-morrow or Wednesday afternoon—if the weather is temperate enough to permit a contest to take place—will be larger than any which has been rolled up since the series started.

The field may not be in the best of condition even if it is sufficiently good to permit the game to begin. That may add to the size of the score. If players slip and find the footing unfirm beneath them they may not be able to field the ball so accurately, and, that being the case, the batters may take up more share of the sport than they have been disposed to do.

General indications would point to the fact that this fourth contest of a series which has had its full share of excitement from the start, is likely to be less perfectly played than any which have preceded it.

A HELP TO NEW YORK PITCHERS

It is better to have two victories than one. It would be a great deal better to have three victories against one, and that is what the majority of fans expect is in store for the Athletics after the next contest. On the other hand, the fact must not be overlooked that if the Giants make it two and two the series will be as if it had never started, so far as advantage to either club is concerned, because the New York pitchers to-day are in every bit as good condition to prolong the battle as those of the Athletics.

"MATTY" AND MACQUARD

So far as the men in the box are concerned, the odds are again even. Both Mathewson and Marquard have had all the rest they need. Either of them may pitch the best game of the series when the next contest takes place, and so may any one of the Athletics, but New York's chances no longer are at such a discount, as they would have been if the Giants had been forced to meet the Athletics last Wednesday.

"THREE SWALLOWS"

Sir John Power and Son's "Three Swallows" Irish Whiskey—Famous for over a century. Of highest standard of purity. Distillers to His Majesty the King.

"AT HOME"

There will be an "At Home" in the St. Alphonsus Lyceum on Thursday evening, October 26, commencing at 8 o'clock. There will be progressive euchre and refreshments, and a pleasant evening is promised. Admission 25c. J. J. Hanrahan, Hon. Sec. 3d-95

Talk With Kid McCoy

BY W. W. NAUGHTON.

SAN FRANCISCO, CAL., OCT. 21.—Just at present a number of pugilistic derelicts are talking of coming back. Kid McCoy goes a little further. He says he is back.

On the night Carl Morris and Jim Flynn boxed at Madison Square Garden, New York, the writer had a pleasant greeting from McCoy.

"I've discovered the secret," said the Kid. "I'd like to see you before you leave town and talk it over with you."

"Briefly, what is it?" I asked.

"First of all, to forget the past entirely. I mean not to count upon performing wonders because you were able to perform them once upon a time. If a man is confined to his bed through sickness for months, he has to learn to walk all over again, hasn't he?—and it is the same with fighting.

TALKS OF NATURE'S LAWS

"If you are out of it a year or two you can't take it up where you left off. You have to begin all over again. That's what I am doing. I still remember the things I used to do and I am hammering away at them like a fellow learning to play the fiddle. Another great help is to obey the laws of nature—to live cleanly. And above all, you must see to it that the mind dominates the body thoroughly."

The clanging of the gong broke up the conversation and I was sorry. The Kid was radiantly talkative and surprisingly interesting, and I had not thoroughly grasped what he was driving at. I wanted to know whether the domination of the body by the mind meant a new cult in pugilism, a different order of things under which the effects of wear and tear and punches should be reasoned away, an advanced system of milling in which the mind would insist upon continuing when the body felt as though it were knocked out.

I have only the Kid's ring exploits since that night to assist me in forming conclusions, and I see that he is thoroughly satisfied with his progress so far. He seems to think that his new theory has worked out to the greatest satisfaction, that he has learned to walk all over again, that simples living is reaping its reward, and that the McCoy mind has the McCoy body under perfect subjection.

And all because he has bowled over a few nobodies in such order that there was not really ample opportunity of deciding if the McCoy's physique is as subservient to the McCoy mind as the Kid imagines.

PHYSICAL EXERTION WILL TELL

It's all very well for the mind to boast of its powers of domination when there has been no particular call upon the physical resources. When the journey lengthens and the legs begin to drag, and when the heart begins to pump violently and the lungs feel over-taxed, the most persistent mind in the world may fail to make the body respond. McCoy, if the record speaks correctly, will never see his thirty-eighth year again. And that from an athletic standpoint, is a good round age. He has been in the lists full twenty years; so long, in fact, that reading his past doings within the hempen corral is like strolling among the tombs in a country churchyard and noting the names of the dear departed.

Jim Baron, Shadow Morrow, Jack O'Brien!

Where are they now?

Steve O'Donnell, Tommy West, Tommy Ryan, Joe Choynski!

How can a man disentangle himself from such wraiths as these and come back?

Jim Hall, George La Blanche, Dan Creedon, Nick Burley, Joe Goddard, Billy Swift, Jack Root, Peter Maher!

Can any one blame the Kid's body if it refuses to dance attendance on the mind after reading a list of former associates like these."

Isn't it quite time the poor body enjoyed a well-earned rest?

This much can be said for the Kid: His mind is young. His manner and his conversation attest this. But that proves nothing; that is so far as coming back is concerned. They say you can't put an old head on young shoulders, and by the same token you can't very well hitch a young mind to an old body and expect anything remarkable in the way of team work.

ATHLETE HAS PRESCRIBED SPAN

There have been iron men, of course, though that was more a question of the intellect. George Godfrey was one, Bob Fitzsimmons was another. They were exceptions to the rule that, in matter of athletic activity, man has a prescribed span.

Now, if McCoy is a Godfrey or Fitzsimmons physically, and has the powers of mental domination he hints at, he may prove one of the greatest marvels of them all in the line of pugilistic longevity.

But the test is the thing. And that isn't supplied by tumbling tyros like Jim Savage and Kid Ely in bouts lasting less than five rounds.

We are interested in the Kid and his claims and we would like to know how far he can go. And when we have seen him—or have read of him—in a brisk bout of at least ten rounds' duration with a man of the calibre of Jim Flynn, Sam Langford or Joe Jeanette, we will be better qualified to express an opinion as to what "learning all over again," clean living and mental domination have done for him."

West Ends Arrange Game For The Holiday Mulock Cup Champions

The West End Athletic Club have concluded arrangements for a Rugby game with the Mulock Cup Champions of Toronto University on Thanksgiving Day, and as this team has the opportunity of the best of coaching and also observing the play of the Inter-Collegiate Champions, the West Ends will have to work to hold them.

The West End Club wish to express their regret at not sooner answering the challenge of Mr. Eugene Hurtubise for a game, but owing to the at 7.15, to get in shape for the game pending, were not at liberty to make arrangements with Mr. Hurtubise, but are willing to play his team on Saturday afternoon next.

The following are asked to be out to practise at Central Park to-night, at 7.15, ot get in shape for the game on Thanksgiving Day: Hill, Eccleston, Webb, Thompson, Turner, Davidson, Hagan, Langley, Gilbert, Denison, Corkery, Copping, Kirn, Eastwood and any others wishing to have a workout.

CORRECT STANDING OF CHURCH FOOTBALL LEAGUE

The soccer game on Saturday resulted in a draw between All Saints and Park Street. Had the Baptists won the game some interesting football would have been witnessed as the three teams would then have been equal as to points and would have have had to play off for the trophy.

Following is a table showing the positions of the clubs at the close of the season:

	Games Pld	W's	L's	Dr	Pts
All Saints	4	2	1	1	5
St. James	4	2	2	0	4
Park Street	4	1	2	1	3

MAY TALK WITH GHOSTS

That it is only a matter of time and education when we will be able to see ghosts and chat reminiscently with them, is the statement made by Dr. James H. Hyslop, who has just returned from Boston, where he got into communication with the spirit of the late Professor William James.

In discussing his spirit talks with Professor James, Dr. Hyslop said that while the communications had not been absolutely satisfactory, they furnished sufficient evidence to prove to his mind the identity of Professor James's spirit, and to show that the Harvard psychologist was keeping his death words by trying to talk with the people in this world.

Dr. Hyslop said he had obtained the communications from Professor James while working with a medium on another subject. He was astonished and delighted.

So readily had the spirit of Professor James manifested itself that Dr. Hyslop says he will obtain sittings with other mediums here for further conferences with the shade.

Referring again to the matter of visible appearance of spirits, Dr. Hyslop said:

"At present sufficient effort by a large number of people has not been made to establish intimacy with those persons who have passed out.

"When foolish prejudices are overcome, there will be a great leaning toward spirit investigation, which will surely result in time in our talking with spirits at will, and in seeing them in their existing shapes.

"Just how long this will take depends solely upon the progress of the study of spiritism among the people at large. I do not mean that the barrier of death will be broken down, reunions with the departed established, but I do believe that, though apart, they will appear to us on occasion.

"I am moved to say this by the immense strides made in spirit investigation in the limited time this sort of research has been in the field.

"Medicine is hundreds of years old, and its advance in knowledge has been ridiculously slow as compared with spirit investigation.

"When you consider that only a few years ago not a single scientific investigator, even among those studying spiritualism, would be willing to admit the possibility of spirit communication, it is pretty good evidence that the next few years will bring greater revelations than can now be imagined."

Plenty Of Rain

One year ago this week, Peterborough county was favoured with its first fall of snow. It commenced on Friday morning and continued throughout the day, completely clothing the land in winter's rugged garment. Old timers predict that there will be no snow until the 15th of December this year, but a substitute in the form of rain and sleet will make things interesting in the meantime. They base their calculations on the fact that the ponds and swamps are dry as yet, and according to nature's ruling will have to be filled up before the frost king will be allowed to assert himself. Other indications, too numerous to mention, are also taken into consideration.

Has Resigned

In accordance with instructions received from the Fire, Water and Light committe, Lieutenant Crouter, of the Peterborough Fire Department, severed his connection with the brigade yesterday. Rumours to the effect that a number of others will follow suit are groundless, although the committee have announced their intention of making one more change. This will take place at a convenient date.

Y.M.C.A. NOTES

Schooner Capsizes And Crew Have A Very Narrow Escape

Special Wire to The Examiner.

GODERICH, ONT., OCT. 24.—The schooner Azov, one of the oldest sailing vessels on the great Lakes, was waterlogged and capsized twenty miles east by north of Point Aux Barques on Sunday afternoon. John McDonald, the captain and owner, was in charge at the time, and just a few minutes before the vessel went over the crew of six took to the boat, a 16-foot yawl. After making an unsuccessful attempt ot reach the west shore of the lake the tempest drove them eastward and about noon, yesterday, they made land at Sheppardton. All of the crew suffered intensely from exposure and Miss McDonald, the cook was unable to walk when taken out of the yawl. The schooner was just out of drydock at Sarnia. Until she breaks up she will be a dangerous menace to navigation.

FOR AGED PEOPLE

We have a safe, dependable, and altogether ideal remedy that is particularly adapted to the requirements of aged people and persons of weak constitutions who suffer from constipation or other bowel disorders. We are so certain that it will relieve these complaints and give absolute satisfaction in every particular that we offer it with our personal guarantee that it shall cost the user nothing if it fails to substantiate our claims. This remedy is called Rexall Orderlies.

Rexall Orderlies are eaten just like candy, are particularly prompt and agreeable in action, may be taken at any time, day or night; do not cause diarrhoea, nausea, griping, excessive looseness, or other undesirable effects. They have a very mild, but positive action upon the organs with which they come in contact, apparently acting as a regulative tonic upon the relaxed muscular coat of the bowel, thus overcoming weakness, and aiding to restore the bowels to more vigorous and healthy activity. Thre sizes, 10c, 25c, and 50c. Sold only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid and Jury.

Vines Detached

The ladder apparatus of the Fire Department comes in very useful for more than that for which it is specially intended. The high wind to-day detached a portion of the ivy vine growing on the tower of St. John's Church, and it was found necessary to cut the detached part off in order to keep the whole vine from being pulled off. A gang of city firemen completed this work in a few minutes this afternoon. Two years ago a heavy wind stripped the entire coating of vines from the west side of the church, but they have grown up again.

NEW ARRIVALS

Four immigrants arrived in the city to-day from the old land. Two of them were quickly disposed of by Mr. Howson, emigration agent, while the other two will likely be placed to-morrow.

One of the latter was a cab repairer in the old country, while the other was a labourer. Both of them look physically fit, and are willing to engage in farm work.

A Noted Clergyman Coming Sunday

A notable ecclesiastic of world-wide fame will be in the city on Sunday, and his visit will occasion much interest. The Rev. J. Paterson-Smyth, D.D., L.L.D., Canon of Christ Church Cathedral, Montreal, is to preach special sermons at St. John's church at 11 a.m., and 7 p.m. in connection with the Dedication Festival, which will be continued for two Sundays.

Dr. Paterson-Smyth is an Irishman, and was for many years Professor in Trinity College, Dublin. He was induced by St. George's church, Montreal, to accept the rectorship of that important church when the late Dean Carmichael was raised to the Episcopate. He is an author of world-wide reputation, and his books are read by tens of thousands of readers in all parts of the world, one of his latest being, "The Gospel of the Hereafter," which is popular in Peterborough. Besides being an author, Dr. Paterson-Smyth is an orator of great ability and power, and is one of the foremost Anglican clergymen in Canada.

Leaving For The Woods

A gang of men left this morning for the lumber camp. They were in charge of Mr. Ted. Cavanagh. In spite of the fact that there are about six hundred men in the woods to the north of Peterborough at the present time, the demand for more is keen.

A large number left the city on Saturday for the camps and were followed by three gangs yesterday. Two of these were for the Cresswell camp and one for the Peterborough company.

The wages this winter are from $26 to $32 per month.

COURSE OF LECTURES

The following course of Friday evening lectures has been arranged by the Education Department for the local Normal School:

Mr. W. Gordon Craig, a lecture-recital on Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice, November 10th.

Mr. R. S. Neville, Barrister, Toronto, "Nation Building," December 8th.

Dean Robertson, Victoria College, Toronto, "Glimpses of Greece," with illustrative lantern slides), January 12th.

President Falconer, University of Toronto, "The Idea of Progress," January 19th.

These lectures will be delivered in the Assembly Hall of the Normal School and the public are invited to attend.

OFFICERS ELECTED

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. held a busy meeting on Saturday night, at which the officers for the ensuing year were elected, as follows:

President—Mrs. J. C. Shook.
Vice-President—Mrs. Hunter.
Secretary—Mrs. St. Clegg.

Water Commissioners Have Busy Session Yesterday

At a meeting of the Water Commissioners held yesterday afternoon, Mr. W. H. Hill presided as chairman in the absence of Mr. T. F. Matthews, Mr. W. H. Moore was present, and only some minor business was transacted.

It was moved by Mr. Moore, and seconded by Mr. Hill, that on considering a letter of the Bishop Construction Co. of Oct. 18th inst., returning a cheque of the commissioners in favour of the Traders' Bank, for $1,632.38, marked: "In full settlement with the Bishop Construction Co., Ltd., for construction of dam, pump-house etc." order that a new cheque for the same sum be sent to the Traders' Bank, after acceptance by the Bank of Toronto, here acknowledging the receipt of the returned cheque, and stating that another cheque for the same sum is enclosed, and adding that in the Commissioners' view, this is all they owe, and is in accordance with the Engineers' certificate.

Also that a further letter be sent to the Bishop Construction Co., advising them of the remittance.—Carried.

Having received Mr. Kennedy's letter of the 18th inst., re the McDougall pump, order that a letter be sent to Aylesworth, Wright, Moss and Thompson in the form now submitted.—Carried.

A letter was read from Mr. V. Eastwood with reference to the water rates. No action was taken.

A letter was read from T. A. S. Hay, City Engineer, with regard to the position of a hydrant at the corner of Dalhousie and Reid streets. The matter was referred to the Acting Superintendent.

A letter was read from Mr. T.A.S. Hay, C.E., with regard to a service of the sewer pumping station. The matter was referred to the Acting Superintendent.

LOW WATER MARK

Many of the residents of Bridge-north, are complaining of the lowness of the water. Old residents say that they have not seen it so low in years. The approaches to the Mud Lake bridge have become very steep, this condition being caused by the sinking of the bridge, consistent with the drop in the water mark.

POST CARD COLUMN

EVOLUTION.

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—It is reported that at a great platform meeting, where evolution was being discussed, Prof Huxley, who was one of the speakers, and who was one of those who believed that his grandfather was a monkey, was asked the question "Mr. Huxley, if your grandfather was a monkey, what was your grandmother?" It is not reported, Mr. Editor, that Prof. Huxley made it clear whether his grandmother was a monkey or a woman. If the Professor's grandfather and grandmother were both monkeys, according to the unalterable law of nature, that like produces like, why, the offspring from such would be monkey. Then, if the professor's grandfather were a monkey and his grandmother a woman, then that crossing of species would produce a hybrid, and hybrids are always sterile and go into extinction. That is where many of the monkey-brained men, the "Higher Critics," have already gone, and the rest are fast heading that way.

Enjoyable Evening

A social meeting of the Girls' Auxiliary of St. John's church was held last evening at the residence of Mrs E. B Clegg, Charlotte street. There was a large attendance of members of this flourishing society. Mrs. Fee, who is on furlough from the mission field in China, was present, and gave a most interesting talk on present day conditions in that country, describing the difficulties and encouragements of the missionaries, and giving pictures of the life among the natives and mission workers. Following this there was an interesting contest on missionary information with questions given to all present and answered. Handsome prizes were presented by Mrs. Clegg to Miss Linda Hall, who came out best in the competition, and to Mrs. F. L. Hoy, who was second, although others were close to the mark. The presentations were made by little Doris Clegg. Rev. Canon Davidson was present and expressed the gratitude of those present to Mrs. Fee for her address and to Mrs. Clegg for her hospitality. He also congratulated Mrs. Conway and the other officers of the Auxiliary on the progress that was being made. Refreshments were partaken of and a pleasant social hour spent.

There never has been a time in this country when each individual was so dependent upon those about him for so many of the necessities and luxuries of life as to-day. Because I do but one thing, I am dependent upon my fellows for all things else. This, in a very quiet way, hints at the complexity of our modern, social life and the mutual dependence of people upon one another.

Shipment of Bulbs.—Messrs. Jordan Bros., the George street florists, announce the arrival of their annual fall shipment of autumn bulbs from Holland, which will be placed on sale at once at their salesroom, George street. The shipment, which consists of all kinds of bulbs for fall planting, has been somewhat delayed and there have been anxious enquiries as to when it would arrive. The announcement that the bulbs are here will be received with satisfaction.

Tammas Willing.—A Scotsman in London stood by the bedside of his dying wife, who had been born in the Highlands, and had retained a strong affection for her native land. "Promise me, Tammas," said she, "that you will bury me in the Hielans, for I could not rest quiet down here!" Tammas shrank from the expense of the business, so after pondering for a moment he said—"Weel, I'll just see; if I find that ye canna rest quiet here I'll hae ye removed to the Hielans!"

Patronize Home Industry.—There is no need of sending to Toronto, or elsewhere, for showcases, or store-fixtures of any kind. Patronize the Peterborough Showcase Co., a well-equipped factory, for turning out large contracts, as well as small ones. The material and workmanship is of the best. Prices are right, and terms to suit all people. Any one intending to equip their stores with showcases, wallcases, etc., for the coming Christmas trade, by sending their order to the factory by the 30th of September, will be allowed a discount of 10 per cent. on orders exceeding $75.—W. THEOBALD, Manager; Factory, 709 Water street. 'Phone 1153.

"THE WHITE SQUAW"

The Boston Post says, of the Canadian-American romantic drama, "The White Squaw," which recently played an engagement in that city:

"It is a highly interesting story in which there is no villain, but a strong love interest and some exciting moments.

The plot tells of two sisters, one of whom has been stolen by the Indians and brought up in a savage state. Indeed, she believes she is of Indian blood. When arriving at maturity, she meets her sister, who is a modern society woman, and the discovery of the relationship and their reconciliation form the basis of the narrative.

It is quite out of the ordinary and seemed to please the large audience, not alone on account of the scenes and incidents, but by the picturesqueness of the details, which were very realistic. The period of the play is 100 years ago in the Michigan forests and the characters are trappers and frontiersmen.

The author, Della Clarke, has woven into her play much genuine comedy and there are numerous incidents which excite laughter as well as pathos. It was admirably acted by a well-selected company, headed by Clara Snelling."

"The White Squaw" will be presented at the Grand next Saturday, Oct. 28, matinee and evening.

Branch Y.M.C.A. For Lakefield

A movement is on foot to organize a branch of the Y. M. C. Association in Lakefield. Officers of the local branch of the association will journey to Lakefield on November 3rd and will confer with the ministers and officials of the churches there as regards the prospects for such a movement. Such was the statement made by Rev. Mr. Coon, pastor of Lakefield Methodist church to the Examiner this morning. "During the short time that I have been pastor at Lakefield," said Mr. Coon, "we have succeeded in organizing a Boys' Club, which proved to be so successful that we were approached by the Presbyterian church officials with a proposition to make the Boys' Club movement interdenominational. The ministers and officials of the combined churches met in conference last week, with the result that the above plan was decided upon."

HOCKEY

A new hockey team has loomed into sight for the City League. Fred Denison is the manager of the new coterie of stars who will be known as the Nationals, and who figure on cutting a wide swarth and incidentally, some ice, in the local league during the coming season. They have a number of well-known players under contract and say they will have a seven that will keep them all guessing.

TWO MORE TRIUMPHS

Chinese Rebels Gain the Towns of Kiukiang and Sian

BUILDING FORTIFICATIONS

Pekin, Oct. 25.—Two important towns, Kiukiang, in the Province of Kangsi, and Sian, capital of Shensi Province, have fallen into the hands of the revolutionists, very materially extending the area of the uprising, disheartening the Government and giving new confidence to the leaders in the movement to establish a republic. Sian was regarded as a Government stronghold.

Consular reports from Kiukiang say that the people of that town rose on the evening of Oct. 24. They burned the Taotai's yamen and declared in favor of the rebels. The Imperial troops made no serious resistance. Gen. Yin Tchang, who commands the Government forces, still remains in Sinyangchow. He demands reinforcements before taking the offensive, as he has learned, according to his own report to the administration here, that the rebels are abundantly supplied with artillery and have many adherents.

A steamer from Ichang, crowded with Chinese soldiers, reached Wuchang yesterday under a white flag Tenhetre Point, which is being fortified by the rebels, is considered of great strategical importance, as it commands the railway and river approaches to Hankow.

A messenger from Hankow says that the revolutionaries have advanced to a point eight miles north of that city, near to where the Imperialists in unknown numbers are entrenched in a position protected by swamps on both sides of the railway.

One of the latest messages from Sian says that the rebels are making overtures to the Mohammedans in the province of Kansu, which lies to the north of Sze-Chuen. The Mohammedans have been in open rebellion since August, and the sender of the message believes that the two revolutionary parties will join forces.

Kai-Feng, in the Province of Honan, is in a serious position because the local officials have practically abandoned the whole place to the soldiers. There have been several clashes between soldiers and police and there is much danger of rioting.

Pessimistic reports are at hand from Soo Chow, Tsi-Nan-Fu and other centres. Numerous soldiers have deserted the Chinese gunboats and joined the rebels.

It is officially reported that no news has been received from the tenth division, which left Ching Tang Tao by steamer on Oct. 17 for Hankow.

Fears are entertained for the loyalty of the garrison at Kiang-Yin, a strong fort on the lower Yang-Tse.

There is no information as to the whereabouts of Admiral Sahs' gunboats.

Imperial Successes.

Shanghai, Oct. 25.—A Chinese official despatch from Ying Tchang, the War Minister, reports Imperialist successes over the rebels on October 20 and 21 at Sinyanchow. The despatch states that the rebels had more than 600 killed while the losses of the Imperialists amounted to a few score.

A long letter from Gen. Liyunnheng to Admiral Sahs, whom the rebel leader addresses as "My Dear Master," is published. Gen. Li justifies his action in joining the rebels on the ground that when the revolt broke out his own troops were absent. He attempted to escape, but was captured and forced to take command. Since then, he says, he has found all the men, from the highest to the lowest, of one mind and thinks it better to belong to a united than a disunited party.

Communication, even by wireless, with Honan is cut off. The troops in that province were recently disaffected, but the trouble was settled by the payment of their wages.

Continuous Skirmishes.

London, Oct. 25.—A special from Pekin, dated yesterday evening, says that throughout Monday there was continuous firing and skirmishing between the rebels and the Imperialists near Hankow. The insurgents displayed bold tactics and engaged the Imperialists at many points.

In the meantime, says the correspondent, the northern army is pushing its way to the south, advancing with caution and clearing the ground in front scientifically with artillery. The remainder of the Government forces are fighting without any regard to order or method.

Passing of the Toll Road.

Brockville, Oct. 25.—The Townships of Elizabethtown and Augusta, through the County Council, is seeking to expropriate from the Lowell Plank road the toll road running from Brockville to Prescott, a distance of twelve miles, on which there are four gates. A board of arbitration commenced the hearing of evidence here yesterday to determine a fair valuation. The road was built in 1851, macadam being used for the first five miles and plank for the remaining seven. After two years the planks became broken, rendering the road so dangerous that the entire distance was made of stone.

It is one of the few remaining highways in these united counties upon which toll is collected.

Goderich Crew's Escape.

Goderich, Oct. 25.—The schooner Azov, of Goderich, was wrecked off Saginaw Bay on Sunday, and Captain McDonald, of Goderich, and his crew of four men, most of them Goderich boys, were forced to take to the yawl and spend Sunday night and all day Monday in the face of a fierce gale with high seas, trying to reach this shore.

They landed about ten miles from Goderich Monday night in a very exhausted condition, and were taken care of by farmers. The captain and part of his crew reached home late Monday evening.

Captain McDonald owned the schooner. His young daughter and two sons were also in the yawl.

Made Noted Capture.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—An important arrest was effected when Detectives Gorman and Lepage captured "Billy" Watts, who, the detectives say, is a noted cocaine fiend and dispenser. Watts' capture was accomplished after a four months' search by the authorities. Last spring he was arrested in Toronto on a charge of vagrancy, but the case was not proved.

Yesterday morning he was arraigned on four counts: selling cocaine, having it in his possession, vagrancy, and carrying a loaded revolver. To the first three he pleaded not guilty, and was remanded for trial. For carrying a loaded revolver he was fined $10 and costs.

Chief Geographer Dead.

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—Robert E. Young, D.L.S., chief geographer of the Dominion and superintendent of lands in the Interior Department, was found dead in his bed at his home here yesterday morning. He had retired at 10.30 Monday night, apparently in good health.

Painting For the "Victory."

CANADIAN LOYALTY

Earl Grey and Colonial Secretary Unite in Tribute to Liberal Chieftain

IMPERIALISTS ALL

London, Oct. 25.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Royal Canadian Institute banquetted Earl Grey yesterday evening, Rt. Hon. Louis Harcourt, Colonial Secretary, presiding, and Lord Minto, Sir J. Bevan Edwards, the Duke of Marlboro, Earl Carrington, Hon. A. Lyttleton, Earl Dundonald and Earl Brassey being among those at the head table. The general body of guests included practically all the leading men in London Canadian circles, the crush being so great that many guests were forced to dine in the ante-room. The total company numbered nearly 300.

Harcourt, in proposing Earl Grey's health, said his departure from Canada coincided with Laurier's resignation. He was quite sure there was no assembly of Englishmen who wouldn't wish at this moment to pay a tribute to that distinguished Prime Minister and express a grateful sense of the great services rendered so many years to the progress and prosperity of the Dominion to which he had devoted his intellect and energy. No divergencies upon the latest policy could detract from the warmth of gratitude felt for achievement of his past career. (Cheers.)

Turning to Earl Grey's return, Harcourt said it was no reflection upon his able and distinguished successor to say that Canada would gladly have seen Grey's governorship indefinitely prolonged.

Harcourt quoted many administrative acts for strengthening, solidifying and even extending the Dominion during Earl Grey's term of office. During the last five years the Canadian Government had been in close touch with the Washington ambassador, and through him had negotiated a series of treaties and arrangements of the highest possible value to the amicable relations of Canada and the United States.

"I am not referring at this moment," added Harcourt, amidst laughter, "to the recent reciprocity proposals. I don't think in my official position any advantage would be gained by discussing these circumstances. I had in mind other agreements, which in public estimation have been overshadowed by those proposals. Practically every outstanding question between Canada and the United States has either been settled or placed in a way of settlement."

He proceeded to say that Earl Grey had witnessed and assisted in the advance of the naval and military protective forces of Canada. During the life of his governorship, he had witnessed perhaps the greatest and most rapid extension of commercial and agricultural prosperity ever recorded in Canada's history.

Mr. Harcourt finally referred to the charm and ability displayed by Lady Grey and said: "We welcome Earl Grey back as a great governor, a good fellow and a true friend."

Earl Grey had a rousing reception on rising to respond. Alluding to his welcome, he said:

"It is a great reward for seven years' constant effort to serve Canada and the crown and I hardly think such a reward is deserved, when the conditions of my governorship considered. I have said more than once that I believe I have been privileged to occupy the most pleasant billet in the whole Empire. It is no ordinary privilege to be in an atmosphere of undiluted optimism and continued new development.

"I feel that, with the shadow of the governorship still upon me, it would be out of place to give expression to any individual views upon subjects of controversy.

"I can say, however, with the greatest confidence that, with the exception of an occasional crank here or there, it is impossible to find an annexationist throughout the whole of Canada. (Cheers.) I say with equal confidence that, notwithstanding some desire to the contrary, there is no expectation in Canada that the recent Canadian elections should be used for inducing any change into the tariffs of the United Kingdom. It cannot be too clearly understood that Canadians are as adverse to the idea of interfering in your local affairs as they are to any interference on your part in theirs.

"In justice to Sir Wilfrid Laurier, my affection and admiration for that distinguished statesman require me to say he and his Government were actuated by no annexationist sentiment in the policy they adopted at the polls. Sir Wilfrid was fully persuaded that his policy, if adopted, would strengthen both Canada and the crown. To secure free entry for the products of the farm and fisheries into a protected market of nearly one hundred millions by the purchase of reciprocal admission to products from the U. S. A., and by trifling duties on agricultural implements, which had been energetically demanded by the agricultural interests, appeared to Sir Wilfrid Laurier to be an economic advantage which he was bound to accept for his country when an unexpected opportunity placed it within his reach. It was certainly in no sense a policy of dislike to closer connection with the Mother Country.

"The people of Canada, however, sniffed a great danger in these proposals—(cheers)—rightly or wrongly, it is not for me to say. Thousands of Liberals feared their adoption might lead them into the U. S. A.; recollections of past hard treatment suffered from the U. S. A., and the present great abounding prosperity of the Dominion, all combined to strengthen the national resolve to vote down a policy which, however advantageous to their material interests, was one in which they accented possible danger to their fiscal independence and national autonomy.

"Canadians have shown that love of their country is superior to every other consideration, thereby justifying their belief in the Empire and their coming greatness. To those who do not know the Canadian people as I know them the revelation afforded by the recent elections of the strength, vigor and national sentiment of Canada to convince those already acquainted with the history and character of her people that her attachment to her national institutions and the connection with the Empire is far too deeply rooted ever to be overthrown.

"It may possibly be objected by some people — Quebec, and perhaps other provinces are opposed to participation in the naval defence of the Empire. For the moment that is true, but I honestly believe it is for the moment only. It is my conviction that the reluctance of the French descended citizens of Quebec is due not to any lack of appreciation of what the British Empire means to them, but solely to the lack of appreciation of what are the requirements of the Empire, to their exaggerated idea of its omnipotence.

"From the point of self interest there are none other than inhabitants of Quebec who stand to gain more from our naval supremacy. There is no part of the world where the Roman church enjoys equally great privilege as guaranteed to Quebec by the British North American Act. All of these great, free, exceptional privileges were secured to the Roman Catholics of Quebec by the British navy."

Against Church Union.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—When the subject of church union was discussed in the Baptist Convention of Ontario and Quebec last evening, the entire expression of opinion was against considering any amalgamation with sister churches, the general trend of argument being that union would mean complete surrender of the tenets and principles for which the church has stood in the four centuries of its existence.

Cayuga Hotelman Dead.

Cayuga, Oct. 25.—John A. Hoshall, proprietor of the Campbell House and a resident of this village for over fifty years, died yesterday morning. He was a Conservative in politics and a prominent mason. He will be buried on Thursday afternoon with Masonic honors.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

British Politician Deliberately Cuts His Throat

WAS WITH DR. JAMESON

London, Oct. 25.—Alfred Peter Hillier, Unionist member of Parliament for the North Division of Hertfordshire committed suicide by cutting his throat yesterday.

He was associated with John Hays Hammond and Dr. Jameson in the organization of the raid on the Transvaal, was president of the South Africa Medical Congress in 1893, and a member of the International Committee for the Prevention of Tuberculosis.

Alfred Peter Hillier, B.A., M.D., C.B., physician, retired, was elected to Parliament in 1910. He was consulting physician of the London open air sanitarium, and a councillor of the Royal Colonial Institute. Born in 1858, he was educated at Edinburgh University. In the Kaffir war of 1878-9, he served as a trooper. He was a member of the Reform Committee, Johannesburg, and was a political prisoner in Pretoria, 1895-6. He was nominated by the Prince of Wales as a delegate to the National Association for the Prevention of Tuberculosis in Berlin in 1899, and was the author of several books on medical subjects and relating to South Africa. Deceased was married, with a son and two daughters.

Sixty-Three Deaths.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—"The drowning accidents in the Lachine Canal are something dreadful to think of, and I have decided to bring up the matter before the Board of Control at once," said Mayor Guerin yesterday. "It is true that the controllers cannot order action to be taken, but what we can do is to go to Ottawa and interview the Government in regard to the matter.

"The stand the controllers will take is that it is criminal negligence that booms do not run along the canal edge so as to give a man a chance to save himself when he falls in the water.

"Only yesterday two bodies were taken from the canal and the usual verdict of accidental death was returned. The verdicts should have been criminal negligence.

"Sixty-three persons have been drowned there during the summer months. This is a most disgraceful condition of affairs. I am positive that with only ordinary precautions many of these lives would have been saved. I feel sure that when the situation is placed before the Ottawa authorities that this condition of affairs will be remedied."

Toronto University Standing.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—Toronto University continues to occupy front rank in point of attendance among the higher seats of learning on this continent. The official registration figures handed out by James Brebner, the registrar, yesterday afternoon, show that in spite of the higher matriculation standard required in practically every faculty, the total number of students in attendance at the university is equal to that of last year's record.

The total regular registration this session at the university is 3,513, which is about the same as the regular registration of last year.

At the end of last year the grand total in attendance at the university, both regular and occasional students, and from affiliated colleges was 4,144.

The registrar says this year's figures will amount to about the same as last.

Seat For Whits.

Brockville, Oct. 25.—The Recorder (Liberal) last night published a special from Delta, the centre of Leeds County, represented by George Taylor, M.P., stating that Mr. Taylor was there Monday and endeavoring to get a requisition signed by the members of the executive of his riding giving him permission to resign his seat in favor of Hon. W. L. White. The document was signed by the executive for Bastard and Burgess Townships.

It is said that Mr. Taylor will be called to the Senate, hence the reason for his resignation. The despatch concludes: "The Conservatives in this district say that the cabal to slate Taylor and make his seat easy for White will have a decided bearing on the chances of Mr. Dargavel for the Provincial House, aside even from the difficulties he has now in making the convention sure."

Many Delinquents.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—The sale of city properties by the sheriff for non-payment of taxes this year is the largest on record. The average number of lots placed under the hammer at such sales has been up-to-date seven or eight, but this year twenty-seven lots were disposed of.

The original list included 389 lots, but as usual, the taxes due were paid on most of them before the hour of the sale, and 27 were finally put up.

Refused Injunction.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—Mr. Justice Charbonneau has refused the interlocutory injunction applied for by Senator Beique to prevent arrangement being made by the Montreal Street Railway to merge the other railways of the island into the Montreal Tramways Co.

Fugitive Killed; Also Pursuer.

Middlesboro, Ky., Oct. 25.—In a running fight with a sheriff's posse early yesterday, Cal. McHaile, wanted for double murder at Pineville, was killed and Deputy Sheriff Thomas of the posse received wounds from which he died later.

It was announced yesterday that the next session of the Quebec Legislature will open in the first days of January. The date, while not definitely fixed yet, will most likely be the 8th or 9th.

The schooner Cornelia of Kingston, on her way to Oswego, had a thrilling time in a gale yesterday. She lost all her sails, and the steamer Sowards came along just in time to take her in tow.

Missing since Saturday, when he started for home with a wild horse, G. T. McClelland of Souris, Man., was found dead from cold and exposure on the open prairie yesterday. The horse was found dead nearby.

Archduke Ferdinand Charles, nephew of Emperor Francis Joseph, who recently renounced his rank and all privileges as a member of the Imperial family, has married in Switzerland the daughter of Hofrat Ozuber, a professor of engineering.

Yukon Is Conservative.

Vancouver, B.C., Oct. 25.—A Dawson despatch states that Dr. Thompson, Conservative, is elected in the Yukon by about 400 majority more than Congdon (Lib.).

This will make the Borden majority 50.

Fred. Congdon (Lib.) was elected to the Commons in 1900, his majority being 226.

Dr. Alfred Thompson represented the Yukon from 1907-8, when he retired to resume his practice. He has lived in Dawson since 1899. Both he and Congdon were born in Nova Scotia.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

"Is that message for me?" demanded Ganley, his huge figure blocking the doorway, his glance on the top sheet of the form-pad.

"No!" was the quick retort.

Ganley reached back and swung the cabin door shut.

"I'd like to glance over that message," suggested the man by the door. His tone was soft and purring, but there was a suggestion of claws behind the velvet.

"This is only ship's business," explained McKinnon, in an effort at appeasement. Yet he quietly ripped the written sheet from the pad, his spirit of latent obduracy now well stirred into life.

"Could I look over that message?" repeated Ganley, as quietly as before.

There was no mistaking the threat in his voice. McKinnon, eying him, saw his hand drop down to his side. The movement was quick and casual. But when the hand was raised again it held a revolver, a heavy, forty-four caliber thing of blue gun-metal, with a sawed-off barrel. The worn corners of the metal glimmered disagreeably, in baleful little touches of highlight, as Ganley held the barrel low, close in against the other man's startled body.

"What's this for?" asked McKinnon, his skirmishing thought frenziedly exploring the future, seeking for his next move and his reasons for it.

"It's for you!" was the quiet yet sinister answer.

"But what's the good of fool by-play like this?" protested the other, still wondering where his chance was to come in.

"Could I look over that message?" reiterated Ganley, with no trace of excitement in his voice.

The eyes of the two men met; they studied each other for a second or two of unbroken silence. Then the operator flung the sheet on the pine table before the other man. The situation allowed of no further equivocation.

"Read it, of course—if you want to!"

Ganley pounced on it, like a cat on a cornered mouse. He backed away to the door, but kept his revolver still poised in front of him while he read.

McKinnon, as he watched the gun-runner calmly restore the sheet of paper to his table, saw the chance he had at first hoped for slip past him.

"Don't you think we'd better kill that message?" Ganley suggested with a pregnant movement of his right hand.

"Why?" asked McKinnon. He was still trying to think, to gain time.

"You know why," retorted the gun-runner.

The operator looked at his apparatus, at the sheet of writing, and at the opponent who had his heel on the neck of the situation. Then he laughed in the purely passionless way of the man so submerged in bitterness that fate can bring him no further sting.

"I don't see why," he answered, still clutching about for some forlorn straw of deliverance.

Ganley came a step or two nearer.

"I'll tell you why," he said, drawing his gravely interrogative eyebrows closer to his flat nose-bridge.

"I've decided to be up here on this deck of yours to-night—it's going to be more comfortable than that cabin of mine."

"That'll only get Yandel down on you again!" parried the other.

"Mebbe it will—but seein' this is our last night at sea, I'm going to enjoy it. And the sound of any message, of any message whatever, going out on those wires up there, is going to spoil my night! Is that plain enough for you?"

He put the revolver back in his pocket and waited. The operator did not answer him. He knew that all he could do now would be to grope forward slowly and blindly; he could only crawl and test and wait, like a crustacean with foolishly waving feelers. Ganley, watching him, backed toward the door.

"I'll not say good-night," he purred, with mock affability. "If you're still in doubt about anything, you'll find me on the deck here all night!"

The operator watched him as he went through the door and as he wheeled about for one malignant and admonitory stare into the cabin. From the depths of his soul McKinnon resented that smile.

"You own this ship?" he asked, with a quietness that might have disturbed a less intrepid spirit. From that hour forward, he was beginning to feel, dissimulation would be useless.

"No, but I'm going to," was Ganley's placid retort. He had taken out one of his evil-looking thick, black cigars, and was proceeding to light it with the utmost leisure.

"And this is your apparatus?"

"And my particular little corner of the earth," responded Ganley, with the studiously voluptuous satisfaction of the idealist who has achieved his dream.

McKinnon's eyes narrowed. The taste of being beaten at the only game he knew how to play was growing very bitter in his mouth.

"And supposing I can't kill this message?" he ventured. Had the words not been in the form of an interrogation, they might have been claimed to carry the weight of an ultimatum.

The huge, red-faced figure with the black cigar leaned in through the narrow doorway.

"I think you will, though," was the vaguely menacing retort.

"And why?"

Ganley laughed a little.

"Do you s'pose I'm going to let a couple of children like you"—and he threw a world of contempt into the word "children" as he uttered it—"step in and try to stop my steamroller?"

"You haven't told me why," mildly inquired McKinnon, more and more becoming master of himself again.

"Well, this is why," said Ganley, and he leaned closer in through the door as he spoke. "If you don't choose to put a padlock on that wire, I'm going to put a padlock on you!"

"Just what does that mean?" was the quiet-voiced inquiry.

"It means that you'll kill that message, or I'll kill you!"

Then Ganley shut the cabin door, quietly, and the operator was left standing alone in his station.

CHAPTER XX
THE LISTENING ALLY

McKinnon was aroused by a quick, light knock, repeated for the second time. He took up his revolver, slipped it into the loose side pocket of his bath-robe, and cautiously opened the door.

It was Alicia Boynton who stepped in as he did so, pushing him sharply back and closing the door even more sharply after her.

Then she stood confronting him, with her finger to her lips, as a sign for silence. McKinnon had long since learned that great moments seldom accord with their setting, that catastrophic seconds are often wanting in ceremonial. His first impulse had been to warn her hurriedly away. Yet it was not the danger that surrounded her, but more the thought of his attire and its simplicity that disturbed and shocked him. His embarrassment, even at that moment, was greater than that of the calm-eyed girl's.

"What is it?" asked the operator, nettled by the intent look on her listening face.

She made a second sign of silence. Then she took a deep breath of relief. For the first time he noticed that she was fully dressed, as though for land travel. Something about her conveyed to him the passing impression that she was as disconcertingly well-groomed as she was incongruously at ease. Her face, under the heavy upturned veil, still carried its inalienable touch of youth and vigour, for all the anxious shadow about the eyes, which scarcely betrayed the fact that she had been passing troubled and restless nights.

"I have heard every word," she explained, in her low and intimate tones.

"Then you know what a mess we've made of it!"

"I was leaning on the rail, under the bow of the life-boat," she went on, disregarding his exclamation. "I waited until Ganley passed behind the officers' quarters. He's walking up and down, smoking—and waiting."

"Did he see you come in here?" asked McKinnon, distressed at the thought that here was no hospitality and no harbour he could extend to her, feeling that this fight was his own, and his alone.

"No; he did not see me. It was so hot below—I had been sitting on deck for an hour."

"You must go below!"

"But this means so much — tonight. I should be here, with you!"

The calm impersonality of her declaration seemed to clear the air like a thunder-clap. McKinnon knew but one moment of wavering.

"I'd rather you went below," he found himself saying, at the very moment that he felt most grateful for her presence there.

"Why?" she asked.

"There is going to be trouble here," he warned her. "You must go!"

"I couldn't, now," she answered, very simply. "And we are wasting time in talk when every moment is precious. What did you pick up by wireless?"

"I had the Princeton, at Torreblanca."

"The Princeton! Then we are wasting time—we're getting farther and farther away from her every minute."

"No, that's impossible if she's actually at Torreblanca. We're drawing a little closer to her, if anything. The danger is that the wireless-operator will leave his instrument before I can call again. And I've got to have power from the engine-room."

"Then I'll watch your key while you go below," she promptly suggested.

He pondered the problem for a moment or two.

"No, that would only be exposing yourself and inviting danger," she amended. "You must give me the message. I must take it to the engine-room."

"I couldn't see you taking a risk like this,' he protested, still puzzling over the problem.

"There's no risk, with me, because no one will suspect. And you must stay with your key."

He lifted his revolver from his bath-robe pocket, after another moment of thought.

"Then I want you to take this," he told her, holding it out for her. He noticed her puzzled glance up into his face, and then her quick and unequivocal movement of repudiation. They both knew, as they stood facing each other, that the ever-narrowing apex of the dilemma was crowding up to its final climateric point.

"I could not use it," she said, shrinking away from the glimmering and intimidating little instrument of death. "I will not even need it."

"Then you must not be seen leaving this station."

"But what will you do—when the power comes?" she asked.

"I'm going to send," was his reply. "I'll fight it out with him. Ganley can't dictate to the high seas of the world."

Even in anarchy and outlawry, he felt, there had to be some final substratum of reason. And Ganley had fallen back on nothing but brute force.

"Why couldn't I go to the captain?" she pleaded.

"That's worse than useless. He's drunk. And we'll only get him against us, for he'd order us to keep out of the mess. He'd fight shy of entangling alliances. He'd forbid me to send, for he's got his ship to clear from that port."

"But the Princeton would be his protection, as well as ours."

"That's true—but the man's brain is too brandy-soaked to understand such a situation. We've got to act ourselves, and on our own hook."

He told her, briefly, the way to the engine-room. Then he switched off his light, unlocked his door, and glanced out to see that the way was clear.

Yet he waited at that open door with his revolver in his hand, every moment of the time until she had crossed to the stair-head, until she had passed quietly down the brass-plated steps, until he had made quite sure that she was below-stairs.

Then he locked himself in again, and made a mad and desperate dash into his clothes. Then he unlimbered his revolver, looked over its chambers, brought out his box of cartridges, and saw that every cartridge was in place. He had, by this time, more or less made up his mind as to his line of procedure.

He had his natural rights, and they were going to be respected. There would be no more free-and-easy invasion of his station, no more buccaneer's airy threats of force. He had been made a football of for too long; he had been mauled and bullied and browbeaten like a street-curb panhandler. He was an official, with official duties to perform. The full sense of his responsibility came home to him, as he took thought of the vast and ponderous machinery behind him, of the reserved and gigantic forces of which he was a mere outrunner. The time had come to act, and he was going to act. And at the first movement of aggression or interference from Ganley, he would shoot—and he had long learned to pride himself on the fact that when he shot he seldom wasted powder.

As he waited for the engine-room's response to his dynamo he busied himself in barricading the cabin-window with a shelf-board wrenched from his closet, and in drawing out his trunk and standing it on end, to be shoved against the the locked door as a further re-enforcement against attack from outside. The wall-plates themselves, he knew, could never be penetrated by a bullet. It was the wooden-shuttered window and the door alone that needed defence.

No touch of fear rested on McKinnon as he worked out his plan, point by point, it was more perplexity as to the outcome of the movement, touched with wonder as to whether or not any contingency had been overlooked. He was glad of action, of something against which to direct his stored-up nervous energy. He regretted, vaguely, that Alicia had in any way been dragged into this trial by fire, that she had in any way been identified with a combat so sordid and demeaning. Yet he felt, in some way, that this final combat was to subject her to the acid-test of a final integrity. It would be unalloyed purity of purpose, he argued, that would keep her at his side during such an ordeal. He almost gloried in the thought that such an unequivocal and authentic seal was to be put on a relationship that had once seemed little more than fortuitous.

CHAPTER XXI
THE UNEXPECTED BLOW

McKinnon, ill at ease, tested his coils and wondered if Alicia had indeed succeeded in reaching the engine-room. Then he wondered if she were once more safely back in her cabin. Then all thought passed away from him, for the light patter of hurried footsteps, followed by an oath and an answering cry of alarm, sounded from outside his door.

"You keep out o' here!"

It was Ganley's voice, short and brusk. The knob of the locked door twisted and moved. The new-comer, whoever it was, must have caught hold of this knob from the outside. It was equally plain, from the sound of the sudden gasp and the scuffle that followed, that Ganley had flung this intercepted visitor aside from the door. It was then, and only then, that the listening operator realized who that new-comer must be.

McKinnon switched out his light before he opened the door, for he wanted every chance.

The first message that flashed to his brain was that it was very dark outside. The second was that a great malletlike hand had descended unexpectedly on his own, out of this darkness, and had sent his revolver rattling across the boards of the cabin floor. His next was the knowledge of clinching and writhing and struggling with a desperately fighting and heaving hulk that for a moment bore him back over his door-sill.

Then came a brief and bitter battle for what seemed to be a short-barrelled, heavy-butted revolver in one of the malletlike hands. The revolver fell away from them both in the hot and stifling blackness of the cabin, but still they clawed and panted and writhed from side to side.

"The lights!" cried the warning girl through the darkness.

Then came the sound of the door slammed shut, and the girl again crying to McKinnon to turn on the light. He dropped low and twisted sharply, tearing himself loose from the apelike arms.

"The light — turn on the light!" still cried the helpless girl, as though apprehensive of some danger he could not fathom.

McKinnon, still panting and shaking, sprang for his light-switch and snapped on the current. The blank darkness puffed into a sudden picture.

It showed in sparkling high-lights on the wireless apparatus. It revealed the huddled figure of Ganley crouching back against the sleeping-berth. It showed the white-faced and terrified woman close by the cabin door. But that was all; for in the next second the light went out again, and the cabin was once more blanketed in utter darkness.

But McKinnon, in that brief heart-throb of illumination, had caught and fixed in his mind's eye the position of his fallen revolver.

He was already on his hands and knees, on the floor, like a cat, crawling to the farther corner of his dynamo base.

The silence seemed something material, something smothering and choking the three watchers. No one knew from what quarter the bolt would strike. McKinnon's fingers padded feverishly yet silently about the floor, exploring the area in which his fallen revolver must lie. He thought he had it; but his fingers had closed only on his heavy, canvas-covered dumb-bell. He padded farther into the darkness, feeling along the dynamo base, wondering if it were blood or sweat that was trickling down his face.

Then he gave a gasp of relief, and fell back, slowly drawing himself upright as he retreated. He had recovered the revolver. He was armed again; he was once more able to face the situation. All he wanted now was to get the woman out of the way, out of the cabin, if possible. It was not going to be the sort of thing she should face. It was too late for half-measures. He had been subjected to too much; he had gone through too much. There could be no possibilities of further compromise. He felt, dimly, that it would be horrible; and yet he felt that it had to be. It was the inevitable and final movement toward which all others had centred.

He backed toward the door until his groping hand came in contact with its knob. Then he caught at the girl's arm, and half-pushed, half-dragged her toward the threshold, with a whispered "Quick!"

(To be continued.)

Tells of the Wonderful Benefits Obtained From

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Like many another Newfoundlander living far from doctors, Mr. Stone feels unbounded gratitude for the benefits obtained from the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills.

For years he had suffered from a congested condition of the liver and kidneys, with headaches, backaches, pains in limbs and body. Words fail to describe his sufferings as well as the gratitude he wants to express for the cure.

Mr. Alex. J. Stone, West Point, Nfld., writes: "I suppose you thought I had forgotten all about you when I got Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, but I haven't. You must excuse mistakes, for like many Newfoundland men, I have not much education, but I want to thank you many times for your medicine.

"I cannot tell you what I suffered from liver and kidney derangements, indigestion and constipation, nor can I find words to express how much good this medicine has done me. I feel better than I have for ve years and have given some of these pills to friends, who tell me they have done them a wonderful lot of good. I want to express my heartfelt gratitude for the benefit derived from the great medicine."

The Rayo Lamp

It Never Flickers

The long winter evenings give a woman a splendid chance for sewing or embroidery; but her eyes suffer from the strain unless she has a good light. The Rayo is the best lamp made.

It gives a strong, diffused light that is remarkably easy to the eyes. There is no glare to it; no flicker. It lights up a whole room. The Rayo is an economical lamp, too.

You get the most possible light-value for the oil burned; and the Rayo itself is a low-priced lamp. Yet it is a handsome lamp—an ornament to any room in the house.

The Rayo Lamp is easily lighted without removing shade or chimney; easy to clean and rewick. Made of solid brass, nickel-plated; also in numerous other styles and finishes.

Confined to His Home for Weeks.

"Heavy work, severe straining and evil habits in youth brought on Varicose Veins. When I worked hard the aching would become severe and I was often laid up for a week at a time. My family physician told me an operation was my only hope—but I dreaded it. I tried several specialists, but soon found out all they wanted was my money. I commenced to look upon all doctors as little better than rogues. One day my boss asked me why I was off work so much and I told him my condition. He advised me to consult Drs. Kennedy & Kennedy, as he had taken treatment from them himself and knew they were square and skillful. I wrote them and got The New Method Treatment. My progress was somewhat slow and during the first month's treatment I was somewhat discouraged. However, I continued treatment for three months longer and was rewarded with a complete cure. I could only earn $14 a week in a machine shop before treatment, now I am earning $21 and never loose a day. I wish all sufferers knew of your valuable treatment.

WHAT SHE THOUGHT

A Short Story

After the young woman in pink had lured the young man into a secluded seat under the palms on the plea that she was too tired to dance, she talked herself hoarse without being able to start a flow of conversation on his part. Then he coughed.

"There —— er —— was something I wanted to ask you——er—wanted to say," he began hesitatingly.

The young woman leaned over and adjusted her slipper rosette to conceal her gratified surprise.

"What was it?" she murmured, as she sat up and regarded him confidingly.

"Somehow," he said, "I feel that you always understand me,—you have a sympathetic nature."

"I am glad if you think so, Mr. Friller," the girl in pink said softly.

"Oh, I do!" declared the young man, earnestly. "It makes it easier——"

"I hope, Mr. Friller—Henry," the girl in pink said, looking at him with great seriousness, "that you feel it easy to say anything to me. Why, we've been friends so long! It was four years ago last January that we were introduced!"

"Was it?" asked the young man, startled.

"Do you think I could ever forget?" the girl in pink asked him, tenderly. "Oh, no, indeed."

"It's been a long time," agreed the young man. "By the way," he said, suddenly, "you know Antoinette Graves, don't you?"

The girl in pink wrinkled her brow a bit.

"Yes, I used to know Antoinette," she said. "I haven't seen much of her of late because really she's not in our crowd at all."

"Oh, is that so?" asked the young man in some surprise.

"No," the girl in pink told him. "Poor Antoinette simply dropped out of things—she is very odd, you know. I feel sorry for a girl who fails to be popular! Of course, I can't even faintly imagine how it seems, but I should think it would be awful?"

"As bad as that?" asked the young man.

"Goodness, yes," said the girl in pink. "You never see Antoinette anywhere. She hasn't been to a dance for a year or so. And she wears such funny clothes! Of course, you can't really blame a girl if she has no instinct for style and doesn't care to keep up with things! Why, last winter, when everyone was pawning her rings to buy enough hair to keep up with the styles, I saw Antoinette going around with just her own hair on——"

"She has a lot of it," said the young man.

"But fancy," cried the girl in pink. "No matter how much hair you have you can't put it up in style if one end of it is fastened to your head! She just didn't care! And she's never had a hobble skirt to her name. She's gone right on wearing her last year's tailor suit as though she felt perfectly up to date in it. Don't you like to see a girl progressive?"

"Er—yes," said the young man. "But——"

"I really don't like to say anything that sounds like running another person down," went on the girl in pink, in a pained voice. "That isn't my nature, as you know, Mr. Friller—Henry. But Antoinette always struck me as being terribly empty-headed! I never could get her to settle down to a serious talk—she would act restless or laugh or move away. Why, she was almost rude the last time I saw her. I was nearly distracted trying to decide between two band trimmings for a dress and I begged Antoinette, whom I met, to talk it over—and she said she couldn't, as she had an appointment with her mission class or something. She was just selfish and didn't care.

"I think a really sweet-natured girl would take some interest in her friend's affairs, don't you? I never laid it up against Antoinette, though. She's just odd.

"Poor Antoinette! I wonder what life can hold for unfortunate girls like her! They have nothing to look forward to! But I try not to dwell on such things. There is no use in harrowing one's self over the misfortunes of others. However, I feel things so deeply. I really suffer, Mr. Friller—Henry, if I think everyone isn't as happy and contented as myself. I——

"But you said you had something to ask me?"

"I asked it," confessed the young man, looking red and uncomfortable. "I asked what you thought of Antoinette. You see, I wanted to tell you that she and I are engaged."—Chicago News.

TRAIN THE BOY IN POLITENESS

Long before I had any sons of my own I made up my mind that, if I ever had the training of a boy, I should begin, as soon as he could understand anything, to teach him the small things that constitute good manners. So many boys I have known, and men, too, who at heart are good and kind, and really refined, yet lack so large a part of the little courtesies that it is hard to believe they have been well brought up. In most cases it is the fault of the mother. She feels that it is much more important to form the character of a little boy, that his manners can wait till he is older. The result is that one sees boys and men who rarely forget to be polite outside of their homes, and yet seem to think it unnecessary to treat their own mother in the same way.

My view is that there is no need to neglect the character because you pay attention to the manners. I think I have succeeded. As soon as my first little boy wore trousers I taught him that he must take off his hat as soon as he came into the house or when a lady spoke to him in the street. That he must rise from his chair when I came into the room, must pull out my chair at the dining table, must never walk out of the room before a lady, and all the other little polite ways we like to see in men. It has never been any trouble to keep him up to these things; he learned so young that it soon became second nature. H.D.W.

HEAD FIRST

Above all things take care of your hair, your appearance depends on the care you give your hair. The healthy hair you have seen and wished for is yours if you will use Sageine. There is no dressing so nice and so invigorating to the scalp. Soft, thick, luxuriant hair is the result of a Sageine treatment. SERVICEABLE RECIPES

GREE NPEPPERS WITH TOMATOES

Cut the tops from sweet green peppers, remove the white membrane and seeds and cover the peppers with boiling water. Boil them for several minutes, then take from the stove and allow them ot get cold. Make a filling of bread crumbs and chopped tomato pulp from which all the juice has been pressed, and season with salt and pepper. Fill the peppers, (first draining them) with this mixture, set them close together in a baking pan, pour a little stock about them, or pour around them a little hot water, and cook until tender, but not broken. Put upon a dish, make a thick tomato sauce of the remaining tomato juice and pour it about the peppers just before serving.

PEACH JELLY

Peel a peck of peaches, quarter and stone them, cracking a dozen of the peach pits well and stirring them in with the fruit. Add a cup of water and stew the fruit until soft, then strain and return the juice to the fire, afer measuring it carefully. Boil for twenty minutes, then add a pound of heated granulated sugar for each pint of juice. Boil up once and pour into glasses. When cool cover with paraffin.

CORN PUDDING

Boil eight ears of corn and grate the kernels from the cobs. Beat three eggs very light, add to them a pint of milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, the grated corn, a teaspoonful of sugar, and salt and pepper to taste. Turn into a buttered pudding dish and bake in a steady oven until set and browned. Serve as a vegetable, sending to table in the dish in which it was cooked.

CHEAP DEVIL CAKE

Cream one-half cup of butter with two cups of sugar, add one-half cup of sour milk, two beaten eggs, one-half cake of chocolate or two tablespoonfuls of cocoa dissolved in half cup of water, one teaspoonful of vanilla, one teaspoonful of warm water and two and a half cups of sifted flour, or enough to make a good cake batter. Bake in layer tins.

PLUM JELLY

Wash the plums and put them over the fire and beat very slowly. When the fruit is hot and broken take it from the fire and put through a jelly bag. Measure the juice and for each pint of it allow a pound of sugar, putting this in the oven in shallow pans to heat, while you return the juice to the fire and boil for twenty minutes, skimming off the scum that rises to the surface. Take care that the sugar in the oven does not melt, but stir it often, and leave the doors open. When the juice has boiled for twenty minutes add the sugar, stir until it is dissolved and fill your jelly glasses.

SWEET PEACH PICKLES

Peel the peaches and to ten pounds of them allow four and one-half pounds of granulated sugar and a quart of vinegar. Lay the peaches in the sugar for an hour, then drain off all the liquid that flows from them, add to it a cupful of water and boil until the scum rises on it no longer. Put the peaches into this syrup and boil for five minutes. Take out the peaches and lay on platters, while you add the vinegar and cinnamon, cloves and mace to taste to the syrup, and boil for fifteen minutes. Pack the fruit in jars and fill these to overflowing with the syrup.

HOLLANDAISE SAUCE

Cook together two heaping tablespoonfuls of butter and two of flour until they bubble, but do not allow them to brown, then add a cup of boiling water, gradually, and stir until thick and smooth. Take from the fire and pour a few drops at a time, and beating steadily, upon a beaten egg. When smooth and yellow add a drop at a time, a teaspoonful of salad-oil and, after that a teaspoonful of lemon juice. Season with salt and pepper to taste and serve.

WASHING THE HAIR

The chances that many women take about most things in life, and about their health in particular, are really astonishing.

For instance, a simple matter of washing one's hair is fraught with danger when it is done without knowledge, in a careless manner, and at an inopportune moment.

We have all been told that it is dangerous to wash one's hair at night. Yet nearly every woman who is busy does this very thing. So little time have they to call their own that it becomes a question when such necessary tasks shall be accomplished, and many women solve the problem by washing their hair at night, since they cannot afford the luxury of a hairdresser in the day.

This is the worst possible time to choose for such a task. The body is exhausted after a trying day's work, and is more open to attack from any cold germ that may be floating about.

Overcome with fatigue, one is naturally careless about drying the hair, so one invariably goes to bed without its being thoroughly done. And here is where the danger lies.

The hair is damp and the window open, so the air blows upon the head. Many cases of total deafness have been brought on in just such a manner. Yet women constantly run this risk rather than use part of their day for this task.

And they are now indulging in another and even more dangerous method. From Paris came the word that a gasoline washing is productive of brilliant and glossy locks and a healthy scalp. Consequently one hears of women everywhere plunging their heads recklessly into basins of gasoline. Could anything be more fraught with danger?

It may be a beneficial thing for the locks, though some consider it too drying to be healthful since it burns up all the natural oil of the scalp, but the gasoline washing should never under any circumstances be given by anyone but an experienced hairdresser and on the authority of a skin specialist.

One young woman who had heard of the wonderful benefit of such a method ordered a can of gasoline from the garage, filled a basin, and plunged her head into it. The gasoline got into her eyes and ears, and had such an effect upon her skin that the face was irritated and she endured torture.

The suffering was as acute as if she had been actually burned and relief was only attained after salves and oils had been applied. Then, too her consternation she found her scalp in a worse condition than before. Her hair was dry and the scalp so parched that she was days getting the natural oil back and her locks glossy again.

TWO MEN OF ABILITY

A man left his umbrella in the stand in a hotel recently, with a card bearing the following inscription attached to it. "This umbrella belongs to a man who can deal a blow of 250 pounds weight. I shall be back in ten minutes." On returning to seek his property he found in its place a card thus inscribed. "This card was left here by a man who can run two miles in an hour. I

Cured of Shingles and Eczema

Mr. J. H. Jarvis, Kingston

By Cuticura Soap and Ointment. Chest Raw, Bleeding and Itchy.

"I just want to say a good word for Cuticura Soap and Ointment. In November, 1909, I had what the doctors call shingles and eczema. My chest was raw and bleeding and itchy. I was that way all winter. It was not so bad in the summer. In September it got worse. I had the best doctors treating me, but did me no good, and I was all run down in health. In November, 1910, it got worse again. I sent to you for a sample cake of Cuticura Soap. You sent it to me and I got a box of Cuticura Ointment. I have used two boxes and on the third one it has cured me of shingles and eczema. I am delighted with them and do feel pleased to think I have something I have confidence in. Should anyone be suffering as I did, I hope that they will do as I did, and I am sure of the results. I am recommending them from experience." (Signed) J. H. Jarvis, 7 Ann St., Kingston, Ont., May 30, 1911.

For more than a generation Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment have afforded the speediest and most economical treatment for itching, burning, scaly and bleeding skin and scalp humours, of young and old. A single set is often sufficient. Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold throughout the world, but to those who have suffered much, lost hope and are without faith in any treatment, a liberal sample of each with 32-p. booklet on the skin will be mailed free, on application. Address Potter Drug & Chem. Corp., 6 Columbus Ave., Boston, U. S. A.

Stomach Blood and Liver Troubles

Much sickness starts with weak stomach, and consequent poor, impoverished blood. Nervous and pale people look good, rich, red blood. Their stomachs need invigorating for, after all, a man can be no stronger than his stomach.

A remedy that makes the stomach strong and the liver active, makes rich red blood and overcomes and drives out disease-producing bacteria and cures a whole multitude of diseases.

Get rid of your Stomach Weakness and Liver Laziness by taking a course of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery — the great Stomach Restorative, Liver Invigorator and Blood Cleanser.

You can't afford to accept any medicine of unknown composition as a substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery," which is a medicine of KNOWN COMPOSITION, having a complete list of ingredients in plain English on its bottle-wrapper, same being attested as correct under oath.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets regulate and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

Pure-air oven retains the turkey's flavor

You should just taste the turkey roasted in the Pandora pure-air oven. None of the flavor is lost, as in ordinary ovens where air becomes "stale," through improper ventilation. Instead, all its rare delicacy of flavor is accentuated to the fullest degree —for Pandora owners' enjoyment. ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴ ∴

So perfect is the system of ventilation that air in Pandora oven cannot possibly become "stale" or oven ever smell "stuffy." ∴ ∴ ∴ 17

THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS

1—The Pussycaterpillar wants to take the Tiny Tad
To where some Apple-dumplings and some cakes are to be had.

2—They reach the land of cakes and pies and other baker's things;
And there they search for Meadoughnuts and Cucookies with wings.

3—"Oh, goody!" cries the Tiny Tad. "Oh, what is this I see!
It must be a Mince-spider and he's coming straight to me!

5—The Tiny Tad has eaten well, he mounts his trusty steed,
And homeward to his camp he goes at rather doubtful speed.

6—"I'll draw a picture now," he says unto his comrades three.
"A Caterpillarsturation of the beast that carried me!"

IS HAPPINESS WITHIN REACH?

Do you know any happy people? How many? Would the fingers on one hand be too many to count them? I may say of a half dozen people "I think they are happy," but are they? If I put the question to any one of them, would he hesitate?

Most of us recognize our miseries, but fail to se our good fortune. The commonplace things, which, after all, are the only things that count, we deem unworthy of ecstasy. Our lives, we say, are in the shadow. A dull round. A deadly routine. Do you recognize your own words? How many of you wake in the morning and say: "I am happy."

Yet, might you not say it with truth? Wherein lies your unhappiness? What are your problems? Is it money that you lack? Or love? Would you appreciate them if you had them? After the first novelty has worn off we are so apt to take things for granted. When we dream of fine houses, of yachts, and of motors, we believe that by the possession of them we achieve our heart's desire. Yet what would really happen? In a short time they would become an old story, and we would find ourselves still restless, still at odds with ourselves and with the whole world.

You will say, "You are talking now to the rich—we could not hope for motors or yachts or cottages at Newport. Well, then, take your own little aspirations. Did you not think that, if you went to college, the world would stretch out afterwards in one long road of contentment? You have finished your four years of study; are you radiant over the result? When you met the man you afterwards married you felt that to gain his love would be rapture. Yet, now that the honeymoon is past, are you still thanking the stars for what you have received?

As a matter of fact the happiest people are those who cover everyday worries and unpleasant occurrences with a mantle of idealism. They refuse to take life as a hard thing. They say, "Mine is a lonely life, and often I am forced to bawl my song. "The Jolly Life I Lead," for fear I should hear the undercurrent of misgiving and listen for naught else. So, like Figaro, I make haste to laugh, and thus continue to delude myself, till, by and by, the mood passes, and I can look up at the stars and open sky and know that I am in tune with it. That is a great business of ours, I assure you, to make a harmony."

Is your life a harmony or a discord? I dyou answer that you are out of tune, I can hear you say, "But it is the fault of others." You blame your office associates, or the members of your family, or something or somebody beside yourself. Yet, I tell you this, that a serene spirit can accomplish wonders. To meet your little worries with a laugh, to decide your big problems and then forget them, to lok beneath the surface, and see the good in others, is to find something so nearly approaching happiness that it will be hard to draw the line. If happiness means to you excitement, possession, achievement, you may not find it. But if it means joy in the things which are at hand, in the love which is yours, then it is easily within your reach, if you will only put out your hand and take it.

HAVE YOU A FRIEND?

Two men have stated to me recently, "I have no friends." At first their assertion shocked me. I reproved them with the somewhat trite expression, "To have a friend you must be one."

On second thought, however, I decided that there was all the difference in the world between the two men. In the case of one the lack of friends was a fault, in the other a virtue.

The first man lives in a big city. "For fifteen years," he said, "I have met people, dined with them, worked with them, played with them, yet at the end of all that time I feel that no one of them cares whether I live or die." He is cynical and slightly bitter, his enthusiasm dead, his affection stunted.

The other man is not cynical, nor bitter. He has a love for all humankind, yet he admits none to intimacy. He believes that, "He is the strongest who stands alone.' 'He is a friend to all, but intimate with none. A vivile yet helpful personality, he achieves his own ends and makes no enemies.

Between these two extremes there should be a happy medium. It is surely not necessary to put away entirely those who would give us comfort and understanding and sympathy. When Charles Kingsley was asked to name the secret of his success, he replied: "I had a friend." Some natures demany intimacy, the support of other personalities to supplement their own. Yet we all know of our disappointments in those whom we have trusted and believed in, to whom we have felt ourselves necessary. Such disillusions often leave us adrift on a sea of doubt. We say to ourselves: "Is friendship worth while?"

As a matter of fact, it is not wise to cling too long to waning friendships. I do not mean by this that we should be vacillating or unfaithful, but as we develop we have new requirements; these our old friends do not always supply, hence, we must look about us for other inspirations. We need not throw away old friendships as we would a worn glove, but we should not feel hurt when there comes a parting of the ways. The girl with whom you went to school may, in the days of youthful gayety, have fitted into your life perfectly. Since then, however, you have had sorrow, and care, you have developed along intellectual lines. She is still a social butterfly. Have you anything in common? Anything you should cling to? I think not, and I think, too, that you are only weakening yourself by trying to continue such an intimacy indefinitely.

There is something pathetic in our insistence upon the friendship ideal. There is something beautiful in it, too, and I have nothing to say against the two souls which are bound together by ties of affection which can never be broken. But in many old friendships where all affection has died, we cling only to a dead past, and our strength is sapped by our allegiance.

My father's best friend was a man, one of Nature's gentlemen, a fisherman upon the upper Potomac. Separated though they were by environments and education they came together by virtue of their innate nobility of character. Such a friendship can never die, there is nothing artificial in it, nothing forced. When you make such an acquaintance you have found the treasure of your life. You will have the right to say, "I have a firend," and in your heart of hearts you will know that nothing can ever come between you.

HUNTING OUTFITS TO RENT

INSPECTOR OF PALACES.

One Royal Official In England Is Very Little Known.

Mr. Sands, the inspector of Buckingham Palace, is an official the public hear little of, but he nevertheless holds an important and responsible position, and at the end of the London season when the Court leaves Buckingham Palace has an especially busy time of it.

It is then that what is known to most householders as "Spring cleaning" is done at Buckingham Palace, and the work is carried out under the direction and supervision of Mr. Sands.

Several weeks before it is begun, says Pearsons, he inspects all the departments in the palace, makes a note of any repapering or painting that will be required to be done in any of them. He also inspects all the lighting arrangements, and the water supply fittings, and sees that the drinking water is carefully tested.

A report of the results of the inspection is then made out and submitted to the King. When it has been passed by His Majesty the work recommended to be done by the inspector is put in hand as soon as the Court leaves London at the end of the season.

Every apartment where any papering or painting is to be done is cleared of every vestige of furniture. Many of these rooms may contain immensely valuable ornaments and pictures. These are all packed in specially designed steel-lined cases, this is done by the inspector's staff, and under his personal supervision.

A list is made of all the articles that are packed and given to the inspector, who locks the cases and takes charge of the keys. The cases are then sent down to one of the large strong-rooms, of which there are three on the basement floor of the palace where they are kept until the apartments from which the various articles have been removed are ready to be furnished again.

The large furniture is removed during the cleaning out or papering and painting of any apartment to a very spacious store-room on the second floor.

Apart from the rooms that are repapered and painted, every room in the palace is cleaned out at this time of the year. The carpet in each room is first of all cleaned by the vacuum process and then it is taken up and the floor and all the woodwork thoroughly scrubbed.

Twelve rooms a day are cleaned out in this way until every room in the palace has been done. A staff of ten washerwomen do the washing. Several of the personal and state reception rooms at the palace are, of course, not carpeted, the floors being of old polished oak. The floors of each of these apartments during the annual cleaning have to be repolished, a laborious task which takes several weeks to complete.

Apart from the work mentioned the inspector of the palace has a great many other things to see to. He has to see that a host of minor repairs throughout the palace are attended to, and has to see that everything from the locks on the doors to the window sash cords are in perfect order before he leaves the palace.

All the clocks in the palace are overhauled at this time of the year. This alone is in itself a big business, and it is done by contract. There are over three hundred clocks in the palace, and some of them are immensely valuable. There is a clock in the Queen's boudoir which was in the possession of Queen Elizabeth.

"The Only Thing That Will Relieve Neuralgia."

The piercing pains of Neuralgia, which often follows a bad cold or La Grippe, are frequently almost unbearable and few medicines afford any relief to the sufferer.

"I am a rural mail carrier and have been a user of the Dr. Miles medicines for years.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills can't be beaten. They are the only thing I have found that will relieve my neuralgia and I have tried most everything, besides medicine from the doctor. I am willing to tell anyone what the Anti-Pain Pills did for me."

CHARLES HILDERBRANDT,
Box 205 Woodville, Ohio

If you, like Mr. Hilderbrandt, "have tried most everything" in vain, why not do as he did, fight your aches and pains with Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills. Let the pills bear the brunt of the battle. No matter how stubborn the contest, they will come out victorious.

Dr. Miles' Anti-Pain Pills stand on their record, which is a long list of cures extending back a generation.

Druggists everywhere sell them. If first package fails to benefit, your druggist will return your money.

TALK OF FIELDING

He May Be Called on to Lead the Opposition.

Ottawa, Oct. 25.—The mantle of Opposition leader may after all adorn the shoulders of Hon. W. S. Fielding. The Graham boom has flattened out during the last few days, the Liberal effort to obtain an acclamation for the ex-Minister of Railways in return for acclamations for the Ontario Ministers, having been so far unsuccessful.

Mr. Fielding, on the other hand, might not be opposed in Yarmouth, and could come back in time for the second session. B. B. Low, who won the Yarmouth seat, cannot resign till there is a Speaker, and even then the writ might not be issued at once.

There is no certainty yet as to the duration of the session. The probabilities are for a short session before Christmas, and another beginning in the spring, but many Ministers prefer a session extending into the new year, after which a comprehensive legislative program could be arranged.

R. B. Bennett of Calgary will move the address in reply to the speech from the throne, seconded by Arthur Sevigny of Dorchester.

Dr. Sproule, the new Speaker, comes to Ottawa to-day and will superintend the general re-arrangement of rooms, etc. An army of charwomen has been turned loose in the House of Commons.

A Cabinet Council was held yesterday, presided over by Hon. George E. Foster. No appointments were made.

Register All Chinamen.

Washington, Oct. 25.—Commissioner-General of Immigration Keefe, in his annual report, lays special stress on Chinese immigration. Most of the Celestials are coming over the Canadian border. Owing to the length of the border, it is impossible for agents to keep these activities within bounds.

Last year more than 8,000 Chinamen landed in Canada and a great percentage of these have entered the United States. The ease with which Chinamen can get into the United States from Canada has caused an increase of more than 100 per cent. in number of immigrants, who have entered the Dominion within the past five years. Canadian statistics give 22,000 Chinamen residents, although it's known that two or three times that number have entered the country in the past decade.

Keefe will advise Secretary Nagel that the only way to handle the Chinese situation is to register all Celestials now in this country, irrespective of the manner of their entry, and to allow them all to stay here. He will suggest that Congress then pass a law that every Chinaman found without registration papers be deported.

Osborne Is Discharged.

London, Oct. 25.—The case of Chas. Ackroyd Osborne of Montreal, came before Justices Darling, Bankes and Lush yesterday in the Divisional Court. The Solicitor-General appeared for the crown, Huntley Jenkins, instructed by Mr. Davis, for the prisoner, submitted that there was not sufficient evidence of the commission of an offence under the Canadian criminal code, and further that all the facts were not disclosed. On these and other grounds application was made for the prisoner's immediate discharge.

After the Solicitor-General had opened the case the court held that the prisoner should be immediately discharged. Justice Darling said there was not the necessary evidence of the offence having been committed in Canada. It was not suggested that the prisoner had removed goods, though there was evidence that he disposed of them, but that was insufficient. Osborne was accordingly discharged forthwith.

Settlers For Canada.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—Sir James Whitney is entirely in accord with the Duke of Sutherland's plan to bring out a large number of agricultural laborers from England and Scotland to the farms of Canada.

Yesterday the duke held a conference with Sir James and the other Cabinet Ministers, and he explained the proposal and outlined it in a general way. His grace is following this procedure in his tour all through Canada, making it a point to explain his scheme to each of the Provincial Governments, as well as to individuals to see if they are in sympathy with the purpose in view.

After the conference was over, Sir James told the newspapermen that he and his confreres were unanimous in endorsing the scheme proposed.

"It is very praiseworthy," said he, "and we told the Duke of Sutherland that when the project is got into concrete form the Government of Ontario would help him in every possible way."

Will Resume Practice.

Montreal, Oct. 25.—On the eve of his retirement from public life, His Honor L. J. Tweedie, Lieutenant-Governor of New Brunswick, who is at a prominent local hotel, announced that he will resume the practice of his legal profession. At the same time he admitted the possibility of being found in the political arena at some future date.

A Seat For Mr. Cochrane.

North Bay, Oct. 25.—George Gordon, Conservative member-elect for Nipissing, has agreed to resign his seat in favor of Hon. Frank Cochrane. There is strong talk of opposition from the Liberal camp.

MARKET REPORTS.

Liverpool and Chicago Wheat Futures Close Lower—Live Stock—Latest Quotations.

CHICAGO, Oct. 24.—Shutting down of flour mills at Minneapolis to-day acted as a wet blanket on the market for wheat. Notwithstanding big cash sales of the cereal, closing figures were a shade to ¼c to ⅝c lower than last night. Corn finished ⅛c to ¼c higher; oats unchanged to ⅛c to ⅜c up, and hog products varying from an unaltered level to 10c to 12½c decline.

The Liverpool market closed to-day ⅝d to ¾d lower than yesterday on wheat, and ⅜d lower on corn. Antwerp closed ⅛c lower, Berlin ⅝c lower, Paris ⅛c to ¼c lower, and Budapest ½c lower.

Montreal Grain and Produce.

MONTREAL, Oct. 24.—Business in Manitoba spring wheat over the cable was very quiet, owing to the fact that the demand was poorer, and bids in most cases out of line. The local market for American corn is much stronger, owing to the small supply, and prices have advanced. Oats are quiet, but firm. A good trade is passing in flour for local and country account, but the export demand is quiet. There continues to be a good enquiry for bran for export account. Cheese is quiet, and butter fairly active.

CATTLE MARKETS.

Toronto Live Stock.

May Be Rev. Dr. Burke.

Toronto, Oct. 25.—A rumor was in circulation yesterday in Roman Catholic circles that the Rev. Dr Burke, president of the Catholic Church Extension and editor of the Catholic Register, would be the next Archbishop of Toronto. The leaders of the church in the city stated that they had not been advised that such was the case.

"Rev. Dr. Burke's recent visit to Rome might mean something," was the way one of the fathers of the church viewed it.

HOME FROM THE BAPTIST CONVENTION

Peterborough Delegation Returned From the East This Morning and Report a Most Successful Montreal Gathering

DR. SCOTT HONOURED

The Peterborough delegation, which was in attendance at the Ontario and Quebec Convention of the Baptist Church, held in Montreal last week, returned on the early train this morning and report a most successful convention. The outstanding features of the gathering were the decision against Church Union and the consolidation of the convention boards of the Northwest Territories, the Maritime Provinces and Ontario and Quebec into a Dominion Board, for the purpose of controlling and directing the Foreign Mission work.

Dr. Scott of Peterborough, was honoured in being elected First Vice-President of the Convention. For the first time in its history the Convention has a French-Canadian president, Dr. Therrian having been elected to the head of the convention. Rev. J. R. Webb of the Murray Street Baptist Church, took part in the programme, giving an address in connection with the Church Edifice Board.

There was a large attendance of delegates and the convention, which continued for a week, was productive of good results. Those who attended from Peterborough were Rev. J. R. Webb of the Murray Street Baptist Church, Rev. W. C. Riddiford of Park Street Baptist Church, Rev. J. B. Bonner of Gilmour Memorial, Dr. and Mrs. Scott, Mr. and Mrs. Garbutt, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Harding, and Mr. John Riddell of Murray St. Baptist Church and Mrs. Darling of Gilmour Memorial Church.

STILL WEAK FROM HOT SPELL

Physicians say that the unusual and terrific heat of last summer did great damage to many people who do not even suspect it. There are many right in this town who are feeling weak, listless and discouraged, losing flesh and going into a decline on account of the strain of last summer.

A Red Bank, N. J., man, Mr. Walton Cullington, has found what to do in such cases. He says: "When I was badly rundown, growing weak and losing flesh, I took Vinol to build me up and make me strong. It has been perfectly satisfactory, and I would not take anything for the good Vinol did me. I am all right now."

It would be a great blessing if all who are in broken health, whether old, middle-aged or young, could know that Vinol is the one thing they need to make them well and strong again. We can prove by people you know well that Vinol, our delicious cod liver and iron preparation without oil, is the greatest blood builder and strength creator known, and we guarantee it to give satisfaction. McDermid and Jury, corner George and Charlotte streets; also Payne's drug store, corner George and Simcoe streets, Peterborough, Ont.

DELEGATES TO CONFERENCE

The congregation of the Springville Presbyterian church have appointed Rev. Dr. Marsh as minister and Mr. Harry Clarke, chairman of the Managing Board to be their delegates at the Laymen's Missionary Movement conference to be held in Hamilton on Nov. 8, 9 and 10. The Christian Endeavour Society has selected Mr. Fred Elliott as their representative, and other members of the congregation may go on their own responsibility.

FOR THE STOMACH

Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets remedy stomach troubles by aiding nature to supply the elements the absence of which in the gastric juices causes indigestion and dyspepsia. They aid the stomach to digest food and to quickly convert it into rich, red blood and material necessary for overcoming natural body waste.

Carry a package of Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets in your vest pocket, or keep them in your room. Take one after each heavy meal and prove our assertion that indigestion will not bother you.

We know what Rexall Dyspepsia Tablets are and what they will do. We guarantee them to relieve indigestion and dyspepsia. If they fail we will refund your money. Three sizes: 25 cents, 50 cents, and $1.00. Remember, you can obtain Rexall Remedies only at our store—The Rexall Store—McDermid & Jury.

NINETEEN-YEAR-OLD BOY CHARGED WITH SELLING HAY HE DID NOT OWN

Was Arrested in Toronto Yesterday and Brought Back to Peterborough by Detective Newhall---Appeared in Court This Morning But Was Remanded Until This Afternoon.

Louis Viener, a Toronto boy, who for some time has been working for the Carmichael Flour and Feed Co., of Cannington, was arrested at 280 Parliament street, Toronto, by Detective Taylor, charged with theft. A car of hay was shipped to Savigny Bros. here a few days ago from the Carmichael Co., and the former refused to accept the hay, it not being up to the agreement in quality. Viener, it is said, knew all about the transaction and is alleged to have come here and sold the carload to Mr. Frank White, flour and feed merchant, for $115, pocketed the money and went to Toronto. At all events, Mr. White claims that he purchased the hay from the lad, and when he went to unload the hay, the station agent stopped him, at the same time advising him of the facts of the case, so far as the Carmichael-White transaction was concerned. Detective Newhall brought the lad from Toronto, and he appeared in court this morning, but none of the parties were ready to go on with the case, so it was enlarged until this afternoon at 3 o'clock. Viener's father is proprietor of the Viener Flour and Feed Co., of Toronto, and arrived in the city last night. Mrs. Viener was here last night, but proceeded to Cannington, and will be here for the trial this afternoon.

CONSERVATIVE DISCONTENT WITH PROVINCIAL REPRESENTATION

Harmony Lacking in Conservative Camps---Two Ministers Will Have to Fight for Renomination---Conservative Says There Will be a Change of Twenty Conservative Seats.

TORONTO, ONT., OCT. 25.—(Special.)—All is not merry as the proverbial marriage bell in the Conservative ranks throughout Ontario. In fact, worried organizers are hurrying hither and thither in ineffectual effort to patch up trouble almost everywhere.

The trouble is from within, more than without. Conservative members going back confidently to their constituencies for renomination have had rude awakening. Many of them find themselves in grave danger of losing their conventions, and anxious hurry-up calls have been despatched for assistance.

Two Ministers, Hon. Dr. Reaume and Hon. Col. Matheson, are scheduled to fight for party renomination. Both are promised strong opposition, in their respective Conservative conventions, and this despite the fact that Col. Matheson was returned for South Lanark by acclamation in 1908. Moreover, Hon. Dr. Pyne is very uneasy over the situation in Toronto over which he presides.

One Already Rejected.

Mr. John S. Gallagher, M.P.P. for Frontenac since 1898, has already politically bit the dust, being rejected by his convention last week, and Conservatives are openly predicting that many others will follow in his wake. The Yorks are much discussed, and, according to the rank and file of the party, efforts will be made to oust Dr. Forbes Godfrey in the west and Mr. Alex. McCowan in the east. Dr. Godfrey's recent public eulogy of Bourassa has not helped to heal the breach in the Western riding. In Toronto the adoption by the Central Conservative Association of the system of balloting together for two candidates instead of one makes the position of all the present representatives uncertain. In all the city ridings the entrance of new aspirants has split the convention delegates into many factions, and already some are accused of intriguing against the powers that be. Among the new names mentioned are Mr. A. W. Wright, and Dr. A. W. Thornton in the West, Mr. J. E. Thompson and Mr. M. H. Irish in the East, and Messrs. Thomas Hook and E. W. J. Owens, K.C., in the North and South respectively.

Complaints Outside City.

Outside of the city there is much Conservatvie complaint regarding the Legislative representation of the party. In many cases this is said to be due to patronage troubles, but there are larger causes of discontent. There is marked hostility to the Ontario Railway Board and particularly its Chairman, while the administration of the Education Department is a very sore spot, particularly in relation to the model schools and the bilingual situation. There is also a feeling of dissatisfaction among many Conservatives over the lack of cordiality of their members toward the development of the Hydro-electric power policy. The failure of the Federal Premier to form a Cabinet satisfactory to the Conservatives of Ontario, the inclusion of Hon. Mr. White and concessions to Mr. Henri Bourassa being the bones of contention, is also alleged by Conservatives to be likely to react against the Provincial Government in the forthcoming election. Rightly or wrongly, Sir James Whitney is credited quite generally with having "approved" Mr. White's selection, and it is recalled that the new Minister of Finance was one of the most hitter opponents of the Whitney power policy. Again, Hon. Mr. Cochrane is credited with having done his share to aid the triumph of the Nationalist wing of the Nationalist-Conservative combination in the forming of the new Federal Government.

Twenty Members May Go.

"I predict the removal of at least twenty Government members of the present House," was the statement of a prominent Frontenac Conservative, "either by the loss of their own conventions or by defeat at the polls."

EX-REEVE ON TRIAL ON CHARGE OF MURDER

Special to The Examiner:

CORNWALL, OCT. 25.—Farquhar N. McRae, ex-reeve of Lancaster Township, nearly seventy years of age, sat composedly in the prisoner's box at the Assizes here to-day, listening to a stern arraignment by Crown Prosecutor Blackstock, and various evidence by which the Crown is trying to prove him guilty of murdering William Shaw, a druggist, following a dispute over the custody of the child of Doctor and Mrs. Magee the same child being the grandchild of D. C. McRae, a brother of the prisoner.

D. Magee, the first witness, told of his differences with his wife on religious matters, followed by separation she going back to D. C. McRae's home with the child. Having failed to get an interview with his wife and child, he organized an auto party, which included Wm. Shaw, and went to the McRae homestead, where he was threatened by A. C. McRae with a stick of wood.

Dr. Magee's testimony continued this afternoon. He told of finding his druggist, Shaw, shot, and the later bringing about of the arrest of Mr. Farquhar McRae.

The town is crowded for the trial of this case. Mr. Blackstock refused to let Magee debate on the religious differences with his wife, much to the disapointment of the court audience, who expected some revelations as to the reported influence of the ne temere decree in their family troubles. Thirty-two jurors were challenged, largely because they admitted knowing of the religious differences affecting the case.

In cross examination by Mr. Pringle, for the defence, Magee admitted that at times he called his wife foul names and ill treated her. When she left him, in 1910, however, he said, it was purely for religious reasons. Magee is a Methodist and Mcraes are Roman Catholics.

Mr. Pringle put this question to Dr. Magee: "Did you force Mrs. Magee to go to tea-meeting the night after her confinement." "It was a Methodist tea meeting, that's why he wouldn't go" said Doctor Magee. He admitted that in a moment of hate he told her to go to hell, but denied he ever pulled her by the hair of the head or threatened to smash her face.

DIED FROM INJURIES AS RESULT OF FALL

Capt. Roland Griffin, Well Known Resident of Lakefield, Passed Away This Morning at Campbellford

INJURED YESTERDAY

Mr. Roland Griffin, a well-known, and most popular resident of Lakefield died this morning at Campbellford as the result of injuries sustained yesterday afternoon, in an accident near Frankford. Mr. Griffin was in the employ of Contractor R. B. Rogers, on one of the Eastern sections of the Trent Canal, and in some manner slipped from an embankment yesterday afternoon and fell to the bottom, a distance of some fifteen or twenty feet, striking heavily. When picked up he was found to be unconscious and suffering from a terrible injury to the head and with a broken jaw. His relatives at Lakefield were notified and went to Campbellford last night. He failed to rally from the effect of his accident, and gradually sank, until death came this morning.

The late Mr. Griffin was well known in Lakefield, and in this district generally through his connection with navigation. He was an efficient pilot, knowing the waters of the Kawartha Lakes thoroughly, and during the past summer, was captain of the steamer "Water Lily" of the Peterborough and Lake Simcoe Navigation Company's fleet. He was always popular with steamboat men, and with the patrons of the different boats with which he was connected, and the intelligence of his sudden death will come as a shock.

He was born in Lakefield and was a son of the late Jonathan Griffin of that village. He is survived by one brother, Everett, and three sisters, Miss Annie, Miss Augustus and Miss Edith, all residing in Lakefield.

The funeral will take place in Lakefield, whither the remains were conveyed to-day.

PETERBORO' GUESTS IN ATTENDANCE

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 25.—Wm. H. Rowley, president of E. B. Eddy Co., and one of the prominent members of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, was this morning married to Elsie, the youngest daughter of the late Chief Justice Sir William Ritchie, at All Saints' church, by the rector of the church. They left immediately in a private car for the south. The ceremony was quiet, owing to the recent death of the bride's mother. The presents included a bracelet and watch from Earl Grey. Mr. and Mrs. Hazen Ritchie, Peterborough, were amon gthe guests.

TUBERCULOSIS

Hon. Adam Beck Will Give Address Here To-morrow Night

Peterborough people are reminded of the lecture to be given to-morrow night by Honourable Adam Beck, on the subject of "Tuberculosis" in the Assembly Hall of the Collegiate Institute, under the auspices of the Peterborough Health Association. Hon. Adam Beck is a forcible speaker and has made a study of the subject upon which he is programmed to speak. There should be a large attendance, in view of the importance of the address, and much helpful advice and instruction should be given.

SKIN A MASS OF FIRE

Horrible torture—pain unendurable—days when the whole body seems to be burning up—long nights of sleepless agony—Then—

Instant relief—The skin cooled and refreshed — all burning and itching gone!

Thousands testify to this—thousands who suffered from Eczema, Psoriasis and other skin troubles, until they heard of that simple cooling wash of Wintergreen, Thymol and other ingredients known as D.D.D. Prescription.

J. Samuel Lewis, writes:—"I used three bottles of D.D.D. Prescription, and now my skin, once a mass of fire and irritation, is as smooth and soft as a child's."

Of all remedies for the skin that we know we can especially recommend the D.D.D. Prescription for Eczema. Just a mild, soothing wash — but it cleanses and cools the skin as nothing else can. And it takes away the itch instantly!

We would like to tell you more about D.D.D. Prescription if you will call, or write the D.D.D. Laboratories, Dept. P.E., 49 Colborne St., Toronto, and get a free trial bottle. McDermid and Jury; also Payne's drug store.

RUBE MARQUARD IS THE LAST HOPE OF THE GIANTS

McGraw Sent in His $11,000 Beauty To-day to Try to Stop the Victories of the Athletics---Mack Chose Coombs ---New York Team Seemed Confident in Spite of the Fact That the Odds Are 5 to 1 Against Them.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, N.Y., OCT. 25.—Muggy McGraw's Die Hards were out on the Polo grounds early getting warmed up for this afternoons' game, and are remarkably cheerful, considering the score of three games to one against them in the world's championship series. The weather is clear and chilly and a great crowd assembled early to see what nine out of ten regarded as New York's defeat in the last ditch. Mighty few local fans were enthusiastic enough to take the short end of five to one odds against the Giants stemming the victorious Mack Athletics. Following is the line-up:

New York—Devore, l.f.; Doyle, 2nd b.; Snodgrass, c.f.; Murray, r.f.; Merkle, 1st b.; Herzog, 3rd b.; Fletcher, s.s.; Meyer, c.; Marquard, p.

Philadelphia — Lord, l.f.; Oldring, c.f.; Collins, 2nd b.; Baker, 3rd; Murphy, r.f.; Davis, 1st b.; Barry, s.s.; Lapp, c.; Coombs, p.

First Innings.

Athletics—Devore made a great shoe top catch of Lord's fly. Oldring grounded out, Doyle to Merkle. Collins flied to Snodgrass. No runs. Marquard used great speed, but seemed nervous.

Giants — Devore out via Barry. Doyle popped to Baker. Snodgrass out, Baker to Davis. No runs.

Second Innings.

Athletics—Baker fanned. Murphy singled to left. Davis fanned. Murphy out trying to steal. No runs.

Giants—Murray fanned. So did Merkle. Herzog singled and stole second, making second stolen base by Giants in the series. Fletcher missed three. No runs.

Third Innings.

Athletics— Barry out, via Terzog. Lapp singled over second. Meyerhad Lapp off first, but Merkle dropped the ball. Coombs grounded to Herzog, who threw to Doyle, but the second sacker dropped the ball in his eagerness to make a double. Meyers and Marquard held a consultation. Lord lifted to Doyle. Oldring dropped the ball in left field for a homer, with Lapp and Coombs ahead of him. Collins walked and stole second. Baker grounded out to Merkle unassisted. Three runs.

Ames sent out to warm up.

Giants—Meyers bunted a hit off Baker's legs. Becker, batting for Marquard, lined to Barry, who tried to double Meyers off first, but Davis dropped the ball. No errors counted under the rules of series. Devore fanned and Meyers was caught stealing. Lapp to Collins. No runs.

Fourth Innings.

Athletics—Ames pitching for Giants Murphy high fouled to Meyers. Davis out Merkle; Murray easy Fletcher to Merkle.—No runs.

Giants—Doyle smashed a double to right. Snodgrass and Murray struck out. Merkle was hit by pitched ball. Herzog skied to Lapp.—No runs.

Fifth Innings.

Athletics—Lapp out, Doyle to Merkle. Coombs singled to left. Lord forced Coombs at second on a grounder to Doyle. Oldring out, Fletcher to Merkle. No runs.

Giants— Fletcher boosted to Lord. Meyers struck out. Ames followed suit, making the eighth victim for Coombs. No runs. For the first time in the series, McGraw did not take the coaching line.

Sixth Innings.

Athletics.—Collins fouled to Merkle. Baker out, Doyle to Merkle, a close play. Murphy fanned. No runs.

Giants—Devore out. Collins to first. Doyle singled to right. Snodgrass lifted to Murphy. Doyle stole second. Murray flied to Lord. No runs.

Seventh Innings.

Athletics—Davis bounded out Fletcher made a pretty play. Barry smashed to right and stole second. Lapp fanned. Coombs popped to Fletcher. No runs.

Giants—Merkle and Doyle walked. Barry fumbled Herzog's grounder and Herzog was safe, Merkle going to third. Fletcher grounded to Davis, who threw to Barry, forcing Herzog. Merkle scored on Meyer's sacrifice fly to Murphy. Fletcher going to second. Crandall, batting for Ames, walked. Devore grounded out, Davis to Coombs. One run.

Crandall is now pitching for the Giants.

Eighth Innings.

Athletics.—Lord flied to Snodgrass, with Crandall pitching for Giants. Oldring singled through short. Baker fouled to Herzog. No runs.

Giants—Doyle started with a single to right. Coombs appears to have sprung a charley horse in his leg and time was called while Davis rubbed it. Coombs threw Snodgrass out, Doyle taking second. Murray missed three. Merkle out, Baker to Davis. No runs.

Ninth Innings.

Athletics— Murphy safe on Fletcher's horrible miscue. Davis forced Murphy on a hunt to Crandall, who threw to Fletcher. Barry forced Davis to Doyle. Barry out stealing, Meyers to Fletcher. No runs.

Giants—Herzog out, Barry to Davis. Fletcher doubled to left. Meyers out, Barry to Davis, Fletcher taking third. Fletcher scored on Crandall's double to right. Crandall scored on Devore's single to left, with the score tied, every spectator in the stands rose to his feet. With one and one on Doyle, Devore attempted to pilfer second and was out, Lapp to Barry.—Two runs.

Tenth Innings.

Athletics— Lapp out, Crandall to Merkle. Coombs scratched an infield single. It was a close play at first and the crowd jeered. Strunk ran for Coombs. Lord flied to Devore. Oldring out, Meyers to Merkle. No runs.

Giants—Plank is now pitching for the Athletics. Doyle doubled to left. Plank got Snodgrass' attempted sacrifice, throwing to third, but failing to catch Doyle. Murray flied to Murphy. Doyle scored on Merkle's sacrifice fly to Murphy. One run. Game over.

Some Curiosities Of The Finances Of The Dominion

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 24. — Whatever they may be, and while it statement of casual revenue received by the Federal Government during the past fiscal year contains some curiosities, which would not be looked for in a Government blue book. Conscience money does not figure as largely as might be expected. The Customs Department got most of it, $300.55, but some person who had done a wrong to the Finance Department was troubled to the extent of five dollars, whilst the Marine and Fisheries Department was enriched to an amount of $5.25 by conscience money. The Public Works got $12 from the same cause and the Railway Department, $1.25.

The sales of products of the experimental farms brought in $15,727.70, while the tobacco grown at the Government experimental stations will be sold for $3,024.26.

The Financial Department secured $8.76 from the "Sale of Sweepings."

made money on the coinage of both copper and silver, it lost $35.36 by the coinage of gold.

A rug at the Almonte Post Office was sold for $5. Scrap iron in the Toronto public buildings produced $25.17, while a barber chair in the House of Commons was transferred upon payment of $25, which is a good price for a second-hand and well used article.

Somebody broke a window in the Winnipeg post office and had topay three dollars for doing so.

The Interior Department sold a buggy for $15, a tent and flooring for $7, a railway ticket for $12, straw for $12, and received $10 from a man who killed a dog, named Topsy.

The Indian Department received $1.50 for the tuition of white children, but it is not stated how long a period this fee covered.

Men who deserted from the militia, presumably the permanent corps, left $38.15 behind them in their effects, and this was sequestrated to the King

Preparations Made For The Tag Day Crusade

At an enthusiastic meeting of the ladies interested, held in the City Council chamber last night, arrangements were made for the Tag Day Crusade in aid of the Children's Aid Society, which will be held this year, on the second Saturday of November. There was a good attendance and a large amount of preliminary work was mapped out. There is no lack of enthusiasm among the ladies and little difficulty is anticipated in getting a large number of girls to look after the actual work of "tagging". Tag Day" last year, thanks to efficient supervision, energetic canvassers, and a liberal response from the public was a most gratifying success, some $1,200 being secured in twelve hours for the funds of the Society. It is anticipated that this splendid sum will be beaten on November 11th.

PRISONER GETS SIX MONTHS IN CENTRAL

Local Vagrant Gets Heavy Sentence in Police Court To-day

BAD CHARACTER

Michael Larone was sentenced to six months in the Central Prison this morning for being a vagrant. Detective Newhall gave evidence. He stated that he had known the accused for eight or nine years, during which time he had often found Larone sleeping in sheds whenever night overtook him. He never would work, was nearly always drunk, and, in short, has for some time, been a burden on the community. Further evidence was produced to the effect that the defendant is a bricklayer by trade and was in a condition to work all summer, and could have procured work had he wanted it. The Chief stated that Larone had two sisters in the city, who were very respectable, and with whom the prisoner had lived, when he had no place else.

Magistrate Dumble was satisfied with the evidence taken, and stated that it was quite clear that the accused was of no use to the country, and accordingly sentenced him, as stated.

ANOTHER STRIKE LIKELY

Special to The Examiner

LONDON, ENG., OCT. 25.—There's an ominous feeling here that next week may find England plunged into another great railway strike, which will result much more disastrously than the last one. At the meeting of the executive of the four great unions, Monday, resolutions will be presented refusing to accept the finding of the Royal Commission recently appointed and which the men say is decidedly unfair to them.

White To Sit in Leeds

Special Wire to The Examiner.

OTTAWA, OCT. 25.—Hon. W. T. White, the new Minister of Finance, will be lected in Leeds. George Taylor, the former chief whip of the Conservative party has accepted temporarily an office of emolument, under the Crown to wit, the Postmastership of Newboro, in his own county.

Situation Unchanged

Examiner Special:

PEKIN, CHINA, OCT. 25. — The situation in the revolutionary districts is not materially changed, the rebels seeming to hold their own in any sanguinary encounters with the Government troops. A report says General Feng Sen, of the Imperial troops, was seriously wounded and thirty soldiers of his escort killed by a bomb as they were embarking for the front this morning. Foreign Consuls here held another meeting to-day regarding China's financial responsibilities to the European nations.

Later it is learned that General Feng Sen is dead as the result of the bomb explosion, also his wife, who was with him. A panic followed the assassination. It is believed here that Feng Sen's own soldiers killed him.

PORT M'NICOLL

Mr. J. C. Hayes, president of the J. C. Hayes Company, Limited, is in the city and will be at J. T. O'Connell & Co.'s office, 126 Hunter St. for a few days to interest Peterborough people in a new field of investment, the Port Nicoll proposition, details of which are given in an advertisement elsewhere in this issue. Port McNicoll is the new C. P. R. Eastern terminal on the Georgian Bay, and is only ninety miles from Peterborough, which would give a saving of 120 miles on the haul from Georgian Bay to Montreal and the ocean liners. A still further advantage that Port McNicoll possesses is the fact that there is an absence of grade difficulties on the line between Peterborough and the new port, which will allow the carrying of sixty cars per train of grain. Mr. Hayes will be pleased to go into the details of the proposition with anyone who is interested.

EATING THE LEEK.

Hon. Mr. Monk, the Nationalist Minister of Public Works in the Borden cabinet, eats the leek even a little more readily than did the ancient Pistol. It is stated that his first act as a minister is to order thorough repairs to Rideau Hall, to make it a meet residence for a Royal Goverhor-Geenral. When Hon. Mr. Pugsley proposed to do something like this, when Laurier was in office, he was bitterly opposed by the Conservatives, and by none more strongly than by Mr. Monk himself.

SEATED AT LAST.

Hon. W. T. White, provisional Finance Minister in Mr. Borden's government, is at last in sight of a seat. Mr. George Taylor, M.P., ex-whip of the Conservative party, has consented to be pigeon-holed in the little village postoffice of Newboro, to give Mr. White his seat. He has accepted the Chilten-Hundreds, in the form of the postmastership of the place, an "office of emolument" that will net about $75 dollar of revenue per year. Mr. Taylor has represented Leeds continuously since 1882, and it seems so hopelessly Tory as to be considered a safe seat for a Minister in a Conservative cabinet. What it may be for a Grit member of a Tory Cabinet is to be determined. If Mr. Bourassa gives his consent Mr. White will probably be returned by acclamation.

IS BOURASSA OUR PREMIER?

Toronto Telegram (Conservative)

Earl Grey is being criticized by Old Country commentators who were misinformed by the Toronto-born fables which appear in the London Times.

The whole burden of guarding the seas against the ascendancy of European militarism falls upon the forty million people of the British Isles, plus the direct contribution of Australia and New Zealand.

Canada, the home of 7,000,000 people who in wealth and earning power easily equal the poorest 20,000,000 people in the British Isles, is being deluded into the acceptance of Henri Bourassa as Premier of this country for purposes of naval defence. The Borden Government bids fair to be as thoroughly pro-Bourassa and as timidly pro-British as English-speaking Canada will let it be.

A MATTER OF TARIFFS.

Ottawa Journal (Conservative)

That the attention of the people of the United States is at last turning to the injustice which their superlatively protective tariff is doing them has been shown in many ways during the past couple of years.

Mr. Underwood, chairman of Congress Ways and Means Committee, calculates that yearly the people of the United States pay $104,000,000 extra for the sake of protecting the woollen manufacturers of the country.

The United States woollen duty is about seventy-eight per cent. of the import price. That means that all imported wool costs the United States purchaser the foreign cost, plus freight, plus an addition of seventy-eight per cent. to the foreign cost.

But not only foreign woollens sell at this price. Home manufactured United States owollens are offered for sale at a price exactly the same as the imported woollens.

The $104,000,000 annual tax placed on the peole of the United States for woollens alone does not go to the treasury of the United States in taxes The country receives annually about fifteen millions in woollen taxes, and the remaining seventy-nine million dollars go into the pockets of the woollen trust. The seventy-nine millions represents the added price placed on home grown and manufactured woolens in order that they shall sell at the price of the foreign ones after the seventy-eight per cent. duty is added to their selling price.

With the Democrats in power it looks as if American protectionists have killed the goose that has been laying for them the golden eggs. The American people seem determined upon obtaining a lower tariff.

WHAT THEY VOTED FOR.

The Weekly Sun, in its last issues has the following comparison of top market prices for the week ending Oct. 25:

HOGS.—Toronto, off cars, $6.40; Montreal, off cars, $6.30; Buffalo, fed and watered, $6.75.

CATTLE.—Toronto, $6.45; Montreal, $6.00; Buffalo, $7.50.

LAMBS.—Toronto, $5.65; Montreal, $5.50; Buffalo, $6.35.

BUTTER.—Toronto, 28c.; Montreal, 27 1-2c.; Buffalo, 31c.

EGGS.—Toronto, 30c.; Montreal, 34c.; Buffalo, 50c.

The comparison is instructive. The farmers of Canada, assisted by the food combines, which reduce prices to the producer and raise them against the consumer, voted themselves out of the United States' market, for fear their loyalty would be tainted; and to what end? They not only lose the advantage of sensibly higher prices, but save the Empire, to put it in the hands of the Quebec empire-hating Nationalists. When the elector begins to think, he sees that he has been made a tool of in a very clever and complete manner. He will be inclined, hereafter, to do his own thinking; and to form the natural conclusion that the most loyal Canadians are not the politicians who do the most flag-waving and loyalty-shouting. Any Liberal who was led astray last September by the bogus bogey of loyalty and danger to British connection, cannot get back into the traces too soon. He voted against his party and his political convictions on false sentiment, only to get his reward—"in the neck." He thought he was voting against all that Quebec Nationalists represent—treason to the Empire, etc., only to find that he has given Nationalism and all it represents, treason to the Empire, etc., first places in the cabinet of the country, with Bourassa the real acting premier.

TAG DAY.

Tag-day, in the interests of the Children's Aid Society funds is upon us again. It will be held in Peterborough this year on Saturday, Nov. 11th. Last year it was decided, by general consent, that the middle Saturday of November should be sacred to Tag-Day, in the behalf of the Children's Aid Society. This is reasonable for many reasons. The day is devoted to promoting the work of the greatest secular enterprise of relief and uplift in present operation in this country. Nothing could be nobler than the work of saving the destitute and neglected of our child population from the physical suffering and moral degradation they are exposed to, and converting them into useful members of society, a benefit to it, instead of a menace. Tag-day gives an opportunity to everybody to join in the work of strengthening the hands of the society. There is no other opportunity afforded, so conveniently offered during the year, to enlist the cooperation and financial help of all creeds, classes, conditions and ages. The energetic tag-day agents will suffer none to escape, or, better expressed, to be deprived of the privilege of donating a trifle to the funds of the society. Such an offering, coming at the Thanksgiving season, when we are supposed to feel an additional thrill of gratitude for the benefits of the harvest, will give everybody a chance to express his, or her, gratitude. It is well to bear in mind the date of Children's Tag-day. November 11th, so as to be prepared for the gentle solicitors, who will slight nobody. Last year, $1,200 or thereabouts, was the harvest of Children's Aid Tag-day. That represents only about one cent and a half apiece from a population of 18,000 or 19,000. This year a little thought on the part of the public will largely increase the total. Many persons came abroad without a proper provision of small change for such a day and consequently cannot respond to the requests of the solicitors. Let everybody this year come into the streets provided with small change and prepared to buy a tag or two.

Tag-day is commended to the public of Peterborough as a day to be observed with generous material recognition of the cause it is intended to promote.

Shiloh's Cure

THE HOG RAISING INDUSTRY ON THE TOBOGGAN SLIDE

Immediately after the vote on reciprocity the price of live hogs began to decline. Yesterday $5.75 per cwt. was offered by the London buyers for the packing houses. This figure is the lowest paid for years, and already farmers and others interested are predicting that the industry is in jeopardy. The raising of hogs is probably the most susceptible to market influences of all the branches by means of which the farmer makes his living. Fair prices for hogs bring fair profits, but once the price goes below a certain point, the farmer's whole business is to some extent disorganised. There is an immediate effect on the dairying industry. Without the cream and cheese factories, there would be little hog-raising in this province. When the farmer sends his fresh milk to the condenser or cheese factory, he does not consider his whole gain is derived from the price he receives for his milk. The cans go to the cheese fatcory full, but on the journey homeward they are not wholly empty. They contain a daily supply of whey or skim milk, and in this province these articles are most important in the rather restricted range of porcine provender.

When the farmer figures up his season's business he calculates how many pounds of pork his hogs made from the by-product of his milk, and if he finds that he feeds the hogs more dollars' worth of whey or skim milk and other foods than they produce in pork, he is likely to come to the conclusion that not only is pork-producing a losing game, but that to a considerable degree the dairying department of his business is demoralized. What is left for him? Beef cattle, probably. But if everyone starts in to raise beef cattle, there will not be much in it for the individual who has been shooting with a double-barrelled gun. The hammering down of live hog prices, by whatever agency, is not only diminishing the size of the farmer's bank deposit made in the city on Monday morning (hog selling day), and thereby decreasing the business of the whole community, but it is threatening the second and more important industry—that of dairying. These two branches of agriculture are so interlocked that the one may virtually bankrupt the other.

The packers, who took a defensive attitude as soon as the first decided slump was chronicled, claim that the prices has fallen because, among other things, there was an over-supply. Undoubtedly, as the packers now see no use in denying, farmers were holding their hogs in anticipation of the better prices on the Buffalo market. The packers fought at the gates of the nation to prevent the farmers from getting their hogs into that market. The farmers did not seek in sufficient numbers to rush the trenches in which the packers were prepared to do battle. Too many of them were hoodwinked by false cries. They let the packers gain the day, and in less than a month hogs are down more than $1 per hundredweight. Could an avalanche of competition from American hog-raisers, which was one of the familiar bogies, have wrought such havoc in the Province as the keeping up of the wall has done in so short a time? Could all the disastrous flooding of the Canadian market with American produce, such as was predicted by the false friends of the farmer, have caused him as great financial loss as that which he has suffered since the greasy pig started down the toboggan?

All farmers know that one season of failure in hog-raising will set back the industry seriously. Some years ago low prices so depressed the hog-raising industry that the Canadian supply fell far below the demand. The Canadian packing interests clamoured at Ottawa to have the duty removed on American hogs. If the same situation recurs, it may be expected that they will again press the same claim on Mr Borden.

The city man is also watching the packer closely now. The packer will not put meat prices up for a while because his big dividends are coming from the other end. But once he has killed off the Canadian pig, that produced the dividends, he will strive to import the American hog, paying a higher price, but taking the big rake off from the consumer. Then may the packer be expected to cry, "We must charge this to the consumer, because the Ontario farmer has gone out of hog-raising!"

Incidentally, has anyone noticed that the city man is paying less for dressed meats since the defeat of reciprocity and lowered prices on natural products all around?

EDITORIAL NOTES.

A Toronto milkman committed suicide on account of bad business; and with all the rains we have had of late.

According to the Halifax Chronicle, the Borden cabinet cocktail, is composed of a wine-glassful of Bourassic acid and a strong dash of Canadian Northern and Bank of Commerce.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster is made acting premier in the absence of Hon. R. L. Borden. The Ottawa Free Press thereupon remarks: "For the first time in his career, Hon. Geo. E. Foster is head of a Government with a thirty million dollar surplus."

What rate of duty constitutes a protective tariff? The Canadian rate of duty on automobiles is 35 per cent. Against that rate, which means a tax of $700 on a $2,000 automobile, there was shipped into and sold in Canada in the first seven months of the present year, autos to the value of about four million dollars.

The constituency of the Yukon is a hyperborean Vicar of Bray. Its ruling political passion seems to be gratitude for favours to come. In 1908 it elected F. T. Congdon, Liberal, by a majority of 331. On Monday last it made A. Thompson, the Thompson, by a majority of 400. However, Yukon, lying within 25 degrees of the north pole, cannot be so much blamed for wanting to stay on the sunny side of the hedge.

Mr. Albert Sevigny, M.P., whom Mr. Borden has selected to second the address to the speech from the throne to be delivered, at the opening of Parliament, by the Duke of Connaught, has a chance to electrify the house by the quotation of a remark he made last autumn. He said the sight of the British cruiser, "Cornwall," in the harbour of Quebec, "made his blood boil." We have to thank Mr. Borden for choosing a true-blue loyalist like that to open the oratorical ball in the daughter parliament of the Mother of Parliaments.

A return issued by the International Agricultural Institute shows results in wheat growing that bring into prominent contrast the relative grain-producing capacity of the United States and Canada. In 1911 the United States, with an increase in wheat acreage of 2,911,080 acres, produced a crop 36,876,000 short of the yield of the previous year. In the same year Canada, with an increase of acreage of 1,208,000, produced a wheat crop 54,644,000 in excess of the yield of the previous year. The average of the United States yield was 10.7 per acre, and the average Canadian wheat yield per acre was 20.4.

A GOOD WANT AD.

Is, of course, one which will bring the greatest number of replies or answers. It is a law that increased demand makes certain the quicker sale.

The Want Ad. is the briefest kind of an ad. that is ever written, and hence, in its brevity there must be wit-wisdom. The Want Ad. can only interest the reader on the basis of his interest. Each reader is interested in each and all of the five essentials to every Want Ad. These essentials, in the order of their importance, are, first, the names of the article or thing advertised; second, the quality of the article or the kind of thing advertised; third, the price of the article or thing advertised; fourth, the address, ('phone, or street number) of the advertiser, and, fifth, the name of the advertiser.

When the above essentials are fully and truthfully stated in the Want Ad., the best results are obtained; but in proportion to the number of these essentials omitted from the Ad., does the advertiser curtail the results to his ad. Each Want Ad. is an opportunity; look for them in The Examiner. 'Phone 57.

Successful Social

A most successful "At Home" was held under the auspices of the Daughters of Erin of St. Andrew's church at the residence of Mr. W. S. Campbell, King street, last evening. There was a large attendance and a most enjoyable evening was spent by those present. The programme was one of thorough merit and those taking part were warmly applauded. Mr. Herbert G. Treneer, the organist of St. Andrew's, contributed several numbers and pleasing solos were given by Mr Fred Skitch and Miss Olive Howel and Miss Annie Robinson. Refreshments were served and a pleasant social time spent.

COLD IN THE CHEST?

RUB WELL WITH ZAM-BUK!

For bad colds on the chest, rub the chest and between the shoulders well with Zam-Buk at night.

If you suffer from catarrh or cold in thehead, just insert a little Zam-Buk at the base of the nostril, and as the balm becomes warm, inhale the healing essences wihch vaporize.

Sores in the nostril, which are sometimes set up by catarrh, will yield to Zam-Buk treatment.

Mrs. N. S. Babcock, of Matawatchan, Ont., says: "For a long time I had a very disagreeable sore on the inside of the nostrils, which gave me great pain and caused much annoyance. I feared it would turn to cancer, and all I tried proved unavailing. I was ordered to try Zam-Buk and I am glad to say that the sore that defied all other remedies was overcome by one box of Zam-Buk, and is now quite healed."

Zam-Buk will also be found a sure cure for cold sores, chapped hands, frost bite, ulcers, eczema, blood-poison, piles, cuts, and skin injuries generally. All druggists and stores 50c. box, or Zam-Buk Co., Toronto. Try Zam-Buk Soap, 25c. tablet.

QUALITIES OF CHEESE

Cheese contains all the essentials of human food. The popular belief that cheese, even when green or unripened, is difficult to digest is not justified. The milk solids in cheese are very digestible and make an almost perfect food.

Skim-milk cheese, when sold as a whole-milk product, is a fraud that is a positive injury to the dairy business; but skim-milk cheese, stated and sold as such, is entitled to consideration by both producer and consumer. It is digestible and has a food value; made to have an agreeable taste it could be sold cheaply to poor people. Cottage cheese is another cheap and palatable product much of which could be added to the dietary at a great saving in the total cost of food. Indeed, all kinds of cheese, even the very highly flavoured and so-called condimental cheese, have a high food value.

Many European people eat largely of cheese, either by itself or sprinkled on vegetables or cooked with other food. The Italians have many foods, such as macaroni, with which cheese is mixed. They have cheese grated and constantly at hand as a flavouring, quite as we use pepper and salt. The Swiss eat largely of cheese, which with bread forms the greater part of the dietary of this very healthy people.

THE MAN OF CULTURE

To the highest culture, evenness of development, resulting in roundness and symmetry, is essential. The ideal man possesses, in addition to all his other qualities, that quality which is figured in the bloom of the flowering plant, in the fragrance of blossoms, in the blush and flavour of fruit—a quality which cannot counterfeit a flower's perfume, which cannot be hidd n any more than you can hide the fragrance of an orchard in May. It is the precious flavour of the ripened man. As the full fragrance of the apple, as the velvety cheek of the peach comes only when the fruit has reached its highest development, so this quality comes only as the result of that wise self-enlargement, that deliberate catholicity, that cultivated charity of opinion, which characterizes the man of culture.

MERCHANTS INTERVIEWED ON THE MAIL ORDER QUESTION

There are two sides to every question—sometimes there are more—and it was to get the merchant's viewpoint on the mail order question, discussed last month, that I went to Oshawa and Whitby. Oshawa is a manufacturing town of some seven or eight thousand people and is within an hour's railway run from Toronto. Its location makes it particularly susceptible to the temptations of Toronto bargain counters, notwithstanding the fact that the town has some very excellent stores. The view point I obtained is what follows in the interviews I had with some of the leading merchants.

SUGGESTS A TAX

Mr. W. M. Lawrence is manager of the Oshawa branch of the store of J. Sutcliffe and Son. When interviewed he said:

"Yes, we do feel the effect of the volume of trade that goes to Toronto, and I've thought a good deal about a solution of the problem and have come to the conclusion that it is a tax."

This was a new and interesting theory to me.

"A tax, how would you do it?" I asked with concern.

"Why I haven't thought it out in detail, but the department stores should pay a tax of some kind on the business they take from a town. Here we are paying our fair share of taxes and trying to make a living. If a transient trader comes along, he pays taxes; why shouldn't others who get business out of the town?"

"But, I don't quite see how you could collect the tax, nor how it would be arrived at."

"Why, every parcel should be taxed."

"Oh, I see," as the light of understanding began to dawn. "You would place a revenue stamp on each parcel before it leaves the store. Is that the way?"

"Something like that; of course it would require legislation."

"And the proceeds would be divided between the government and the municipality," I said, as I weighed it on the scale of possibilities. It listed somewhat of medievalism, still it might be workable. It was as Mr. Lawrence said, a matter for legislation.

CO-OPERATION NEEDED

"Failing to effect anything in this direction, isn't there any other way out of the trouble?" I asked.

"I don't know but some sort of united effort on the part of the merchants might be effective. Somehow we seem a hard body to organize. I don't know how it is, but we don't seem to be able to get together."

The firm of Thos. Miller and Sons, of Oshawa, is an establishment of long standing, and its members may be expected to know trade conditions pretty thoroughly. Mr. Thos. Miller was kind enough to give me an interview in which he discussed the matter of city shopping in almost all its phases.

"Yes," he said, in reply to a question. "I'll admit that we do feel the effect of our people sending to Toronto for their merchandise. This is, as you know, a manufacturing town; there is a good deal of money changing hands every week, and I do not believe that over one-third of it is spent in the town."

"One third!" I exclaimed in astonishment, making a rapid mental calculation of the probable amount of money represented by the pay rolls of the numerous factories in the town. "You don't mean to tell me it is as bad as that, do you?"

"I think it a fairly safe estimate," he replied.

"Well, most assuredly the Oshawa people have a bad case of the city shopping mania."

"Mania," he repeated. "That's exactly what it is. It isn't that the people cannot get what they want here and buy just as cheaply as they can in Toronto, but they have a mania for going up there, and what are you going to do? There are cheap trips to the city and we can't prevent people from taking advantage of them."

WHAT ADVERTISING DOES

"Yes," in answer to another question, "we advertise and cover the entire field. See," and he took a circular from a package which he was tying up when I came in, "here is a sample of what we send out once or twice a week."

I had been casting furtive glances at this package of printed matter and was curious to see just what kind of advertising it contained, therefore I was very glad when he offered me one of the circulars. It was a real newsy sheet, emphasizing various departments, and an ambitious headline read, "We are aiming for $25,000 sales in three months." Mr. Miller explained that these circulars are distributed throughout the town by special messengers, and that the same matter reaches the country trade through the local weekly paper.

"I am sure no one can complain that you don't advertise wisely and well. But, tell me, don't you think something more might be done in the way of concentrated effort?"

"Yes," he replied, with a good deal of seriousness. "That's what we want. If the merchants would get together, I believe something could be accomplished, but such a thing as coalition among dry goods merchants does not seem possible. I believe it would be one of the strongest links in the chain that would keep trade at home, if it could be accomplished. I do not see why such a state of affairs should exist in the dry goods trade, it is not the same with the grocers. They work together very nicely."

Here was the same difficulty that Mr Lawrence expressed, and since my interview with these two gentlemen, I've been pondering over the amount of distrust among men of the same craft, not dry goods merchants alone. In almost every trade, business, profession, a sort of fratricidal elemen seems to exist. Each individual member would rather see an entire stranger get the business he misses, than to have a competitor profit by it. Here's a psychological problem for some one to work out.

ARE MERCHANTS CONSISTENT?

"I'm not at all sure," Mr. Miller continued, "that our own families are as loyal to local merchants as they should be. It wouldn't surprise me that some of our dry goods people send to Toronto for their hardware, and vice versa. Now, if we had some sort of an organization that would include all the merchants of the town, that state of things would not exist, but," he said, with an accusing smile, "no, women are the worst offenders of all. If it weren't for you, the men never would go elsewhere to spend their money. You are to blame for it all."

"Of course we are," I admitted with cheerful consciousness of alleged guilt. "Haven't we been at the bottom of every social evil since the beginning of things?" Then came a happy inspiration which afforded a little diversion.

INFLUENCE OF WOMEN

"Why don't you have a Women's Civic Club here, Mr. Miller?" That gentleman, who had been most cordial before, grew slightly frigid as if he half suspected that he might be entertaining a suffragette.

"A what?" he asked, in zero tones.

"A Women's Civic Club." My tone indicated capitals this time and I hurried on, lest he should interrupt before I should reach the strategic point. "They have one out in Lethbridge, and what do you think was the very first piece of business they transacted after organization? They inaugurated a 'Buy-at-Home' campaign, and pledged themselves never to buy anything elsewhere that they could get at home."

"Where did you say that was?" Mr Miller inquired with warming interest, "What's that you say?"

"Lethbridge, Alberta, a town with a population of about ten thousand people" (I hope you are paying attention, Ottawa, Gananoque, Brandon and a hundred other towns where the mail order germs are rampant). "and the members of the club have pledged themselves to support the business of their local merchants, and the merchants have pledged themselves to keep their stocks up and when anything is required that is not in stock to get it on the shortest notice. They have agreed to keep their prices right too."

"That would be great, wouldn't it?" he ejaculated warmly, as he caught a mental glimpse of the Oshawa Women's Civic Club organizing a "Buy-at-Home" campaign.

I thought it only fair to give the men of Lethbridge their share of glory in this departure of the women, so I went on:

"This club is an auxiliary of the Board of Trade, and is given a certain amount of the funds of the Board of Trade to spend on such civic improvements as they deem advisable. Now, the point I wanted to emphasize is this, that if the business men of Lethbridge hadn't given the women of their town credit for a fair share of business acumen, and allowed them a share of the responsibility and glory of their town, this 'Buy-at-Home' campaign could never have been organized."

CASH THE REMEDY HERE

Whitby is a few moments nearer Toronto than Oshawa, and is not blessed with many industries, but it supports several dry goods stores, the oldest of which is that of Ross Bros., who have been in business at the same stand for thirty-three years, and as Mr. G. A. Ross told me, "everyone knows us, and we know every one."

"Why, no, we don't feel the influence of the mail order business to any extent," said Mr. Ross when interrogated on the subject. "It is hardly perceptible."

"I'm very glad to hear that." I replied, "do you mind telling me how you squelched the germ that seems so lively in Oshawa and other towns along the line?"

Mr. Ross wasted no verbiage. His answers were very much to the point.

"With cash prices."

This almost took away my breath. I had always associated the strictly cash idea with mail order and out of town buying.

"I don't quite understand, Mr. Ross, won't you enlighten me a little further?"

"It is simple enough. We used to sell on credit at credit prices. We've discontinued all credit business, and sell for cash only at cash prices. That's all there is to it."

"Then I infer that your prices are as low or lower than Toronto prices."

"Yes, I think they are. Of course I must admit that some trade does go past us to Toronto, and I suppose it always will. We must expect that a certain amount of it will go there, but our method has captured the bulk of it."

We discussed the matter from the customer's as well as the merchant's view point, and as he accompanied me to the door, when I came away, Mr. Ross said in his earnest, lucid way: "If the merchant is going to hold his trade and compete with the mail order houses, he must wake up and forsake his antiquated methods of doing business. The old-fashioned way of placing orders twice a year and then settling down to wait for customers to come in and carry the goods away, won't work any longer. He must go to market often, find the best values and the newest goods, and thus keep his stock fresh. We go to the city every few days. This is the inside secret of success." Then I said, "Good afternoon," and came away, pondering on Mr. Ross's logic, which I considered pretty sound, and resolved not to forget to pass it along.

The subject grows. Investigation reveals its colossal proportions, and the difficulty in dealing with a condition of trade that has flourished like a bay tree with practically nothing to check its growth.

One naturally expects to find every merchant who has goods on his shelves awaiting purchasers, lamenting the inroads of the mail order houses. I was surprised to find that this is not so. Some merchants with stocks ranging along about $5,000 or $7,000 are inclined to be apathetic.

"Oh, well," he says, with unconcern, "we can't expect every one to come to us, and be satisfied with the stock we carry. If a lady wants a suit, why shouldn't she send to the city for it?" Thus he disposes of what should be to him a vital matter. It is doubtful if he does not lose just as much business in this line in proportion to amount of stock he carries as his brother merchant does who has treble the amount invested. Moreover, he fails to take into consideration that every dollar spent out of a town means the loss of the circulation of that dollar many times over. It might cause him to be a little more zealous if he were to sit down some dull day and figure out how often a dollar may be turned over in a week and how much profit would accrue from this turnover.

It does seem as if it would be much more to the point if these men would line up with their big brothers at home instead of letting their sympathies go out to the camp of the stranger.

The larger merchants are facing the problem and asking themselves what is to be done. So far, I have not been able to discover any definite plan of action. The suggestions I have quoted from interviews have seemed to me the most plausible, and at this stage of the investigation the probabilities seem to indicate that organized effort is the hinge upon which the remedy swings.

TO CLEAN SUEDE GLOVES

Suede gloves can be perfectly cleaned with oatmeal by putting the gloves on the hands and rubbing them through a bowl of the meal exactly as you would do when washing the hands.

If there is a very dirty spot, rub it well with a clean flannel cloth and the meal. When the nap on suede gloves or shoes become flattened down or slightly soiled rub them lightly with sandpaper. This will effectually restore the good appearance of the suede.

"AT HOME"

PAPER BAG METHOD

That the paper bag method of cookery requires no special stove or appliance of any kind was demonstrated to a representative of the London Mail by M. Nicholas Soyer, chef de cuisine of Brooks's Club, world famous as a home of the classic style of cookery, the merits of which may be described as simplicity in perfection. The paper capsule, he declared, when its advantages are generally recognized and adopted will add immeasurably to the value of English cookery. And emphatically he asserted this cookery reform needs no patent, stove but can be practised in every home which contains a cooking oven of any kind.

This method of cooking "en papillote," the chef said, is similar in its chemical processes to braising except that it retains the natural juices and flavours within the meat to a greater extent than possible with a braising pan. M. Soyer cooked a slice of turbot, a golden plover, a small loin of lamb, a chicken and three apples. He used a gas oven, a coal stove and a hot-air Dutch oven stove. His method was as follows:

Beginning with the fish, he first, by means of a brush, covered a sheet of stout white paper with good olive oil. The paper thus made water and air proof, he wrapped in it the slice of fish, doubling up the ends of the paper so as to close the parcel as thoroughly as possible. He then placed it in a shallow dish and put it in the oven. For seasoning he had added only a sprinkle of salt and a squeeze of lemon juice. The other viands were similarly wrapped up in paper, but it was only for the fish that oil was used for making the paper impervious to the exuding juices and odours. The paper envelopes in which the lamb, the bird, the chicken, and the apples were wrapped he brushed over with melted butter instead of oil. But for the chicken he said dripping would do as well as butter, and in a poor household would make it preferable.

The demonstration was entirely successful. The fish taken from the coal-heated oven and the paper envelope removed came out a perfect flaky white resting in a little pool of its own rich albumen. The plover was cooked in the hotair oven. From its delicate golden brown its own rich juices were still exuding when it was unwrapped from the paper and placed upon a dish. The lamb and chicken, which took a little longer to cook, were treated in the gas oven. Both were cooked to perfection. When the lamb was cut the flowing juices welled from it. The apples were amber dreams. Each article had retained all its food value and all its individual virtue and charm of taste and smell.

NIGHT TERRORS

There are few mothers in this age of nervous children who are fortunate enough to have several nights running of absolutely peaceful and undisturbed sleep. Night terrors are perhaps the most frequent cause of disturbance, but these are comparatively easy to remedy if only mothers would realize that the cause is generally indigestion pure and simple. A child is sent to bed with an overloaded stomach, the undigested or indigestible food ferments and prevents the child from sleeping easily; its dreams partake of a terrifying nature, and after tossing about in restless slumber for a time, the child starts up in bed suddenly, shrieking loudly, and in a state of extreme terror.

If this state is allowed to become a habit it has a most weakening effect both on the mental and bodily state of the child, and the recurrence can only be prevented by the strictest care in the management of the child's food and unceasing attention to the regularity of the bowels. The seeds of chronic indigestion are often sown in early childhood, and such cases when left to run on for a considerable time fare far more difficult to deal with than when acquired later in life, for in the former case it too often affects the stomach to such a degree that it is almost impossible to counteract it. So many mothers make the mistake of allowing their children to eat too much meat, and we may notice the effect of this even in children who appear well nourished, by their complexions, which are often disfigured by pimples and blotches. Children need their food to be nourishing rather than stimulating, as do adults, and their meals should be light and frequent instead of heavy, as few children can be expected to follow the example of their elders, in resting after a heavy meal. Their activity can rarely be restrained, they long for vigorous exercise even immediately after a good dinner, therefore they cannot comfortably dispose of a too substantial meal or one which contains food of a heavy description. The saying that "children can digest anything" is responsible for the great proportion of children who grow up with weak stomachs and form an alarming catalogue of other ailments of a no less serious character. A time must come, and it is to be hoped soon, when mothers, instead of believing nothing to be too indigestible for the gastric organs of the growing boys and girls, will learn that youth is the time above all others when the digestion by careful and light feeding may be trained into a healthy condition from which it will not easily depart.

TIRED-OUT KIDNEYS

Kidney troubles so frightfully common. Proof: I was in a terrible condition, worn because the kidneys are so easily upset by overwork or excesses of eating and drinking. Cure is effected not by whipping them on to renewed effort, but by awakening the action of liver and bowels by the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. This puts the kidneys and makes them well. Backache and urinary disorders then disappear.

LINOLEUMS

Very Artistic Designs in these Practical Floorcoverings.

We have just imported from Scotland an immense range of artistic designs in inlaid and printed Linoleums, in two and four yard widths.

The Scots have obtained a high degree of perfection in making these very practical Floor-coverings. The goods just received are of exceptional excellence. They will give a maximum amount of wear. Poor Linoleums crack and grow dingy in colouring after a little service. These do not.

Many dainty bed room effects are included among the best of artistic patterns.

No time like the present for freshing up the home. Look around and see where new Linoleums are needed, and then come and see our splendid showing.

RICHARD HALL & SON. LIMITED

THE EVENING CHIT-CHAT

By Ruth Cameron

If a friend of yours should throw open his door as you passed his house and call to you to come in and see something he wanted to show you, don't you think it would be very rude to pass right on without paying the slightest attention?

And yet how many people pass by conversational open doors in just this way.

You mention some name in the course of a conversation and your companion says reminiscently, "He did me a mighty good turn once."

Or you pass through some street, or some particular locality is mentioned, and your friend remembers, "I had a very unpleasant experience right near here."

Or you are talking of dogs and someone declares, "I have mighty good reason to hate that kind of dogs."

Now all these little remarks are conversational open doors.

In the doorway stands your friend beckoning you to enter and see what he has ready for your interest behind that open door.

Now which are you going to do?

Are you going to respond to "He did me a mighty good turn once" by saying some such short-stop remark and passing on to other subjects?

In other words, are you going to slam the conversational door he has opened so hopefully?

Or are you going to say, "Did he? What was it?" or make some similar response which will give him a chance to tell the story with which he is charged?

Remember that if he is a particularly egotistical person, even slamming the door in his face may not purchase exemption for you. Just as likely as not he will open it again and fairly drag you in by reverting to his allusion and gratuitously offering an explanation of it. And mind you, if he has to do this, even if he is winning his end, he will not forget that he does it in spite of you, and that you did slam the door and try to escape, and he will hold it up against you.

Of course what your friend has behind that door is often very uninteresting. But it takes such a little time to look at it. Surely it is worth while when you consider the pleasure you are giving and the good impression you create.

There is a class of people to whom, however commonplace their intellectual qualifications, every one likes to talk, and that is the folks who never miss a chance to enter one of these conversational open doors.

"It's such a simple way of pleasing folks, isn't it?

Do you think it pays?

INTERESTING ADDRESS ON THE STUDY OF THE MOON

Opening Session of the Peterborough Centre of the Royal Astronomical Society for the Season Last Night.

DR. MARSH'S LECTURE

If the first meeting of the Peterborough centre of the Royal Astronomical Society, held in the Chemical Laboratory of the Collegiate Institute last evening, can be regarded as a criterion of its successors, the society will have a successful run this winter.

In consideration of the fact that it was the first meeting of the season, there was a large attendance of the members, who listened with marked attention and appreciation to a most interesting and edifying lecture on "The Study of the Moon," by Dr. Marsh.

The meeting opened by the reading of the minutes of the last meeting. Mr. Richardson gave a report on his observations by the aid of the Stratton telescope, during the past month. He had viewed Saturn and its rings, and Brooks' comet.

Mr. Carveth had also made very satisfactoty observations. The report of Mr. Collier, the late president, who is now in Toronto, was read by Dr. Marsh, together with one from the Rev. Mr. McLeod of Brighton.

After the preliminaries had terminated, Dr. Marsh proceeded with his lecture and with the aid of lantern slides, explained to a nicety all the various details of the moon's formation, which could not be discerned by the naked eye.

"It is impossible to say how the moon originated," said the lecturer. "Various theories have been formed, but I do not intend to enlarge upon that subject to-night; it is sufficient to state that that body is our nearest companion, being situated about 240,000 miles away. It is asserted that at one time there was moisture on the moon, but it is almost certain that now there is none. It requires twenty-nine days for the moon to form a complete circuit round the earth, and it has, of course, a considerable effect on the speed of the Earth's revolution. It is also the cause of tides and by a recent calculation it is found that at the equator the earth bulges from four to six inches by reason of the attraction of the moon. The earth has six times the gravity of its companion. If, therefore, it should so happen that we could live on the latter body, we should be six times as light in weight and our lifting powers would be increased six times.

The moon is rough by volcanic action. It is sometimes averred that it has an effect upon the weather, but that is not so. In fact, it is often the case, that when the moon is full, the rain is less than at other times.

At the conclusion of his splendid lecture, various questions were put to and answered by, the lecturer.

Commissioner For Lindsay

Lindsay has made the first step toward putting itself in shape to live upto the boast recently made, to the effect that it would make some sister cities sit up and take notice. The following from the Lindsay Post explains itself:

Last evening a meeting of the Committee appointed at a recent meeting of the Board of Trade to deal with the question of the appointment of an Industrial Commissioner, met and discussed the important question in all its phases.

It was decided to hold a meeting at an early date of all the contributors and they will select five members to form a permanent Industrial Commission—one member from the Board of Trade, one from the Town Council, two from the contributors, and the Industrial Commissioner will comprise the Committee. A local bank will look after all monies collected and it will be checked out by the Treasurer of the Industrial Commission and countersigned by the President. The Industrial Commissioner will act as Secretary and will be controlled by the Commission.

FROM TEXAS

Some Tea and Coffee Facts From the Lone Star State.

From a beautiful farm down in Texas, where gushing springs unite to form babbling brooks that wind their sparkling way through flowery meads, comes a note of gratitude for delivery from the coffee habit.

"When my baby boy came to me five years ago, I began to drink Postum, having a feeling that it would be better for him and me than the old kind of drug-laden coffee. I was not disappointed in it, for it enabled me, a small delicate woman, to nurse a bouncing, healthy baby 14 months.

"I have since continued the use of Postum for I have grown fond of it, and have discovered to my joy that it has entirely relieved me of a bilious habit which used to prostrate me two or three times a year, causing much discomfort to my family, and suffering to myself.

"My brother-in-law was cured of chronic constipation by leaving off coffee and using Postum. He has become even more fond of it than he was of the old coffee.

"In fact the entire family, from the latest arrival, (a 2-year-old who always calls for his 'potie' first thing in the morning) up to the head of the house, think there is no drink so good or so wholesome as Postum." Name given by Canadian Postum Co., Windsor, Ontario.

Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a reason."

Ever read the above letter? A new one appears from time to time. They are genuine, true, and full of human interest.

Was Here 63 Years Ago

Mr. Hugh Ross, of Campbellford, is in the city to-day on business. Mr. Ross is an extensive farmer and raises hogs on a large scale, and is shipping systematically to the George Matthews Co. here.

Mr. Ross, with Mr. Peter Glover, East City, came to Peterborough for the first time from Campbelltown, 63 years ago and can give many interesting descriptions of Peterborough in those days. Mr. Ross is in his 84th year and is a hale and hearty representative of the old Scotch settlers who came to this country and settled it years ago.

Mr. Ross visited his home land ten years ago, the first time since his departure.

OBITUARY

MRS. HATTIE SPEARS.

The death occurred in Toronto yesterday at 2.30 of Hattie, the wife of the Rev. Dr. Spears of Hyde Park Avenue Methodist church, Toronto, and formerly of Peterborough.

The deceased, who was forty-eight years of age, was born in Manitoulin, and on her marriage to Dr. Spears, went to reside in Toronto. Mrs. Spears had been ailing for some time, and her end, therefore, was not wholly unexpected. She was assiduous in all the duties which her station occasioned, and her naturally sympathetic disposition endeared her to all who were fortunate enough to be able to claim her acquaintance. It was only in the spring of the year that Dr. Spears built a cottage at Chemong where, with his wife, he made frequent visits during the summer.

In addition to her sorrowing husband, the deceased lady is survived by two sons, Aylmer and Douglas, both of Toronto. Mr. Andrew Brown, real estate agent, Peterborough is a nephew.

The funeral will take place in Toronto at 2.30 to-morrow.

"THE GIRL FROM RECTOR'S"

Of all the mixed situations, "The Girl From Rector's" beats the most mixed up of reels of moving pictures ever thrown on the canvas. Starting in the bachelor's apartment of a young spendthrift who was kept up to the round of carousals by an old friend who was living off the young fellow. Several characters who are apparent strangers to him are introduced and the audience has no real idea of what is going to happen next. Behold, the young fellow is to be married to a belle of Battle Creek. The wedding is to take place in that city. Those connected with what follow begin to arrive, and it develops that the people formerly presented as strangers are closely connected by matrimonial ties. This situation presents one of the keenest comedy situations of the day. The night of the wedding arrives and the Girl from Rector's, who is deeply in love with the young fellow, and who resolves to start something if he leaves her, keeping the fact of her marriage from him, arrives upon the scene. Her husband, a cousin of the bride, arrives also. The Girl is introduced to the groom and she immediately faints. She starts to get even and with the connivance of a man who has shown to the groom the gay life in the city, she lays her plans. She assumes to be intoxicated, and the groom, who now really is so, engages in some funny stunts when the wedding party arrive upon the scene. Although it is extremely funny to the audience, it is very humiliating to them, and they decide to punish the groom by a plan that ends in his getting a bride, and severing the ties that bound him to the girl of the Bohemian day. "The Girl From Rector's" isone of the most hilariously funny comedies now on the road. This will be the Thanks giving Day attraction at "The Grand," when two performances will be given.

WILD GEESE

A large flock of geese was observed passing over the city this morning. The loud "honk honk" of the leader attracted the attention of a number of citizens who, upon gazing upward, were surprised to see the V-shaped formation, as they wended their way to the south-west.

THE FAMILY TREE OF THE MENU CARD

At a dinner given by Duke Henry of Brunswick in 1541 (says the London Globe) he was seen to every now an dthen consult a long slip of paper which reposed at the side of his plate. One of the Duke's guests asked what the paper was for. He explained that it was a sort of programme or catalogue of the dishes he had commanded from the cook. "To the intent that if some delicacy, which especially appealed to his appetite, were marked for a later stage in the repast ,he might carefully reserve his appetite for it." The simplicity and utility of the idea at once took the fancy of the Duke's convives, and the menu card from that moment became an institution. The new fashion was so much admired it travelled far and near, and was adopted in England and France at once.

A Million Apples

Yes! a million apples, and what's more, they are the very best from hundreds of orchards throughout Ontario. Add to this the fact that they will be all in one building, set up in the form of ships, maps with rivers and towns, and in a dozen other ways which will make them a wonderful sight to see.

But these apples will not be the only thing to see. There will be magnificent orchids, chrysanthemums, roses, splendidly decorated dinner tables, sweet, toothsome honey, and pumpkins large enough to make pies for a multitude, at the eighth annual Ontario Horticultural Exhibition, to be held in the St. Lawrence Arena, Toronto, on November 14th to 18th. Single fare rates from all points in Ontario.

SUREST TONIC IN THE WORLD

IS "FRUIT-A-TIVES" THE GREAT FRUIT MEDICINE

Like fruit juice, "Fruit-a-tives" acts on the great blood purifying organs of the body—namely the liver, bowels, kidneys and skin, and stimulates all these parts to increased activity. The splendid nerve tonics and intestinal antiseptics, combined with the intensified fruit juices, make "Fruit-a-tives" the finest of nerve tonics.

On the stomach, "Fruit-a-tives" acts as a soothing tonic and allays all irritation.

By purifying the blood—strengthening the nervous system and regulating kidneys, bowels and skin—"Fruit-a-tives" builds up the whole system as nothing else will

"Fruit-a-tives" is a really wonderful medicine—being made directly from fresh fruit—and is the intensified juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes. "Fruit-a-tives" is the only medicine in the world made of fruit. It is mild in action—pleasant to take—and is a tonic of inestimable value.

50c. a box, 5 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At all dealers, or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

Knocked Down By A Horse

Mr. John Scott, a resident of East City, was knocked down by a horse and very seriously injured on Saturday evening. Mr. Scott's hearing being somewhat defective and the light being out on the corner of the street, rendered walking somewhat precarious, with the result that while crossing Maria street, he was run down by a horse and rig. His arm was badly hurt and he sustained other minor injuries. However, he is at present resting easily at his home and a speedy recovery is looked for.

LATE BERRIES

Ripe, luscious raspberries are a decided novelty around this season of the year and it is not privileged to very many people to be able to go out and pick them off the bushes. On the property of Mr. Thos. Rose, in Otonabee, however, there are at the present time, a number of berries on the bushes and the staff of the Examiner had an opportunity yesterday of testing the qualities of a few samples brought into the office. They were Columbians, a bluish red berry with a splendid flavour.

WEDDING BELLS

MIDDLETON—ROBINSON.

At the George street Methodist church, a quiet but pretty wedding took place, when Miss Mary E. Robinson and Mr. James F. Middleton were joined together in the bonds of holy matrimony by the Rev. Isaac Couch.

The bride was attended by Miss Georgina Dunard, while Mr. Wm. J. Elliott acted as groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Middleton will reside at 78 McDonnell street.

BARCROFT—DUGGAN.

A pretty wedding took place at 2.15 this afternoon at the home of Mr. Thomas Duggan, 730 Bethune street, when Myrtle Clementina, daughter of Mr. Thos. Duggan and Mr. Ernest Barcroft, of Toronto, were united in the bond of holy matrimony by the Rev. R. J. Webb.

The bride, wearing a beautiful white gown, was given away by her father, and the bridesmaids were Miss Stella Duggan and Miss Margaret Campbell.

Mr. and Mrs. Duggan left for a short trip by the 4.28 C.P.R. train after which they will reside in Toronto.

STOMACH TROUBLES CANNOT EXIST

With Morrisey's No. 11 Tablets, say Messrs. Cox and McQuarrie, prominent eastern travelers.

HALIFAX, N. S., Sept. 25, 1910.
"I was troubled with indigestion for several years, and after eating suffered intensely with sour stomach, belching of gas, heartburn, etc., and everything I ate seemed to lay in my stomach and made me feel all puffed up and distressed. Someone proposed that I try a box of your No. 11 Dyspepsia Tablets, which I did, and to my delight found immediate relief. I am now enjoying three meals a day, and feel that your No. 11 Tablets deserve all the credit. Those who have stomach trouble, and especially men who travel on the road eating at different places every day should try No. 11 Tablets, as they will relieve you of indigestion, and enable you to enjoy your meals."

Lyman W. Cox.

NEW GLASGOW, N. S., Nov. 16, 1910.
"For the past two years I have used Father Morrisey's No. 11 Dyspepsia Tablets, and during that period have not suffered the severe attacks of Indigestion to which I had been a victim for many years. My attacks were very distressing, and no need to say I am glad to be relieved, and I feel that your No. 11 Dyspepsia Tablets deserve all the credit. For years I did not know what it was to enjoy a good meal but now I can eat anything on the bill of fare with no distressing after-effects—thanks to No. 11 Tablets."

Geo. J. McQuarrie.

The above prescription is not a "Cure-All" or so-called patent medicine. Dr. Morrisey prescribed it for 44 years, and it cured thousands after other doctors failed.

Room For Broader Tolerance In Our Citizenship Relations

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—I notice in the Review of last Saturday the following "Editorial Note":

"If by some means, Ennismore could be shunted out of West Peterborough Riding, for voting purposes, what a relief it would be."

Why the relief? Are the voters of Ennismore so firm in their attachment to Liberal principles, and all they stand for, as to be a living reproach to the fickle-mindedness and lack of stability of so many others? Is their sense of gratitude to the man who has done so much for the West Riding of Peterborough a standing reproof to the unfaithfulness of more? Where would, or should, Ennismore be shunted? No doubt the Review would be pleased to see the whole township sunk to the bottom of Mud Lake, there to remain.

But we wish to state right here that we are quite capable of looking after our own affairs, without any suggestions from the Review. We have no apologies to offer for our way of voting; we would do the same again, even though we knew the results of the election as we do now.

Were the leader of the Liberal party the most rabid Orangeman, were he the noble Colonel Dr. Sproule or worse still, the now illustrious J. Hampton Burnham, who has crept, crawled and sneaked into office by the basest appeals to racial and religious prejudices, we would still vote for our party, and the great privileges of reciprocal trade relations with the neighbouring Republic. When will these appeals to bigotry cease? Are not the Catholics of this country just as loyal to the British flag as the members of any other religious denomination? Have we not given proof, time and time out of number of our appreciation of British Institutions, and British Fair Play? Have not Catholics, Irish, Scotch and English, always been at the forefront, on the field of battle, ready to die, ready to seal their fidelity with their blood, in defence of British liberty? If not, then history is a base fabrication, and the writers gross fabricators. Judging from the tenor of some peoples' conversation, and they are by no means the poor, or illiterate, we Catholics have no rights or privileges in this fair Dominion. That we are here by the grace and favour of the majority, and that, at their beck or nod, we must be shunted away. I would like just to ask a question here, and in that question I wish to appeal to generous, broad-minded, liberty-loving feelings of our separated brethren, can we hope to build up a grand country, on this side of the Atlantic, by carrying into our daily lives the petty spites, animosities and religious rancour, which characterized our mistaken ancestors in their island home? Should these insular bickerings have ever been imported into this free Canadian land?

This country has a brilliant future, if we but learn how to attain it. Ubi concordia, ibi victoria, is a motto, true to-day, as in the centuries that are past and gone forever. We must learn to unite. We must sink forever, all feelings of animosity or ill-will, and look only to our common country and its future welfare. No matter if we do differ in religious belief, that is no reason why we should be enemies, and ready to fly at each other's throat. Our common country should be the golden link to bind us inseparably into one compact whole, a source of strength, and not a menace to each other's welfare. I regard that man, no matter who he may be, who directly, or indirectly appeals to racial or religious prejudices, to the detriment of any class, as an enemy to our country and a hindrance to our advancement. By such appeals, a purpose may be accomplished, but will that compensate for the bitterness and ill-will aroused, which years cannot efface? I fancy not. Only last week I read in an American Journal, a lengthy account of the celebration of Cardinal Gibbons' golden jubilee. Among the public men to offer greetings to the aged Cardinal, and to testify on the public platform to their love and admiration for His Eminence, were President W. H. Taft, Vice-President, Jas. S. Sherman, ex-President Theodore Roosevelt, Hon. Jos. G. Cannon, Senator Elihu Root, Ambassador James Bryce (speaker), Hon. Champ Clark, Governor Austin L. Crothers, Mayor Jas. H. Preston, and others, all the distinguished statesmen of the American Republic.

President Taft, in his opening remarks, said:

"This assembly, I venture to say, can find few counterparts in history. We are met as American citizens to congratulate the American primate of one of the great churches of the world, upon the twenty-fifth anniversary of his accession to the highest office of his church, but one, and upon the fiftieth anniversary of his entering the church as one of its priests. We are here not as members of any denomination; we are not here in any official capacity, but we are here to recognize and honour in him, his high virtues as a patriotic member of our political community, and one who through his long and useful life, has spared no efforts in the cause of good citizenship and the uplifting of men."

Ambassador Bryce, from Great Britain, said in part:

"Is it not a beautiful sight when we think of those ages of the past, in which those of us who do not belong to the Church, which His Eminence represents, and those of us who do belong to that Church, were divided by bitter antagonisms and mutual suspicions—is it not a blessed thing that to-day we can all meet without distinction of religious faith, to pay honour to one who illustrates the fundamental principles of Christianity by his life as well as by his teachings."

And I note by a despatch in the press that His Royal Highness, the Duke of Connaught, who is as near the Throne as a man can be, and not be on it, at Ottawa, occupied a place on the same platform with the Papal delegate to Canada, His Excellency Monsignor Stagni, and his Secretary—an evidence that under the British Crown the exercise of discrimination, bigotry and exclusion are not practised.

Who, but the small, narrow-minded illiterate bigot will dare assert that it is not a cheering, consoling thought to know that these antagonisms and mutual suspicions are vanishing into thin air, like the morning mist touched by the rising sun? And who but the enemy of his country will strive to revive such buried feelings, by base appeals to a past, which history should blush to record.

Religious intolerance, bitterness, and racial animosities are always to be regretted; they are bad in any country, but they are intolerable and inexcusable in a country like Canada.

We have scarcely begun the great work of developing our national resources of making our people Canadian in sentiment and in action. No matter what our love may be for the land of our ancestors; no matter how the green hills of Erin, the sunny vales of England, or the beautiful highlands of Scotland, may appeal to our affections, still we must never forget that Canada is our home, for her we should live, in her we should pride, and for her future generations we should sow the seeds of peace, concord, mutual love, mutual admiration and mutual forbearance.

Yours etc.,
Ennismore.

OBITUARY

WILLIAM GEORGE SIMMONS

William George Simmons, infant child of Mr. and Mrs. William Simmons, 42 Jackson avenue, passed away to-day after a brief illness. The funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon, from the family residence, at 3 o'clock. Rev. W. C. Riddiford will officiate.

POST CARD COLUMN

To the Editor of The Examiner.

Dear Sir,—In regard to the statement made in last night's Examiner about a Boys' Club in Lakefield, which Rev. Mr. Coon is said to have organized, and which was to be run along interdenominational lines, it seems only fair to state that two such clubs, a senior and a junior, were organized and successfully run by Rev. Mr. Sowers, when he was in Lakefield, and both these clubs were run along interdenominational lines. In the membership of the clubs were boys of all the churches, not excluding the Roman Catholics.

Yours truly,
"One Who Knows"

PORT McNICOLL

ONTARIO ONTARIO

THE NEW C.P.R. EASTERN TERMINAL ON GEORGIAN BAY, AT TORONTO'S BACK DOOR

117 MILES FROM TORONTO

Quietly, and without the knowledge of Toronto people, the Canadian Pacific Railway have been building on the shores of Georgian Bay, at Port McNicoll, what one of their own officials has said will be the LARGEST TERMINAL on their system. For months the work of creating a new shipping port has been going on. Seven Million Dollars have already been spent, ten millions will be spent. Grain elevators are now being erected, freight sheds provided and a city is in the making.

We have in our offices maps and photos showing the immensity of the work being so rapidly pushed to completion by the C. P. R. We ask you to call and look these over—it will pay you. We will also show you the best located lots in Port McNicoll. Lots that are situated in the heart of the busiest district. We are selling them at a price that will re-imburse you more than four fold. You do not need a heavy cash deposit—and the lots are not high priced.

PORT McNICOLL IS NOW THE TERMINAL OF THE C.P.R., GEORGIAN BAY

All freight and tourist travel is via Port McNicoll. Port McNicoll will have low freight rates. It is the logical point for flour mills, factories and distributing warehouses, and is 134 miles nearer the seaboard than the former Georgian Bay Terminal. Port McNicoll has to-day what many a new town takes 10 years to acquire, namely, sewers and water. History repeats itself. What Fort William, Port Arthur, and Owen Sound are to-day, Port McNicoll will be in a few short months.

WE VENTURE TO SAY THAT

PORT McNICOLL IN 1915 WILL HAVE 15,000 PEOPLE
BUY YOUR LOT TO-DAY

WE HAVE SOLD TO DATE OVER 80 LOTS. PRICES RANGE FROM $175 TO $250. 1-3 CASH

From Owen Sound to Peterboro is about 210 miles. From Port McNicoll to Peterboro, about 90 miles or a saving of 120 miles on the haul from Georgian Bay to Montreal and the ocean liners.

Grades out of Owen Sound are heavy. From Port McNicoll to Peterboro a perfect line allows the carrying of 60 cars per train of grain. See this advantage?

The Canadian Pacific Railway directors know all about Port McNicoll. Look out for huge flour mills, for the Lake of the Woods and Ogilvy Flour Companies at Port McNicoll.

Last year the C. P. R. handled over its systems seven and a half million barrels of flour. The export trade is growing. How many million barrels of flour will be handled at Port McNicoll?

Port McNicoll is blessed in every way. Bala Falls is only a few miles away and great power, under the auspices of the C.P.R., will be generated and transmitted to Port McNicoll.

ALLY YOUR DOLLARS WITH PORT McNICOLL AND REAP FOUR-FOLD

OUR GUARANTEE

We guarantee the title to our lots in Port McNicoll to be perfect.

We guarantee to furnish a good and valid deed to each purchaser of a lot or lots in Port McNicoll.

We guarantee to pay all expenses, both for time and money expended if any person who upon investigation finds that we have stated anything in printed literature or written letter materially at variance with the facts in regard to Port McNicoll.

We guarantee to return all money paid to us if conditions are not as represented in our printed matter and written letters.

Ex.-Tottenham Harrier Enters The Senior Race Some Y.M.C.A. Starters

The latest entry in the Examiner senior road race is Will Miller, of 718 Water street, Peterborough, who is an ex-member of the famous Tottenham, Eng., Harriers. The English runner states than seven miles is more his distance than ten miles, and that he is known as a first-class man at seven miles. He is confident of his ability to negotiate the longer route and his entry adds still further class to the field.

The Y.M.C.A. junior department entered a brigade of junior runners yesterday and hope to carry off the five mile race with either Cecil Armstrong, Cecil Brown, Alex. Darling or O. Taylor. This quartette are all in good shape and have been training faithfully for the big event. The "Y" did not get a winner last year, contrary to the usual conditions, but they are hot after both races this year. It is likely that their entries in both senior and junior events will be augmented before the entry list closes.

EAST END ATHLETIC CLUB HOLD ENJOYABLE BANQUET

The "Boys" Gather in the Old Club Room and Spend a Social Evening---The Conventional Toast List Preceded By an Address on Land Taxation.

Last night was a gala night for Mark Street Athletic and Debating Club, when a full complement of members gathered in the Club rooms, and casting aside all business cares, they made merry to the tune of knives and forks, and a bountiful table. That the members of this club are not lacking when it comes to extending the hand of friendship and hospitality to the stranger, who is fortunate enough to venture within their gates, was clearly evidenced in the manner which they performed their duty in this respect, to the number of strangers who were present.

Rev. Mr. Cragg, in the absence of the President of theClub, Mr. Bert Gillespie, who, owing to unavoidable circumstances, was unable to be present, very ably occupied the chair. After the wants of the inner man had been caterd to, the chairman introduced the first number on the programme, this being an address by Mr. Hampden Burnham, M.P., on "Land Taxation." The speaker's remarks were chiefly confied to an elucidation of the benefits to be derived from thesingle system of taxation, as against that of the multiple system, which is at present in vogue. rived from the single system of taxation of the land alone, regardless of the buildings which may be erected upon it, while the latter calls for a taxation of the land, the buildings erected upon it, and the income of the owner, who occupies the land. He concluded his remarks by a strong appeal to the young men to cultivate the habit of reading certain specified works, such as would tend to enlighten and uplift the moral character

Next followed the toast list, the first one one the list being a toast to the King, which was proposed by Mr. Gamble, and responded to by the singing of God Save the King on the part of the gathering.

Mr. Stillman Gage then favoured the gathering with a solo, which was highly appreciated. Next followed a toast to the "Stranger," proposed by Mr. Taylor, and ably responded to by Mr. Fowler. A toast to "The Press" and one to the "The Ladies," both of which were proposed by Dr. Middleton, terminated an excellent programme, a very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by the singing of the "National Anthem" and a brief prayer by the chairman, Rev. Mr. Cragg.

New Rink For Belleville

Belleville has a new hockey rink for the coming winter. It is located a short distance north and east of the former location, and is of the same size as the original, being, with possibly one exception, the largest rink in Ontario. The building is 210 feet and the ice surface 190 feet by 80 feet. Hockey will be provided by the intermediate and junior series of the O.H.A.

Two Fast Games Of Basketball

Two fast games of basketball were played in the Junior Collegiate Class Basketball League yesterday afternoon. The first game was between the Athletics and Giants, and after a see-saw game, first one team leading, then the other, the Athletics pulled the game out of the fire with a score of 18 to 14.

The second game between the Hungry Five and White Sox, was even closer, the checking being very close which kept the score down. At the expiration of full time the score was found to be a tie, 8 all. Play was resumed until one team scored a basket, which fell to the Hungry Five, making the final score, Hungry Five, 10; White Sox, 8.

The Senior Leaders Corps meet tonight at 6.30 for tea, and it is important that every member be present.

Accommodation For Runners

In other years the runners in the Examiner Senior road race have had some difficulty at Lakefield in regard to dressing room accommodation, but this will be remedied this year as the Examiner has made arrangements with Mr. Lawless, proprietor of the Lakefield House, for a room in which the runners may get into their running togs. The senior race will start as usual at 10.30 o'clock, sharp, and runners may go out to Lakefield in the 'bus, which will leave the Y. M. C. A. sharp at 8.30 o'clock on Monday morning, or, if they prefer, they may go to Lakefield on the G. T. R. morning train, which leaves Peterborough at 7 a.m. The Y. M. C. A., with their usual kindness and courtesy, have extended to the runners a cordial invitation to make use of their splendid dressing rooms and shower baths. Contestants may change into their running suits at the Y. M. C. A. if they wish, and drive out to Lakefield, returning to the building to dress and for a bath after the race is over. The 'bus, which will follow the runners, will carry their clothes, which in all cases will be left at the Y. M. C. A.

The Junior runners will be started at 10.30 o'clock near the five-mile post on the Lakefield road and will be driven out in 'bus, which will leave the Y. M. C. A. at 9.15 a.m.

The prises are on exhibition in the north window of Messrs. Trebilcock Bros'. store.

Old Boys' Line-up

Manager Eugene Hurtubise of the Peterborough Old Boys' team, has rounded his fourteen in shape for Saturday's game with the West End team and is confident that the boys of the old brigade will make the present day team look like a squad from the Old Ladies' Home. Manager Hurtubise has called a practise of his players for to-night at Central Park at 7.15 o'clock, when the following men are requested to be out for signal practice: Dr. McPherson, Chris. Graham, Dick Evans, A. Quinlan, S. Canniff, Frank O'Connor, George Lundy, Jack O'Brien, Dick Thornton, J. Dorris, Jack Dennard, W. Fitzgerald, Art Elliott, Eugene Hurtubise, Bill Grady, Bill Meagher, Jim Davidson, Joe Picard, and any other old players who want to get into the game. The West Ends and Old Boys will play Saturday, rain, shine, or snow.

A Winter Coat of Culture

MANY men whose duties only take them out for a short time each day, require and overcoat which will do for all occasions.

This is it—a heavy cloth or melton coat, fly front, single breasted with velvet collar as here shown.

Colors—Blue, Black and Grey.

Thoroughly made, smart appearance, shape retaining. This is a coat that lasts. It pays to buy a good one.

Fashion-Craft coats of this class are good—and cost no more than the other kind.

Prices $15. $20. $25. $30.

Sanction For Examiner Races

TORONTO, OCT. 24. — Sanctions have been issued by the Ontario Amateur Athletic Union for the following meets, to be held on Thanksgiving Day, and athletes should be careful not to compete at unauthorized gatherings: Hamilton Herald road race, Guelph Cross Country Association meet, Royal Canadian Bicycle Club Marathon, City Amateur boxing tournament, Oct. 27, 28 and 30. The Peterborough Examiner road races will also be sanctioned events, the formalities being completed today.

Preparing For Defence

Special Wire to the Examiner.

BOSTON, OCT. 24.—In preparation for the special sessions of the Suffolk Grand Jury next Thursday when evidence in the Linnell murder case will be presented, the police and private detectives worked assiduously to-day, the former to secure additional material and substantiate the testimony of several witnesses, and the detectives to secure evidence to build up the defence of the Rev. Clarence V. T. Richeson, pastor of Immanuel Baptist church of Cambridge, who is under arrest on the charge of murdering the nineteen-year-old Hyannis music student in this city, on the night of October 14.

District Attorney Pelletier, who will take charge of the case before the Grand Jury, went over the evidence in the hands of the police officials, and Mr. Richeson's attorneys continued their work in establishing their client's case, the trial of which is expected in January.

Money For Defence.

The activity of the police in the case is matched by the alacrity of private detectives and nothing which can be done in the interest of the accused minister is being left undone. Much financial aid will be furnished to Richeson and his trial will be fiercely contested upon every ground known to medico-legal jurisprudence. Activity of the police in an effort to locate the time and place of the delivery of the poison to Miss Linnell was continued to-day. Police officials endeavoured to find out if the pastor and Avis dined together in a restaurant on Saturday, Oct. 14.

The report of the analysis of the stomach of Avis Linnell by Prof. Whitney of the Harvard Medical school, is being eagerly awaited and it is believed that this will throw some light on the reason she lived twenty-five minutes after taking the dose of poison which ordinarily causes death to be almost instantaneous. The quality and quantity of cyanide compared with that purchased at Hahn's drug store is expected to have great bearing on the case.

Will Exhume Body.

Upon order of District Attorney Pelletier it was arranged to exhume the body of Avis to-day and have it brought from Hayannis to Boston.

It is said by the police that an extended examination may produce additional important evidence for the Government. Incidentally it will be definitely known whether the receptacle which contained the cyanide of potassium was left in the pocket of the bathrobe which was interred with the body.

Lines of Defence.

It was learned authoritatively today that the defence will be based on the grounds of "reasonable doubt."

Ten distinct grounds will be advanced. They are: First, Richeson will admit that he had been engaged to Avis Linnell at the time he fell in love with Violet Edmands, the heiress, and will admit that he was in a quandary as to just how to break off the engagement with Miss Linnell. Second, Richeson will attempt to show that when he left Hyannis, Miss Linnell was reconciled to breaking off the engagement and had offered him back his engagement ring. Third, he will deny absolutely any improper relations with Avis Linnell and any knowledge of her physical condition. Fourth, he will claim that the only times he met Miss Linnell this fall were at her request and to offer her friendly advice. Fifth, he will admit buying cyanide of potassium from druggist Hahn, but will deny that he said he wanted to kill "a female dog," or that he asked Hahn to keep the purchase a secret.

Sixth, he will produce the original vial of cyanide with its contents, so far as can be proven, intact. Seventh, he will give as his reason for not killing the dog that the Carters, with whom he roomed, were fond of the animal and as he intended soon to move, he decided not to kill the dog. Eighth, he will try to establish an alibi for his movements on the Saturday that Avis Linnell met her death. He will deny having met her that day. Ninth, he will produce letters showing that Avis Linnell regarded their engagement as broken. Tenth, he will deny most of the alleged telephone conversations the police claim to have witnesses to support.

THE COLD SNAP

The sudden drop in temperature was undoubtedly responsible for the appearance on the streets this morning of a number of fur coats, and other garments generally credited to winter wear. It was a gentle reminder of what we might expect from now on, as the weather man at this time of the year is generally conceded to be in a cantankerous mood. One individual, no doubt with a view of offsetting with disdain the actions of the weather man, appeared on George street with a straw hat, an article which made him the cynosure of many eyes. He, however, wended his way with an indifference that might well become a book agent.

St. Andrew's Church District Meeting To-night

St. Andrew's church will hold the first of their district meetings to-night at 8 o'clock. These meetings are partly business, partly devotional, and partly social. The congregation has been divided into seven districts; and the last Wednesday evening of each month the mid-week service will not be held in the church, but in its stead seven meetings, one in each district, will be conducted.

District No. 1—Consists of that section lying west of Rubidge and south of Charlotte, and the meeting will be in the home of Mrs. Shannon, 483 King.

District No. 2—Rubidge street east and Charlotte street south. This district will meet at the home of Mr. Archie Moore, 260 Aylmer St.

District No. 3—Rubidge street west and the section of the city lying between Brock and Charlotte; will meet at St. Andrew's manse.

District No. 4—Bounded on the west by Rubidge street, on the east by the Otonabee River, on the north by Brock street, and on the south by Charlotte; will meet at the residence of Mr. J. John, 418 Rubidge.

District No. 5—All that territory lying west of Rubidge and north of Brock and Weller; will meet at the home of Mr. G. Walter Green, 543 Park st.

District No. 6—The territory east of Rubidge and north of Brock st., place of meeting at the residence of Mr. W. J. Chisholm, 559 Water street.

District No. 7—East City; will meet at the home of Mr. George A. Gillespie, 120 Hunter street East.

A cordial invitation is extended to the members and adherents of St. Andrew's church to be present at these gatherings.

Mrs. Dr. Burns and her little daughter, Miss Betty, of Vancouver, are the guests of Mrs. Burns' father, Mr. Adam Hall.

Mr. W. Bathgate, a former resident of Peterborough and an old member of St. Andrew's Guild, is in the city on a short visit. Mr. Bathgate is interested in real estate in Calgary and is an enthusiastic believer in the present and future of that city and of the West in general.

Settle By Arbitration

Special to The Examiner.

The arbitrators to decide the price to be paid by the C. N. R. to Mr. Pearce for his farm in the township of Hope, will meet to-day. Mayor R. A. Mulholland will act for Mr. Ramsden, of Toronto for the C.N.R., while His Honour Judge Huycke, of Peterborough, has been selected as the third arbitrator.

AUTUMN TIMES

A deep silence has settled on the wood. Across the rill a grey grouse is drumming on the grey trunk of a fallen tree. The grey squirrel is gathering nuts for the winter. The young deer has changed his summer coat for one of a more sombre hue; a red-brown to match the autumn leaves. Now the leaves are falling, unveiling the forest and opening the long avenues through which we get glimpses of jumping deer. If you take your rifle and go up into the "Highlands of Ontario" and stand perfectly still some autumn morning, you can see the red deer racing by. Any Grand Trunk Agent can tell you how to get there.

CHURCH NOTICES

KNOX CHURCH NOTICES.

There will be the usual mid-week service to-night at 8 o'clock, followed by the Teachers' Training Class at 9 o'clock.

On Thursday afternoon the annual Thankoffering meeting of the Women's Missionary Society will be held at 3.30 o'clock. Mrs. Keith will give the address. All ladies of the congregation are urged to be present, and a cordial invitation is extended to members of other churches.

There will be special Thanksgiving services on Sunday next. Suitable music will be provided by the choir, and in the evening there will be a Thanksgiving song service. Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, B.A., principal of the Collegiate Institute, will give an address on "The Great Hymns of the Church."

TURKS ARE REPULSED

Desperate Fighting Occurs in the Assaults on the Trenches at Tripoli.

LOSSES ARE HEAVY

Tripoli, Oct. 26.—Fight Monday was of a desperate nature. The Arabs rose against the Italians at the time of the Turkish attack on the outposts and the Italian losses were heavy.

It is nevertheless clear that the Italians can count on the greater number of Arabs in the country. Those who attacked the Bersaglieri numbered two or three hundred, including many Turks dressed as Arabs. In the town the number of rebels is smaller still.

The Italian soldiers remained perfectly calm under fire. When the Arabs found the Italians seriously engaged at Sciaralghad repelling the Turkish attack they opened fire among the gardens, the thick vegetation of which makes them almost impenetrable.

The fourth company of the Eleventh Bersaglieri accepted the situation without flinching, the men in the trenches firing in turn. One man who was seriously wounded bandaged a gaping wound with his handkerchief and continued fighting. When ordered to go to an ambulance he refused, and it required four men to remove him to the Red Cross station by force.

A sergeant of carabinieri, stationed with his men at the mosque near Sciaralghad, where a large number of Arabs were in ambush, insisted on going out on a scouting expedition, saying the bullet that would kill him was not yet manufactured. He had hardly turned the corner of the mosque when a volley fired at about ten paces killed both him and his horse.

A detachment of Italian soldiers on the flank, who had seen four Arabs rise from cover to shoot, fired immediately, killing the Arabs.

Naval Lieutenant Roselli, who happened to be with the outposts when the firing commenced, placed himself at the head of a detachment of the Eighty-Second Regiment, and began a forward movement, with the object of reconnoitring the ground.

The mounted carabinieri, who replaced on the left flank the cavalry engaged on the front at Bommeliana and Gargaresh, covered themselves with glory.

The Turks and Arabs showed equal disregard for danger. They appeared to be quite indifferent to death.

Every Arab house was found to be a hiding-place for arms. The ammunition and rifles landed from the Turkish transport Derna had been lowered at the ends of ropes into wells. Sacks of cartridges were hidden in the houses.

Holy Ghost Leader Arrested.

Durham, Maine, Oct. 26.—Rev. F. German Elections.

Berlin, Oct. 26.—It was officially announced yesterday that the elections for members of the Reichstag would be held on Jan. 12. The present session will probably close at the end of November or early in December. Meantime the Reichstag hopes to dispose of the labor exchange measure, the new workmen's insurance bill and reform the criminal code. Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg will probably reply to the interpellation concerning the Moroccan negotiations with France.

George Will Case.

Kingston, Oct. 26.—Two months ago, when the famous George will was found, it was discovered that some person had tampered with it. The figure "four" had been changed to "fourty," the spelling being incorrect, showing it had been changed. When it came before Chief Justice Mulock, in the assize court, he ordered that the word "four" be accepted as the intent of the testator. New settlement papers between the widow and other interested parties are being made out.

A NEW DIFFICULTY

The Chinese Assembly Impeaches a Cabinet Minister.

DEMAND PUNISHMENT

Pekin, Oct. 26.—Further defections to the rebels, including Nanchang, capital of the Province of Kiangsi, and Klielin, capital of Kwangsi, have served to increase the tension here over the revolution. To add to the seriousness of the situation, the Tzuchengyuan, China's first national assembly, yesterday gave to the Manchus what the legations consider an ultimatum. The assembly impeached Sheng-Hsuan-Huai, president of the Ministry of Post and Communications, and demanded his dismissal with severe punishment.

A reply is required from the Government to-day, failing which the assembly will dissolve and the members return to their respective provinces. From the temper shown, it is believed that the assembly will carry out the threat. The only course open to the Government is either to sacrifice a man who is considered by the foreigners the strongest member of the Cabinet, or, retaining him, declare war on the assembly, as well as on the best majority of Chinese.

The charges against Sheng-Hsuan-Huai are those formulated by the people of Szechuen, Hupeh and Hunan. Sheng negotiated the loans for the nationalization of the railways, and has been a leading advocate of the anti-provincial policy, which is regarded as largely responsible for the revolution. The inhabitants of these provinces have shown strong opposition to the proposed railway construction. At the meeting of the assembly yesterday the members urged that they were not against foreign loans, but against the methods employed and the results, which were tantamount to robbing the pockets of the Chinese, who had already begun the railways, and selling them out to foreigners.

When the assembly rose to vote, even the front row Manchu princes, evidently intimidated by the Radicals, stood up, demanding the noted mandarin's degradation.

Gen Yin-Tchang's silence has given rise to innumerable speculations. The War Minister in the field seems to consider it unnecessary to communicate anything but his needs to the presidents of the other Government boards. Only the palace seems to know his intentions.

The Imperialist commander has not been followed by any foreigners, even the foreign controllers of the railway having withdrawn, either voluntarily or by request. Therefore it is impossible to ascertain whether or not the reports regarding the Imperial army, upon which the dynasty's hope depends, is seriously disorganized. The troops have been pushed forward without having been safeguarded in any manner, which would already have meant disaster had the enemy been more capable.

The trains go down to the south laden with soldiers and equipment, but they do not return. The troops set forth without sufficient ammunition; then quantities of ammunition follow, but no commissariat supplies. There are rumors of mutinies, retreats, and desertions.

It is now said that the engine drivers who previously were reported as having been shot for refusing to take the trains forward, were really shot because they proceeded, the soldiers not desiring to meet the enemy. The foreign engineer, Bouillard, with his staff, will go south to-day and endeavor to reorganize the railway traffic for Yin-Tchang.

Nevertheless, in spite of disorganization, inability and disaffection, the army evidently has moved steadily forward. A wireless report from Hankow last night indicated that the Imperialist and revolutionary forces are already closely in touch.

The Government authorities have succeeded in arresting a large number of students who attempted a manifestation favoring rebellion in Tientsin.

Fear Mohammedan Troubles.

Toronto, Oct. 26.—A cable from Honon, China, to the Presbyterian Foreign Mission office in Toronto, yesterday, states that the situation is quiet there. The movement among the Mohammedans is a source of some anxiety among the mission officials here, the church having some forty nine missionaries in Honan Province. Should an anti-Christian feeling be stirred up by them, there is a possibility of the entire Christian population being wiped out.

MAGEE ON THE STAND

Son-in-Law Gives his Version of the Shaw Murder.

ADMITS ILL TREATMENT

Cornwall, Oct. 26.—The McRae murder case occupied the assizes before Judge Sutherland all day yesterday and will last until some time on Saturday. About an hour of the morning session was taken up with the selection of the jurors.

The first witness called was Dr. Magee of Carp, who made two expeditions to Glengarry, to recover possession of, or, as the defence claims, kidnap Dr. Magee's child with which she had fled to her father's home at Bridge End, Glengarry, after several disagreements with her husband. He told of the two attempts to recover his child, his quarrels with his wife and finally, under cross-examination, admitted having used her in a manner unbecoming a gentleman. He had seized her by the hair on one occasion, on another he had shoved her and she fell down. Letters were produced to show that he had written to her using an insulting name.

D. C. McRae, called by the crown, told briefly of the visit of Dr. Magee and his friends on July 1, and their search of the house.

When it came down to cross-examination there was another squabble between Messrs. Pringle and Blackstock as to the admission of certain evidence in contradiction of Dr. Magee. Part of this was ruled out, but McRae was permitted to contradict Dr. Magee most emphatically on the point of interfering between the doctor and his wife. He had never said that unless she had liberty of conscience he would have to take her home. Mrs. Magee could no longer stand the treatment meted out to her by her lord and master and took advantage of her husband's absence to leave home with her child for the last time.

Because he was nearing the hiding place of Mrs. Magee and her child, D. C. McRae secured an old gun and threatened to shoot Dr. Magee. The doctor turned and made a detour to the roadway, joining the others, who had been compelled to move up 100 yards or so to save their tires.

After a brief confab and seeing another woman with a child at McRae's door, the party started back afoot, when they were confronted by the hired man, an Englishman named Rosser, who had picked up the shotgun and, dropping on one knee, threatened to "blow their bloody heads off."

Under re-examination by Mr. Blackstock, McRae said that he was not willing that Dr. Magee should get possession of the child unless the doctor produced authority. He wished Dr. Magee to believe that the old useless gun was a good one, and would be used unless the doctor left the premises. He had his hand on the axe which was on the road and had told Farquhar to cut the tires of the motor unless the party moved away.

He did not know who got the rifle for Farquhar, nor where Rosser got his gun. He heard the report of a rifle shot but could not swear that it was fired by Farquhar. He did not suspect that anyone was injured by the shot. Next morning he heard for the first time, while at church, that a man had been shot and killed. He knew that Farquhar was a good shot, but could not say he was a crack shot.

In reply to his lordship, McRae said that he was between where the shot was fired and the motor.

John Uren, the Bainsville constable, denied having a revolver and said that what had been mistaken for a revolver was a paid of hand-cuffs. Up to the time the party left the house to search the orchard, witness had not seen anything of F. D. McRae.

When the party got into the motor Dr. Magee, James Magee, Shaw and the witness were looking backwards. F. D. McRae came down the road to the rest of the McRae party, where, after speaking to them, he cried out, "You damned Protestants hound." He then dropped on his knees and seemed to be aiming at Dr. Magee.

When arrested by the witness next morning McRae had said that if anyone had been shot they had shot themselves.

Under cross-examination Uren admitted being a boy from a home in England. He had held people up before. As a preventive officer he admitted having carried handcuffs, which he sometimes carried to church. He drew the handcuffs with the intention of handcuffing D. C. McRae if he interferred with Dr. Magee in his search of the McRae premises, expecting to find D. C. McRae, the only man on the premises.

He did not know if he had any right to be on the premises. He had no papers. He had arranged by letter with Dr. Magee to join in the attack, and to stand between Dr. Magee and anyone who interfered with him.

Witness admitted getting D. C. McRae in a corner, holding him up with the handcuffs. Along with Dr. Magee he had prowled around the McRae homestead in June and knew all about the attempts to kidnap the child. He knew that he had no legal authority to enter D. C. McRae's house. F. D. McRae was on his knee three or four seconds before the auto started.

He said that Magee was mistaken in saying that the auto had moved one hundred yards or so before the firing.

Autumn is the Time

GLASSES
WHY?

The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boon at this season of the year. This no doubt accounts for much of the present increased demand for Glasses.
Appointment for examining the eyes for Glasses is usually necessary.

Death of Eye Specialist.

Cornwall, Oct. 26.—Dr. Alex. F. Pringle, a specialist in the treatment of diseases of the eye, who was spending a few days with relatives in town before proceeding to his home in Northfield, Minn., after a trip to Europe, died suddenly at the residence of his sister at noon yesterday. He had been in ill-health since an automobile accident in London, Eng.

The late Dr. Pringle was a son of the late Judge Pringle, and was born here 58 years ago. He has resided in the west for a good many years. He leaves a wife in Northfield, but he has no children.

Elopements to Blame.

Washington, Oct. 26—Statistics compiled from the records of the District Supreme Court show that 40 per cent. of all divorces here are the result of runaway matches and 30 per cent. result from marriages where one of the contracting parties was under 21 years of age.

Eighty per cent. of the divorce suits have been filed by women and less than 10 per cent. of the couples who seek the courts are parents. There is one divorce suit in the District Court to every four marriage licenses.

Want Colonial Consuls.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—At yesterday's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce a report was submitted and approved to the effect that the Canadian Government should make representation to the Imperial Government so as to gain consent to the recognition of the right of Colonial Governments to appoint consuls abroad, or so to enlarge their own consular system as to admit colonial representatives, who should be empowered to watch exclusively over colonial interests.

Offered $2,000,000 For Church.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—Major John T. McBride yesterday made a written offer of $2,000,000 for the St. James' Methodist Church, and it seems to be the general belief that the church will be sold. It is stated that this is the only offer in view. Major McBride is acting for Mr. J. T. McCreevy of Winnipeg, but it is thought that the Canadian Northern are behind the sale.

Walked Off With $10,000.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A sample case containing diamonds valued at $10,000 belonging to W. C. Barry, of Newark, N.J., was stolen from the lobby of a hotel here yesterday. A man was seen to stroll leisurely from the hotel with the case, but it was believed he was the owner and no one interfered with him.

Elected to Hospital Board.

Niagara Falls, Oct. 26.—City Solicitor McBurney was elected to the General Hospital board at the annual meeting of the hospital trust yesterday, to fill the place of Dr. Norman Walker, who recently moved to Toronto. The other trustees were all re-elected.

TURKS ARE REPULSED

Desperate Fighting Occurs in the Assaults on the Trenches at Tripoli.

LOSSES ARE HEAVY

Tripoli, Oct. 26.—Fight Monday was of a desperate nature. The Arabs rose against the Italians at the time of the Turkish attack on the outposts and the Italian losses were heavy.

It is nevertheless clear that the Italians can count on the greater number of Arabs in the country. Those who attacked the Bersaglieri numbered two or three hundred, including many Turks dressed as Arabs. In the town the number of rebels is smaller still.

The Italian soldiers remained perfectly calm under fire. When the Arabs found the Italians seriously engaged at Sciaralghad repelling the Turkish attack they opened fire among the gardens, the thick vegetation of which makes them almost impenetrable.

The fourth company of the Eleventh Bersaglieri accepted the situation without flinching, the men in the trenches firing in turn. One man who was seriously wounded bandaged a gaping wound with his handkerchief and continued fighting. When ordered to go to an ambulance he refused, and it required four men to remove him to the Red Cross station by force.

A sergeant of carabinieri, stationed with his men at the mosque near Sciaralghad, where a large number of Arabs were in ambush, insisted on going out on a scouting expedition, saying the bullet that would kill him was not yet manufactured. He had hardly turned the corner of the mosque when a volley fired at about ten paces killed both him and his horse.

Under re-examination by Mr. Blackstock, McRae said that he was not willing that Dr. Magee should get possession of the child unless the doctor produced authority. He wished Dr. Magee to believe that the old useless gun was a good one, and would be used unless the doctor left the premises. He had his hand on the axe which was on the road and had told Farquhar to cut the tires of the motor unless the party moved away.

He did not know who got the rifle for Farquhar, nor where Rosser got his gun. He heard the report of a rifle shot but could not swear that it was fired by Farquhar. He did not suspect that anyone was injured by the shot. Next morning he heard for the first time, while at church, that a man had been shot and killed. He knew that Farquhar was a good shot, but could not say he was a crack shot.

In reply to his lordship, McRae said that he was between where the shot was fired and the motor.

John Uren, the Bainsville constable, denied having a revolver and said that what had been mistaken for a revolver was a pair of hand-cuffs. Up to the time the party left the house to search the orchard, witness had not seen anything of F. D. McRae.

When the party got into the motor Dr. Magee, James Magee, Shaw and the witness were looking backwards. F. D. McRae came down the road to the rest of the McRae party, where, after speaking to them, he cried out, "You damned Protestant hound." He then dropped on his knees and seemed to be aiming at Dr. Magee.

When arrested by the witness next morning McRae had said that if anyone had been shot they had shot themselves.

Under cross-examination Uren admitted being a boy from a home in England. He had held people up before. As a preventive officer he admitted having carried handcuffs, which he sometimes carried to church. He drew the handcuffs with the intention of handcuffing D. C. McRae if he interferred with Dr. Magee in his search of the McRae premises, expecting to find D. C. McRae, the only man on the premises.

He did not know if he had any right to be on the premises. He had no papers. He had arranged by letter with Dr. Magee to join in the attack, and to stand between Dr. Magee and anyone who interfered with him.

Witness admitted getting D. C. McRae in a corner, holding him up with the handcuffs. Along with Dr. Magee he had prowled around the McRae homestead in June and knew all about the attempts to kidnap the child. He knew that he had no legal authority to enter D. C. McRae's house. F. D. McRae was on his knee three or four seconds before the auto started.

He said that Magee was mistaken in saying that the auto had moved one hundred yards or so before the firing.

Aged Emperor Is Unwell.

Rome, Oct. 26.—The Pope is anxious concerning the condition of Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria, and has instructed Mgr. Bisletti, major domo of the Vatican, who is just now in Vienna, to keep him advised of the true situation.

Autumn is the Time
— FOR — GLASSES
WHY?

The increasingly long evenings of Autumn give greater opportunity for Sewing, Writing, Reading, Study, and as this is necessarily by artificial light the strain upon the eyes is such as to make Glasses quite a boon at this season of the year. This no doubt accounts for much of the present increased demand for Glasses.

Appointment for examining the eyes for Glasses is usually necessary.

Death of Eye Specialist.

Cornwall, Oct. 26.—Dr. Alex. F. Pringle, a specialist in the treatment of diseases of the eye, who was spending a few days with relatives in town before proceeding to his home in Northfield, Minn., after a trip to Europe, died suddenly at the residence of his sister at noon yesterday. He had been in ill-health since an automobile accident in London, Eng.

The late Dr. Pringle was a son of the late Judge Pringle, and was born here 58 years ago. He has resided in the west for a good many years. He leaves a wife in Northfield, but he has no children.

Elopements to Blame.

Washington, Oct. 26—Statistics compiled from the records of the District Supreme Court show that 40 per cent. of all divorces here are the result of runaway matches and 30 per cent. result from marriages where one of the contracting parties was under 21 years of age.

Eighty per cent. of the divorce suits have been filed by women and less than 10 per cent. of the couples who seek the courts are parents. There is one divorce suit in the District Court to every four marriage licenses.

Want Colonial Consuls.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—At yesterday's meeting of the Chamber of Commerce a report was submitted and approved to the effect that the Canadian Government should make representation to the Imperial Government so as to gain consent to the recognition of the right of Colonial Governments to appoint consuls abroad, or so to enlarge their own consular system as to admit colonial representatives, who should be empowered to watch exclusively over colonial interests.

Offered $2,000,000 For Church.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—Major John T. McBride yesterday made a written offer of $2,000,000 for the St. James' Methodist Church, and it seems to be the general belief that the church will be sold. It is stated that this is the only offer in view. Major McBride is acting for Mr. J. T. McCreevy of Winnipeg, but it is thought that the Canadian Northern are behind the sale.

Walked Off With $10,000.

Chicago, Oct. 26.—A sample case containing diamonds valued at $10,000 belonging to W. C. Barry, of Newark, N.J., was stolen from the lobby of a hotel here yesterday. A man was seen to stroll leisurely from the hotel with the case, but it was believed he was the owner and no one interfered with him.

Elected to Hospital Board

Niagara Falls, Ont. 26.—City Solicitor McBurney was elected to the General Hospital board at the annual meeting of the hospital trust yesterday, to fill the place of Dr. Norman Walker, who recently moved to Toronto. The other trustees were all re-elected.

DOCTORS FAILED TO HELP HER

Cured by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Pound, Wis.—"I am glad to announce that I have been cured of dyspepsia and female troubles by your medicine. I had been troubled with both for fourteen years and consulted different doctors, but failed to get any relief. After using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier I can say I am a well woman. I can't find words to express my thanks for the good your medicine has done me. You may publish this if you wish." —Mrs. Herman Sieth, Pound, Wis.

The success of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, is unparalleled. It may be used with perfect confidence by women who suffer from displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, backache, bearing-down feeling, flatulency, indigestion, dizziness, or nervous prostration.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills, and suffering women owe it to themselves to at least give this medicine a trial. Proof is abundant that it has cured thousands of others, and why should it not cure you?

If you want special advice write Mrs. Pinkham, Lynn, Mass., for it. It is free and always helpful.

"The Gun Runner"

By ARTHUR STRINGER

He never knew whether she mistook him for Ganley, or whether she had determined to remain in the wireless room, even against his wishes. But she did not go; she only drew closer in to the wall as he swung the door open for her.

It was at that moment that Ganley must have caught some dim silhouette of his figure against the less opaque blackness of the open desk. For, as the door circled back on its hinges, Ganley swung out with the oak-framed steamer-chair which he had already caught up as a weapon of defence.

He swung it short and quick, with a forward and elliptical motion, as he leaned out toward the dimly discerned shadow. He heard it strike home; he heard the inarticulate little half-groan, half-sigh, as the stunned man crumpled down over the door-sill.

Ganley also heard the woman's cry of terror, but he had other things to think of, other fish to fry. He pawed frenziedly about the cabin wall until he found the switch, and turned on the light. He saw McKinnon still sprawled half over his door-sill; he saw the woman crouched shield-like over his body; he saw the broken steamer-chair lying on the cabin floor. He also saw the heavy iron dumbbell, covered with rusted canvas lying at his feet, not six inches from the dynamo base. The terrified woman, waiting for the unknown end, screamed again, and still again, as she saw him stoop and catch it up.

It was not until the great ape-like arm of the gun-runner brought the dumbbell crashing down on the operating table that she realized her mistake, that his actual intention flashed through her.

His fury now was not being directed toward McKinnon. It was the instrument that he was attacking. For the heavy iron had struck with a crashing blow on the delicately poised responder, with its fragile and mysterious coherer, crushing the flimsy mechanism of glass and wood and metal as a mallet might crush a bird's egg. She felt McKinnon's mumbling and struggling body under her; but she gave it no thought. She only saw and knew that this maddened brute was beating the very heart out of their wireless apparatus, that with every blow he was crushing her last hopes. She dragged and wrenched McKinnon's revolver from his outstretched hand. But before she could so much as raise it, Ganley's second blow had fallen. This time it fell on the "key" itself, tearing the heavy metal lever free from its binding-post. He had just caught it up and flung it malignantly through the open cabin door, whirling out into the sea, when she fired.

Her first shot went wild. Before she had time for a second, Ganley had wheeled about and sprung on her through the smoke-filled air. The huge forty-two Colt seemed too heavy for her, beyond her strength, for she had no second chance of using it, of poising and adjusting and aiming it, as she knew she should have.

But she caught at him and clung to him, blindly, panting and screaming, wondering why no one came. She clung and clawed at him like a cat until, under the sheer fury of that attack, he had to take thought to defend himself.

He fell back a step or two, and the movement sent them both falling over the broken steamer-chair, grotesquely, foolishly. But not for a moment did the woman cease to fight and scream. The sound of it all seemed to sting the dazed McKinnon into a consciousness of what was going on. He pawed about the wall, foolishly, for support, like a child learning to walk; he dragged himself up to a sitting posture. But before he could struggle to his feet, Captain Yandel and an officer from the bridge were in the cabin. He saw them tearing and dragging at Ganley's great limbs. He saw the white and panting, disheveled group once more upright, each shaking and facing the other. Then for the first time he saw his dismantled apparatus.

"What's this shooting on my ship?" roared the captain.

"That lat tried to kill me!" cried Ganley, breathing short and quick. The woman struggled to speak, but the captain gave her no attention. His eye for the first time had fallen on McKinnon leaning against the cabin wall, with a little trickle of blood running down over one swollen cheek-bone.

"What' this mean?" he demanded of his operator. McKinnon's senses had come back to him by this time. But a hopelessness that was almost worse than death itself crept through him.

"He's killed our wireless! Our wireless! Can't you see he's killed it!"

The captain's mental state was such that ideas filtered into the narrow seat of his consciousness but slowly.

"But how? And why?"

"The responder!" gasped McKKinnon.

"But what of it?"

"Look at that responder!" cried the operator. "It's smashed. And the key's ruined! He's cut the heart out of our apparatus!"

"But I want to know the meaning of this bar-room brawling aboard my ship!" still thundered its master.

McKinnon pointed landward savagely toward the mangrove swamps and mountains of Locombia.

"He's been trying to stop my sending. He said he'd kill me if I sent."

"That's a lie," retorted Ganley. "He's working with this woman to juggle messages for Duran! They're making a tool of you and your ship!"

"That shows who's making a tool of you!" cried McKinnon, pointing with his lean and shaking finger to the shattered responder. The ship captain's face was blotched and purplish and horrible to look at by this time.

"And he's killed our wireless?"

"Look at it," answered McKinnon.

For the second time Captain Yandel looked. The indignity, the enormity of the thing threw him into a slowly growing ecstasy of sublimated rage.

"And who fired that shot?" he demanded, with an almost voluptuous delight in the anticipation of further fuel for a still more towering fire.

"I did," said the white-faced woman.

"So you did," purred the captain, slowly releasing the torrent. "And you're a nice pair, the two of you, makin' a pot-house of my ship! You half-breed filibusters! You garlic-eating outlaws! You murderin' slave-drivin' tinhorn conspirators!"

"Stop!" cried McKinnon.

"Get out o' here, you flimflam beach-combers!" roared on the unheeding officer.

"Get out o' my sight! Get down to your cabins and stay there until you're put ashore at Puerto Locombia, or by the living God, if you so much as show your nose outside your doors, I'll clap the whole lot o' you into irons and carry you back to New York harbour!"

It meant nothing to the weak and bewildered girl, after what she had gone through, but it wounded some inner and ever guarded part of her to see that McKinnon made no effort to intervene, that he had not stepped in and spoken for her.

It was not until his steadying glance met hers that she began to realize he was holding something in reserve, that he had his reasons, that he was plotting out some new line of procedure, and with this discovery came a renewed memory of the hopelessness of their position, of the dangers confronting them, of the last avenue of delivery that had been cut off from them. The blasphemy and truculence of a ship captain meant nothing to her; the satyr-like exultation of Ganley meant nothing. She knew that she had been fighting for life, or something almost as worthy as life. And she knew that the fight had by no means approached its end.

CHAPTER XXII.

THE PRIMORDIAL HOUR

It was nothing but an eye-glance that passed between Alicia and McKinnon. Yet in that fraction of a second intimacies flashed between them, a message was delivered and received the encouragement of one lonely soul offering its help to another was cryptically given and taken. It showed her, too, that judgment and intelligence were once more on their throne with her ally, that he was no longer beating and threshing his way about on the primordial sloughs of mere assault and defence. He was a thinking being once more, with his own secret ends and his own secret means to them. And she was sick of the primordial; every woman's fibre in her body was offended and felt degraded by that caveman's hand-to-hand fight through which she had passed.

The shaking-limbed captain had swung about to McKinnon.

"Have you picked up anything about fightin' in there?" he demanded, with his guttural running obligato of mariner's oaths. "Or have you been too taken up with your own fightin'?"

"I've picked up nothing," was McKinnon's answer.

"Then why can't you get Guariqui?"

The ship's master was still slow in grasping the situation.

"I tell you we're cut off from everything! My responder's gone!"

"Can't you fix it?"

"No!"

"You can't?"

"Not unless there's a De Forest responder brought aboard from Puerto Locombia."

"Can't you shift without it?"

"No more than you can live without a heart."

The captain turned on the strangely placid-eyed and listening Ganley. The latter's indifference seemed to sting him into a renewed ecstasy of anger.

"You'll cool your heels in the Puerto Locombia quartel for this," he declared, with another of his explosive oaths. "I'll damned soon hand you over where you belong!"

His threat had no ponderable effect on his placid-eyed listener. The gun-runner's heavy face, with its hound-like, pendulous jaws ,and the drooping-lidded, deep-set eyes, with their misleading look of pathos, seemed to show nothing but a patient forbearance.

"I want you to get that couple where they belong," he calmly and slowly replied. "I want that woman put where she won't be taking pot-shots at every passenger she doesn't like!"

The waiting and wide-eyed group at the door had increased by this time, until their bodies, pressing close, shut all air from the crowded cabin. The captain shouldered them back savagely. That his authority should be overridden in his own ship, on his own deck, was more than he could endure.

"Get out o' here!" he cried, in his arbitrary and inconsequential rage. "Get out o' this cabin, or I'll throw you out!"

The ship's mate, a wiry Costa Rican, with the hungry and predaceous face of a pirate, made an effort to forestall his superior officer's intention. He dropped the leather-covered bridge telescope which in his haste he had carried with him, and caught the rebellious passenger by the right arm, as though to drag him forth.

But one sweep of that huge right arm sent the mate stumbling and falling over the ruins of the steamer-chair.

Captain Yandel beheld that offence and it left him no longer a reasoning being. His last instinctive sense of order and right had been outraged. He caught up the leather-covered bridge telescope. He swung it circlingly back, above his head, as a blacksmith swings a sledge. He would have brought that poised cylinder of glass and steel blindly down on the other man's skull, had the ship's mate not caught the end of the telescope and stopped the murderous blow.

"You coward!" said Ganley, without moving. The two ship's officers still stood there, automatically and blindly and grotesquely contending for the cylinder of leather-covered steel.

"Not that way," cried the mate. "Don't kill him!"

"Yes, I'll kill him!" raged the captain. "I'll kill him any way he wants!"

"Then fight it out on deck—fight it out like men!"

"Fight it out!" echoed a half-caste deckhand, shrilly ,carried away by his feelings, as the crowd surged out into the open spaces of the star-lit deck.

"Yes, fight it out ,by God!" bellowed the infuriated and unreasoning ship's captain, peeling off his coat and waving back the circle of onlookers. "Fight it out, like men!"

Heilig, the chief engineer, pushed through the protesting crowd.

"Captain," he said in his slow and gloomy monotone, "what call've yuh to go prize-fightin' on your own ship?"

"Shut up!" howled back his superior officer. "Get back!"

"Why're yuh fightin' with a rhinoceros like him?" persisted the other.

"Get back! Gi' me room!"

The gloomy misanthrope of the engine-room did not move. He stood regarding the circle with calm and scoffing eyes.

"It ain't fittin'," he slowly objected. "And it ain't right!"

"Right? I know my rights!" yelped back Captain Yandel, waving the interloper aside.

He rolled up his sleeves ,with shaking hands, disclosing strangely fashioned tattooed figures on his thick and hirsute forearms.

McKinnon closed the door, that the woman in the cabin might not see. There was the sound of a boatswain's whistle, a murmur of voices, a quick shuffling of feet. A space was cleared on the deck, promptly, solemnly, as though for the despatch of some casual and duly appointed ship's business. Then the circle re-formed, watching and silent, waiting with set faces for what was to come. And McKinnon saw that it was indeed to come, that there was no escaping it.

For one moment only did Ganley hesitate. Just once did the deep-set and malicious eyes shift in one side-long glance of hesitancy. McKinnon, from his cabin door, could see that look. He could see the change of colour that crept slowly up through the gun-runner's flaccid face. It did not blanch, but it merged from a brick-dust tint to the dead-brown hue of untanned leather. It became cadaverous, and horrible to look at. Even then he must have seen and known that it was all madness, that it was more than useless, that it solved no problems and settled no issues. But he had no choice left to him.

McKinnon's first thought, as he watched, was that Ganley would never fight fair. Then he beheld the close-packed circle of rough and waiting faces, of bare-armed and hard-eyed watchers—for even the stokers' hole had vomited forth its soot-streaked, naked-shouldered children of wonder—and he knew that the gun-runner could gain nothing by trickery. The ferine and active brain housed in the great sun-browned skull would be of no use to him in this. The adroit and vulpine intelligence beyond its screening frontal bone could now flash out no path of deliverance. He was confronted by passions that were adamitic in their primitiveness, by forces that belonged to the world of claws and tusks and talons.

Then the two men fought.

It seemed grotesque, at first, to the wearied and indifferently watching McKinnon. It made him think of a combat between two butchers, two gross butchers clad in white. There was something ludicrous in the two heavy and lurching and staggering bodies, lunging at each other, like Pleistocene beasts from the twilight of time, like primordial monsters in the bitter and brutal combat of bitter and brutal ages. The sweat oozed out on their skins. It diamonded their faces. Then the beads of moisture ran together, and gathered into slow runnels that smarted in their eyes and moistened their necks and dripped on their clothing, mottled more and more with splashes of red.

Then it became brutish. It became blind and ponderous, like a bullfight. It impressed McKinnon as something wordlessly pathetic, it was so useless and unreasoning, so futile and foolish, in the face of all the vaster problems that confronted that lonely steamship and the lives she carried. It did not horrify him, for by this time he was beyond horror, as a swimmer is beyond thought of a passing rain-shower.

Then it became sickening. The impact of bone and flesh on flesh and bone seemed demeaning and dehumanizing to the dazed and shrinking onlooker. The hot night air, which left breathing a burden to even the untaxed lungs, made the gaspin gof the two combatants audible and vocal, made it pitiful, like the gasps of the drowning, made it short and guttural, like the tongue-choked chest heaves of an anæsthetised patient. The fighters became two vaguely heaving and gasping white hulks blotched with blood. There seemed something more than sinister in their dogged persistence. It became satanic. It grew into an affront to manhood, an insult to the quiet stars that looked down on it. It became a living nightmare, in which two coiled and striking and threshing Hates emerged from a slime that was antediluvian.

McKKinnon turned away ,sick and faint. For he had seen one of the red-blotched hulks fall back and lie full length on the deck. He had seen the Laminian's captain lean over that prostrate figure, weakly, swaying forward and then backward, where he would surely have fallen, had one of his sailors not caught him under the armpits and held him up. It was over.

Psoriasis Was Cured

After Five Years of Suffering ---Three Doctors Failed and Said Case Was Incurable

Itching and Burning Was Terrible Until Relief and Cure Was Effected by

Dr. Chase's Ointment

Psoriasis is another name for chronic eczema. It is the worst form of this dreadful itching skin disease. Once eczema has reached this stage it is usually considered incurable.

But here is a case which proves again the wonderful healing power of Dr. Chase's Ointment. Not only does relief come quickly, but the resulting benefits are thorough and lasting.

Mrs. Nettie Massey, Consecon, Ont., writes: "I thought it my duty to write you telling you the great benefit I received from using Dr. Chase's Ointment. For five years I suffered with what three doctors called Psoriasis. I doctored with three different doctors, with no good results, and one of our noted doctors told me if any one offered to guarantee me a cure for $50.00 to keep my money in my pocket, as I could not be cured.

"The disease spread all over me, even on my face and head. The itching and burning was hard to bear. At last my brother read in the paper about Dr. Chase's Ointment as a healer. I got 8 boxes, and I am glad to say I am entirely cured, not a sign of a sore to be seen. I can hardly praise the ointment enough, and you are at liberty to use my testimony, as I hope thereby to induce other sufferers to try the same."

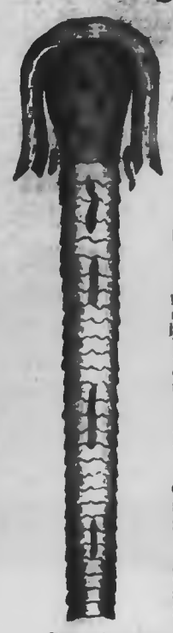
HUMAN HAIR ROOT

Showing Dandruff Germs At Work



WYETH'S SAGE AND SULPHUR HAIR REMEDY

Kills the Dandruff Germ and Makes the Hair Grow

Restores Gray Hair to Natural Color

FEW people are aware of the number of Dandruff Germs that infest the human hair and scalp. The germs which locate themselves in the follicle or sack which envelopes the root of the hair, spend a lazy existence in sucking up the juices which should go to keep life and strength in the hair. These germs cannot be seen by the naked eye, but with a magnifying glass of from 300 to 400 diameters the spores of this hair destroyer may be seen in masses, clinging to the hair.

DANDRUFF, ITCHING OF THE SCALP AND FALLING HAIR ARE A SURE SIGN OF DESTRUCTIVE GERMS.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy not only kills the dandruff germs and prevents baldness, but it also restores faded and gray hair to natural color.

Don't Experiment With Old Fashioned Hair Dyes

but save your hair and restore it to natural color and luxuriance by using Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy.

Dr. Sutton has rented the north side of the double house owned by Mr. Parsons, and intends moving his office there shortly.

Owing to the anniversary services in the Presbyterian church, the morning service in the Methodist church will, next Sunday, be withdrawn. The regular service will be held, as usual, at 7 p.m.

At the regular meeting of the Epworth League of the Methodist church on Monday evening, Miss Luella Nugent was appointed as delegate to the District Convention to be held at Cameron, on Nov. 1st.

Sympathy is extended to Mrs. T. W. McLean because of the death of her father, the late Rev. James Wesmore of India. Mr. Wesmore had been a missionary in India for over forty years.

HASTINGS NEWS

Examiner Special:

HASTINGS, OCT. 23. — Mrs. W. Stevenson and daughter, Miss Stevenson, left last week for Toronto, where they intend to reside. On the eve of their departure they were kindly remembered by the Ladies' Aid of the Methodist church, of which they were both members, and were presented with a nicely worded address, full of kind thoughts in appreciation of their work, and good wishes for prosperity in their new home.

Mrs. Bert Preston is receiving the congratulations of her friends on again securing first prize in the lady drivers competition at the Norwood fair.

Mr. W. Baker has moved into his new house on Bridge street.

Miss Maggie Nelson of Toronto, has been visiting friends in town.

Mr. S. Connal of Bobcaygeon has been renewing old acquaintances here.

Mr. Bruce Gilchrist of Campbellford, spent Sunday with friends in town.

We are sorry to say that Miss Ethel Stinson is still in a critical condition and is at present in Havelock, under Dr. Holdcroft's care. Her many friends wish her a speedy recovery.

Miss Olive Humphries spent Saturday in Seymour visiting her sister Mrs. J. Thompson.

Miss Mary McKee has been spending a few days with friends in Norwood.

Mr. C. Tucker of Norwood, gave us a call on Monday.

Miss Harper of Peterborough, has been the guest of her friend, Mis Mae Huycke.

An exciting runaway took place in town on Thursday when a team of spirited horses belonging to Mr. Mackin, broke loose and started up the front street, but were brought to a sudden standstill when they crashed into Messrs. Wilcox and Lambert's hardware store, totally ruining one large plate glass window and cutting one of the horses in the back. Fortunately, however, no one was injured as far as can be learned.

Mr. E. P. Cuffe and party, of Norwood, motored to Hastings on Friday.

The union services which have been carried on for the past three Sunday will be discontinued, as both pastors are expected to be in their respective places for next Sunday.

At the service on Sunday evening last a duet was rendered by Messrs. Hurtle and Atkinson, which was listened to with attention by the large congregation present.

Rev. D. A. Thompson, town, is a poet of no mean ability, as is evidenced by his poem, entitled, "Autumn in the Trent Valley," recently published.

PORT McNICOLL

ONTARIO ONTARIO

THE NEW C.P.R. EASTERN TERMINAL ON GEORGIAN BAY, AT TORONTO'S BACK DOOR

117 MILES FROM TORONTO

Quietly, and without the knowledge of Toronto people, the Canadian Pacific Railway have been building on the shores of Georgian Bay, at Port McNicoll, what one of their own officials has said will be the LARGEST TERMINAL on their system. For months the work of creating a new shipping port has been going on. Seven Million Dollars have already been spent, ten millions will be spent. Grain elevators are now being erected, freight sheds provided and a city is in the making.

We have in our offices maps and photos showing the immensity of the work being so rapidly pushed to completion by the C. P. R. We ask you to call and look these over—it will pay you. We will also show you the best located lots in Port McNicoll. Lots that are situated in the heart of the busiest district. We are selling them at a price that will re-imburse you more than four fold. You do not need a heavy cash deposit—and the lots are not high priced.

PORT McNICOLL IS NOW THE TERMINAL OF THE C.P.R., GEORGIAN BAY

All freight and tourist travel is via Port McNicoll. Port McNicoll will have low freight rates. It is the logical point for flour mills, factories and distributing warehouses, and is 134 miles nearer the seaboard than the former Georgian Bay Terminal. Port McNicoll has to-day what many a new town takes 10 years to acquire, namely, sewers and water. History repeats itself. What Fort William, Port Arthur, and Owen Sound are to-day, Port McNicoll will be in a few short months.

WE VENTURE TO SAY THAT

PORT McNICOLL IN 1915 WILL HAVE 15,000 PEOPLE

BUY YOUR LOT TO-DAY

WE HAVE SOLD TO DATE OVER 80 LOTS. PRICES RANGE FROM $175 TO $250. 1-3 CASH

From Owen Sound to Peterboro is about 210 miles. From Port McNicoll to Peterboro about 90 miles or a saving of 120 miles on the haul from Georgian Bay to Montreal and the ocean liners.

Grades out of Owen Sound are heavy. From Port McNicoll to Peterboro a perfect line allows the carrying of 60 cars per train of grain. See this advantage?

The Canadian Pacific Railway directors know all about Port McNicoll. Look out for huge flour mills, for the Lake of the Woods and Ogilvy Flour Companies at Port McNicoll.

Last year the C. P. R. handled over its systems seven and a half million barrels of flour. The export trade is growing. How many million barrels of flour will be handled at Port McNicoll?

Port McNicoll is blessed in every way. Bala Falls is only a few miles away and great power, under the auspices of the C.P.R., will be generated and transmitted to Port McNicoll.

ALLY YOUR DOLLARS WITH PORT McNICOLL AND REAP FOUR-FOLD

OUR GUARANTEE

We guarantee the title to our lots in Port McNicoll to be perfect.

We guarantee to furnish a good and valid deed to each purchaser of a lot or lots in Port McNicoll.

We guarantee to pay all expenses, both for time and money expended if any person who upon investigation finds that we have stated anything in printed literature or written letter materially at variance with the facts in regard to Port McNicoll.

We guarantee to return all money paid to us if conditions are not as represented in our printed matter and written letters.

DO YOU WANT TO KNOW MORE ABOUT PORT McNICOLL? IF YOU DO COME IN AND SEE US. IF YOU LIVE OUT OF TOWN SEND IN THIS COUPON. IT COSTS YOU NOTHING.

KEEPING YOUR OWN COUNSEL

I sat down recently at a hotel table, my first appearance there, and heard in one-half hour the history of the love affairs of the pretty woman who sat beside me. I had never seen her before, but she confided in me without reserve. She did not lower her voice, and it was perfectly possible for everyone else at the table to hear what she said. Things which would have been sacred to a woman of finer feelings were discussed freely. I found later that everyone in the hotel laughed and joked about the love affairs of my pretty neighbour. In spite of her many attractions she soon ceased to have any value in the exclusive social set and she was forced to associate with those who drifted in and out and who had no permanent standing. And all because she did not realize that her dignified position among successful people depended upon her ability to keep her own counsel. Her exhibitions of vanity in relating her conquests simply drove people from her instead of attracting them to her; they resented the dragging forth into the bright light of day the things which belonged to her and her alone.

One of the most charming women I have ever met, who is a brilliant conversationalist, prides herself on the fact that she never tells anything of her own affairs. She never fails to interest people, yet she does not relate to them her joys and sorrows. Only now and then, to some tried and trusted friend, does she unburden her soul. The result of this policy is that she never has her own words turned upon her, and she does not regret at some future day that she has revealed herself to others.

This is where the trouble lies when we fail to keep our own counsel. The woman who has poured out her heart to a friend in a time of weakness, usually lives to wish that she had not. The wife who complains of her husband's faults, the daughter who blames her father and mother, the sister who condemns her brother, will as a rule, repent this weakness at some later day. The world listens greedily to any recital of personal grievances, and it not only listens, but repeats. You may not feel humiliated when you confess to an intimate friend that there is a family skeleton, but when you find that all your world is talking of some half-forgotten disgrace, you wish you had remained silent. Indeed, your silence would have laid the ghost of gossip, for people cannot enlarge much on subjects of which they know nothing.

Not many years ago I knew a family of five, father and mother and three daughters. The father drank heavily, going off on periodical sprees. As he was always away from his home at such times he did not make himself conspicuous, and the family preserved absolute silence on the subject of his fault. As the years went on, and things went from bad to worse, they still perserved silence. The world speculated and wondered, but, having no definite information, was never sure just what was the matter. In later life the father got a grip on himself, and became a respected citizen. Now and then a murmur of his past came to he ears of the friends of that family, but that was all. Had the wife and daughters not kept their own counsel the father would have been disgraced. He could never have held up his head, and the chances are that his life would have ended in tragedy.

Quickest, Surest Cough Remedy Ever Used

Stops Even Whooping Cough Quickly. A Family Supply for 50c. Money Refunded if it Fails.

If someone in your family has an obstinate, deep-seated cough—even whooping cough—which has yielded slowly to treatment, buy a 50 cent bottle of Pinex and watch that cough vanish. If it fails, money back promptly, and without argument.

A 50 cent bottle of Pinex, when mixed with home-made sugar syrup, makes 16 ounces—a family supply—of the most effective cough remedy that money can buy, at a saving of $2. Gives instant relief and will usually wipe out a bad cough in 24 hours or less. Easily prepared in five minutes—directions in package.

Pinex Cough Syrup has a pleasant taste—children take it willingly. It stimulates the appetite and is slightly laxative—both good features. Splendid for croup, hoarseness, throat tickle, incipient lung troubles, and a prompt, successful remedy for whooping cough.

Pinex is a special and highly concentrated compound of Norway White Pine extract, and is rich in guaiacol and other elements which are so healing to the membranes. Simply mix it with sugar syrup or strained honey, in a 16-oz. bottle, and it is ready for use. Used in more homes in the U. S. and Canada than any other cough remedy.

Pinex has often been imitated, but never successfully, for nothing else will produce the same results. The genuine is guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. Certificate of guarantee is wrapped in each package. Your druggist has Pinex or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Toronto, Ont.

FOR THE KITCHEN

TOMATO MARMALADE

To one quart of tomatoes, measured after being peeled and cut up, add two pounds of sugar, two oranges and one lemon cut up. Boil slowly for two hours or until thick. You can make it of ripe, yellow or green tomatoes, though we consider the red one best. Grate the skin of the lemon and of one orange. The other orange you peel and cut in small pieces and place pieces in the marmalade. This makes about five jelly glasses.

GOLDEN GLOW MARMALADE

Six pounds common field pumpkins.
Five pounds granulated sugar.
Six lemons.
Green ginger root.

Pare and cut the pumpkin in small dice, add the sugar, and let stand over night, when the pumpkin will be found floating in syrup. Add the lemons, seeded and chopped fine, and a small quantity of the ginger root to suit the taste. Cook very slowly until like marmalade. Seal in jelly glasses. This is delicious with cold or hot meats, and no one will detect the "pumpkin."

TOMATO MINCEMEAT

One peck green tomatoes.
Three pounds brown sugar.
Two lemons (chopped fine).
One teaspoon each of cloves, allspice, nutmeg, salt and cinnamon.

Boil three hours, then put in two pounds of raisins and one cup of vinegar.

Boil twenty minutes before taking from the fire. This makes a three-gallon jar full.

SPICES

Housewives might with advantage pay a little attention to the quality of spices used at table. Pepper, for instance, in constant use, should be pure and unadulterated and chosen according to its value, instead of by appearance.

As a rule, the whiter the pepper the worse its quality. The best form of this useful condiment is the natural black pod, which can be freshly ground as required.

There is also perfectly good and pure ground pepper, usually of a greyish tint. Extreme whiteness is produced by artificial bleaching, which process frequently necessitates the use of hydrochloric acid. Pure pepper is aromatic and powerful, and an aid to digestion; but when it has been bleached much of its natural virtue is lost. The grocer can supply the genuine article quite as cheaply as the artificial white product.

IMITATION IS THE MOST SINCERE FORM OF FLATTERY
That is why some dealers advertise various kinds of

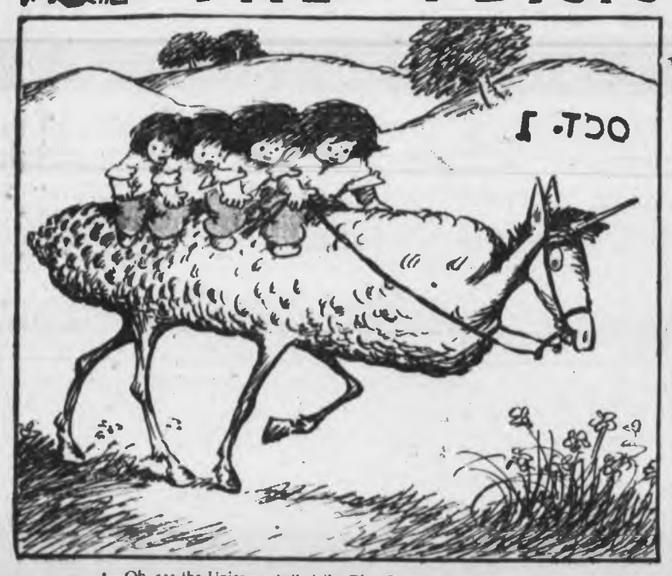
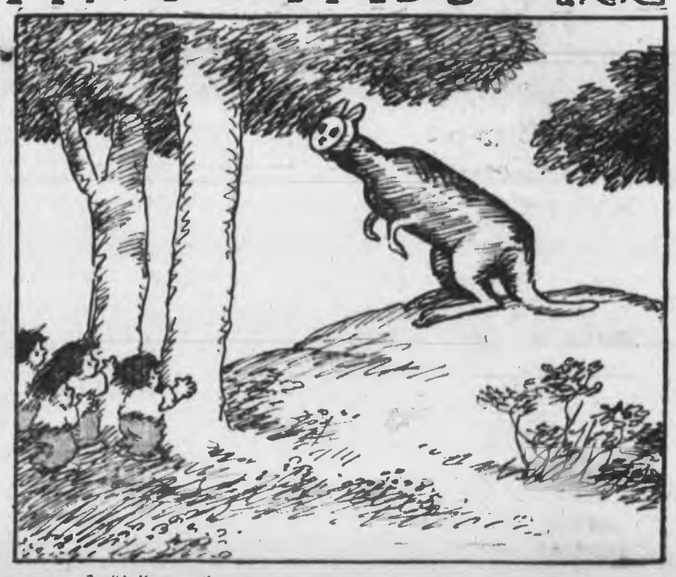
THE TERRORS OF THE TINY TADS



1—Oh, see the Unicorncob that the Tiny Tads are riding!
"Where do you want to go?" inquires the front one who is guiding.

2—But scarcely has he spoken when the creature gives a leap,
And all the little riders fall behind him in a heap.



3—"A Kangaroobeer!" cry the Tads; "'tis he who scared our steed!
"We must not let him see us; we must run with all our speed."

4—"'Twould be our Kangaruin," moans a Tiny Tad in fear.
"'Twould be a Kangarueful day if he should find us here."

5—Then all at once a storm comes up and rain comes down in splotches
And soaks their clothing through and through and wets their hair in blotches.

(COPYRIGHT, 1911, BY THE NEW YORK HERALD CO.) All Rights Reserved.

6—A funny bird observes them and invites them to get dry.
"He must be a Jackdawning," all the Tiny Tads now cry.

THE BULLET AND ITS BILLET

A Short Story.

(By Ralph Johnston).

The great strike in Doxborough was at its height. Having begun with a comparatively small body of men, it had spread rapidly, until nearly half the industrial population of the city was involved. Trade and commerce were paralyzed; business was at a standstill; the necessaries of life were with difficulty obtainable; and, worse than all, owing to the violence of a certain section of the strikers—aided by the roughs of the locality, who, scenting a grand opportunity for loot and license, swarmed forth in their thousands from the slums and rookeries—the city was for some days in a state bordering on anarchy.

It was soon found necessary to call out troops to assist the police; and fortunately there were troops close at hand. Three companies were immediately despatched in response to the request of the civil authorities, and told off for duty in various parts of the city.

The particular company with which we are concerned was that commanded by Captain Gibbings. His colour-sergeant was a man named Merewether. The company was posted in the poorest and most disorderly part of Doxborough ,and here, upon the afternoon of their arrival, a fierce riot broke out, the police and soldiers being set upon by a crowd of four or five thousand roughs, armed with bludgeons, stones, brickbats, empty bottles, and any other weapons that came to hand, half of them, moreover, frenzied by drink (for they had recently been sacking the neighbouring publichouses) and all mad with the lust of riot. These men, having pelted the soldiers savagely for some time, and experiencing no effective retaliation ,at length became emboldened to press upon them at close quarters. The aspect of affairs was now extremely threatening.

The situation grew desperate. Something must be done. Captain Gibbings turned with obvious reluctance to Colour-Sergeant Merewether.

"Fire one shot into the crowd," he said. "That may have the needful effect. Pray heaven it does. God knows I don't want their blood on my head!"

The captain explained himself to his subordinate thus unprofessionally under the influence of strong emotion. He was a humane man. The idea of having to mow down that undisciplined and practically defenceless rabble with a volley of bullets was intolerable to him. Colour-Sergeant Merewether's face was gloomy and overcast. His brow lowered as his captain spoke to him. A casual observer would have inferred that this was because the order was repugnant to him. But though the colour-sergeant was not exactly in love with his job, that had nothing to do with his scowling when the captain spoke to him. It was private, personal, domestic.

Less than a year ago ,as proud and as happy a young sergeant as any in the service, he had led the belle of his native village to the altar. Moreover, in addition to her mere physical good looks, she possessed a witchery of manner, a subtle charm of personality seldom found in young women of her class. Several well-to-do young farmers in the place had been aspirants for her hand; so had more than one rising young clerk in the neighbouring town. But the smart dashing young sergeant had vanquished all competitors and borne off the prize in triumph.

Until recently his life with her had been one of serene felicity. But of late sunshine had been followed by cloud. His wife's manner toward him had changed. The old free, frank, spontaneous demonstrations of affection were no more. She did her best, indeed, to keep up a show of them. But her husband ,with the keen insight of love, saw through her forced assumption . And with clenched te and full of bitter rage set himself to find out the stealer of his wife's heart.

She, however, divining possibly that he doubted her, was on her guard. For some time he could discover nothing. It was only yesterday, indeed, that his suspicions as to the identity of her lover took definite shape. The clue was afforded him by the report of a private detective whom he had engaged, as a last resort, to watch his wife. It appeared that on the evening of the previous day, when he was kept late on duty his wife had gone out alone and had been followed by the detective into a secluded country lane about a mile from the barracks. Here she had been met by a well-dressed man—and they had sauntered away together. The detective described the man, and a hot flush of furious anger dyed the sergeant's face as he heard the description. He was no longer in any doubt as to the identity of his wife's gentleman lover. The description pointed exactly to the officer commanding his own company—Captain Arthur Gibbings.

From that moment the sergeant made up his mind to one desperate course. He would bide his time. He would lay his plans so as to catch the two together. And then he would kill him. He would kill them both, with his own hand.

Before he had any time for forming and carrying out his vindictive plans, the order had come to proceed to Doxborough. Hence his lowering brow and brooding scowl at the sound of the captain's voice addressing him. For a moment he hesitated, as if in doubt whether he should obey the order. Then he dropped on one knee, and, facing the howling mob, lifted his rifle to his shoulder. Thrice he hesitated. The third time he actually half-slewed round in Captain Gibbings' direction.

"Fire, sergeant!" said the latter again, peremptorily.

The habit of discipline prevailed. Sergeant Mereweather pulled the trigger and fired point blank into the heart of the howling mob.

To the crack of the rifle succeeded, for one brief instant, a dead silence. Then a woman in the crowd set up a loud shrieking. The mob appeared to waver. Captain Gibbings saw his opportunity and gave the order to his men to get ready to fire.

In a moment they were all on their knees with their rifles to their shoulders. It was enough. The crowd broke and fled in all directions. Only one man remained behind; and he lay, an inert and huddled mass, in the middle of the roadway. Sergeant Merewether's single shot had saved the situation. There was no more rioting in Doxborough.

About 9 o'clock that evening Col.-Sergeant Merewether presented himself at Captain Gibbings' quarters, and asked to speak to him. The sergeant's voice was husky. His demeanour was indicative of strong excitement. For the moment the captain fancied he must have been drinking.

"Well, what is it?" he inquired.

"It's about that man I shot, sir," explained Sergeant Merewether. "You are aware, I suppose, that he had nothing to do with the strikers that he was a gentleman who had got mixed up with the crowd by accident——"

"Yes! Yes! Poor beggar," interposed the captain. "I've heard all about it. Awfully rough luck on him of course, that he should have been the one man of all others to pay the penalty. But it is no fault of yours sergeant. You must not distress yourself about it. If any one is to blame it is myself, for I ordered you to fire. And you were so reluctant to obey me that I had, as you will remember, to repeat the command."

"Just so, sir," replied the sergeant. "But that is not why I hesitated. The fact is that I was debating with myself whether I shouldn't turn around and put a bullet into you, sir," he added excitedly.

"Into me? What on earth should you have wished to do that for?" exclaimed the captain, reverting to his former opinion that Sergeant Merewether had been drinking.

"Because I believed, sir, that you had done me a great wrong," answered the sergeant. "That was why I wanted to kill you. Only Providence willed otherwise. Do you see this, sir?"

As he spoke, Sergeant Merewether took from his pocket a folded letter. Through the middle of it was a small hole surrounded by a great splash of red.

"This is where my bullet went through, sir," said the sergeant, "to find his heart beyond. Some people don't believe in Providence. But I do. And after to-day more than ever. This letter, sir, is a love letter that he was carrying next his heart; and she who wrote it is the woman who calls herself my wife'"

THE HUSBAND'S INTEREST

"How shall I keep my husband at home?" is a question which puzzles many wives . Men are social creatures and seek their kind; they are thoughtless creatures, too, and often forget that they have home obligations which should hold them. The average wife, however, does not like to think that her husband stays home only from a sense of duty. She desires that he shall feel pleasure in her companionship. She wants his home to be a haven which he shall seek eagerly after the busy hours of the day. And when he does not do it, she is hurt and disappointed, and often makes matters worse by her complaints and accusations.

Such a course is surely the wrong one. It is perfectly reasonable to demand that a man shall not absent himself constantly from the domestic circle. But it is equally reasonable to expect that he will enjoy himself when he is coerced into doing something that he does not care to do.

The wise course, therefore, is to hold him to his home by some ruse which shall not be apparent, but which will make him feel that it has been his own need, rather than his wife's complaints, which has kept him contentedly by his own hearthstone.

How to do this is the problem. Some wives solve it by bringing interesting people in to share a game of cards or an impromptu supper. One wife, knowing her husband's love of reading, weaned him from his wandering habits by having a new magazine always on hand, or a good novel. It took more of her pin money than she liked to expend to buy the books ,but the results more than paid her. Men like to be comfortable. If more women recognized this, there would be more happy homes. Moreover, they like peace ,discord drives them forth to seek a place where they will be let alone.

Where a man, however, loves excitement and cannot be content under any circumstances with an evening quietly spent in his own domestic circle ,his wife should, as far as possible, try to fit herself into his life. The substitution of innocent amusements for more dangerous ones is a principle that is being constantly applied in the education of the modern child. Why not apply it in the training of the modern husband? The man who shrinks from formal social events can often be allured by the promise of a comfortable evening at the home of some friend, where cards are the occupation.

ECZEMA ON THE HEAD

Mr. Peterson, South Bay, Ont., writes "For years I suffered a sort of eczema on the head. I tried four different doctors, giving each a fair trial, but the disease grew worse and spread to my arm. I got Dr. Chase's Ointment, and it has entirely cured me. I give you my name because I want other sufferers to know about this splendid Ointment."

BRIDGENORTH

BRIDGENORTH, OCT. 24. — Mr. James Dopling left this morning with a gang of men for their lumber camp on Gull Lake.

The Bridgenorth Hunting Club have things in good shape for their hunt, having their camp completed. They intend to leave on Tuesday, the 31st of October. They have ten of the best hounds in the country.

The Bridgenorth Methodist church held its anniversary on Sunday last, the Rev. Mr. Cragg, of East City, preaching in the morning and Rev. Mr. Lyons in the evening. The Thank offering at both services amounted to $161. The church has done away with the tea and has a Thank offering instead, saving a lot of work for the ladies.

Mr. J. A. Jobe is busy erecting a driving shed.

Mr. Geo. Bell is busy cutting wood with his gasoline engine and saw.

The mill is closed for the season but they still have lots of work for their men.

No Opposition to Ministers.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—Friday will be nomination day for the bye-elections necessitated by the Cabinet appointments. Yesterday it was stated by Liberal leaders in Montreal that there will be no opposition offered to any of the newly-appointed Ministers in this province. There has been some agitation along these lines of late, especially with regard to Hon. Mr. Monk in Jacques Cartier, and Hon. Bruno Nantel in Terrebonne, but a caucus of the party leaders was held yesterday afternoon, at which it was decided that nothing was to be gained by further opposition just now.

There has, however, been discussion going on regarding protests by both sides. As matters now stand it was stated yesterday that only three protests were being considered, in Montcalm, Bagot and Three Rivers. Whether these protests will be forced is not yet decided, but it is thought not unlikely that the close election of Hon. Jacques Bureau in Three Rivers will be contested.

Youthful Horse Thief.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—That the juvenile court cannot come too soon was the concensus of opinion amongst spectators in the arraignment court yesterday morning, when Frank Martin, aged 9, was arraigned before Judge Lanctot, to answer to a charge of "horse stealing."

The little fellow had to stand on a chair in order that his head might be visible over the railing of the dock.

The boy had jumped into a buggy belonging to Mr. Joseph Filiatreault, which was standing in front of a store on Notre Dame street west on Tuesday. After an extended tour of the western part of the city, the boy was stopped by Constable Beauvais, while driving east on St. James street.

Judge Lanctot decided to give the little lad another chance, and sent him back with his father and a warning.

Welland Canal Problems.

Welland, Oct. 26.—Delegates from the Boards of Trade along the Welland Canal held a meeting here yesterday and decided to invite Hon. Frank Cochrane, Minister of Railways and Canals, to come to Welland and learn at first hand the local situation relative to the enlargement of the Welland Canal. A resolution was also passed, approving of the intention of the Toronto Board of Trade to send a delegation to Ottawa to have the canal question re-submitted to the Government.

W. M. German, M.P., paid a splendid tribute to the Minister of Railways and Canals, as a man likely to find a capable solution of the canal problem. He thought the late Minister Mr. Graham, had unnecessarily delayed the beginning of the work.

One Wife's Woes.

Montreal, Oct. 26.—While listening to the torrent of charges against him, made by his wife, Patrick Ferrier swooned and fell in the prisoner's dock and his trial had to be postponed.

His wife claims that in four years of married life all he has ever given her was $1.50. He had beaten her, and in one of the beatings he had kicked her when a child was about to be born, and the baby died before birth. Another child had died of privation. He had become a cocaine fiend and when she remonstrated he beat her. She wanted him sent to jail for a long time, so that he would not bother her.

Young Farmer Killed

Lindsay, Oct. 26.—George Switzer, a young farmer, 37 years of age, of Cameron, Ont., was instantly killed yesterday morning in a somewhat peculiar manner. He was backing a load of lumber out of the barn, and, as it was being skidded down the gangway, the wheels slewed, the load toppling over the steel gangway, pinning Switzer underneath the wheels. He was found dead by his father, his watch showing that death occurred at 8.10 a.m.

Switzer leaves a wife and six children, besides his parents.

Failed to Select Candidate.

Brantford, Oct. 26.—The Brantford Trades and Labor Council failed to select a candidate for the provincial contest here last night. Neither J. C. A section of the council was strongly favorable to placing a man in the field, but lack of proper organization was considered a serious drawback.

Waterloo Bylaw Carries.

Berlin, Oct. 26.—Waterloo town yesterday carred a $4,000 bylaw to grant aid to the Berlin and Waterloo Hospital Trust. Berlin passed a $15,000 bylaw, the county granted $5,000, and they will now build a new wing to the General Hospital.

TO HOLD COURT-MARTIAL.

British Officers Required to Investigate Niobe Disaster.

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—The Department of the naval service having reviewed the circumstances attending the stranding of H. M. C. S. Niobe on the southwest ledge off Cape Sable in July last, have come to the conclusion that a court-martial should be held, and Hon. Mr. Hazen, Minister of the naval service, has ordered that steps should be taken to hold this court-martial.

As there are not at present in the Canadian naval service a sufficient number of officers of the proper rank to constitute this court-martial, arrangements have been made with the Admiralty to loan a sufficient number of officers to hold it and orders have been given for the fourth cruiser squadron to sail immediately for Halifax. The squadron is composed of the following four first-class cruisers: H. M. S. Berwick, Donegal, Essex, Leviathan (flagship).

The squadron is commanded by Rear-Admiral F. E. Bradford, who will be authorized by the Minister of the naval service to convene a court-martial for the purpose of investigating the conduct of the officers of the Niobe and the circumstances which led to the stranding of the vessel.

Police Seek Hull Doctor.

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—The Ottawa detectives left yesterday afternoon for Cayament Lake, in the Gatineau district, north of here, to bring back Dr. J. A. Ouimet of Hull, on a charge of conducting an establishment for the performance of criminal operations in Ottawa. Ouimet is away on a deer hunt. He is the Hull physician who some months ago was tried and acquitted on a charge of killing Mrs. Frank Spain of Ottawa by performing an illegal operation.

The proprietress of the alleged resort in Ottawa is under arrest and two women said to be patients of Ouimet have been removed to a hospital. The police have been working up the case for some weeks, but only yesterday secured sufficient evidence to act upon.

Belated Enthusiasm.

Ottawa, Oct. 26.—Now that a seat has been found for Hon. W. T. White in Leeds there is something of a rush by men who have hitherto shown a marked disinclination to part with their seats.

Halton County is a case in point. The new Finance Minister might have represented his native county, whose electors as victims of the Farmers' Bank smash, are seeking relief from the Government, but there was difficulty in opening the constituency. The difficulty was overcome Tuesday when a meeting of Halton Conservatives decided to offer the seat to Mr. White. A delegation was despatched to Ottawa yesterday in time to see the Finance Minister accept the Leeds offer.

Did Friends Conceal Suicide?

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 26.—The detectives yesterday turned to investigation of a theory that Dr. Helen Knabe may have ended her own life, and that friends who gathered in the flat before the police inquiry got under way, may have sought to take away evidence of suicide.

A LITTLE DANDERINE WILL MAKE YOUR HAIR LUSTROUS, SOFT, FLUFFY, ABUNDANT

Get a 25 Cent Bottle Now and Forever Stop Falling Hair, Itching Scalp and Dandruff

If you Wish to Double the Beauty of your Hair in Ten Minutes surely Try a Danderine Hair Cleanse

Your hair becomes light, wavy, fluffy, abundant and appears as soft, lustrous and beautiful as a young girl's after a Danderine hair cleanse. Just try this—moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. This will cleanse the hair of dust, dirt and excessive oil and in just a few moments you have doubled the beauty of your hair.

A delightful surprise awaits particularly those who have been careless, whose hair has been neglected or is scraggy, faded, dry, brittle or thin. Besides beautifying the hair at once, Danderine dissolves every particle of dandruff; cleanses, purifies and invigorates the scalp, forever stopping itching and falling hair.

Try as you will, after one application of Danderine you cannot find any dandruff or a loose or falling hair, and your scalp will never itch, but what will please you most will be after a few weeks' use when you will actually see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair sprouting all over the scalp. Danderine makes the hair grow long, heavy and luxuriant and we can prove it. If you care for pretty, soft hair and lots of it surely get a 25 cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any druggist or toilet counter, and just try it.

Hon. Adam Beck on "Tuberculosis" Col. Hall To-night

REFUSE TO TAKE ANY ACTION

City Trust Commissioners Discussed Request of City Council That They Should Buy a Site for New City Hall

SOME LAND FOR PARKS

At a meeting of the City Trust Commissioners, held on Tuesday, it was decided to defer any action for the present in the request of the City Council that the Commissioners should purchase the Birdsall property at the corner of Brock and Water streets as a site for a new city hall. The Commissioners discussed the matter for some time, but the propriety of the Commissioners making such an investment was questioned, and it was finally decided to take no action.

The Commissioners, however, favoured the proposition to buy land in the south and east wards for park purposes, and on motion it was decided to purchase the property recommended by the City Council.

Demented Man Turns Up

Special Wire to the Examiner.

WALKERTON, ONT. OCT. 26. — Rudolph Misch, the demented man, for whom the Town Council offered a reward of $50.00, was found last night terribly emaciated, and dying, coming out of a swamp which had been searched several times.

Trial Dragging On

Examiner Special:

LOS ANGELES, CAL., OCT. 26.—The attorneys in the McNamara case continue to make the most of all kinds of trivial objections to jurors, and at the present rate of going it will take forty-two weeks to secure enough men to try the case. Justice Bordwell this morning delivered a sharp rebuke to both sides for delay in getting to trial.

DIED SUDDENLY

NORWOOD, ONT., OCT. 26.—Mr. Lewis Cross, a well-known farmer of Dummer Township, died suddenly at his home Tuesday night. Deceased, together with his family, had just finished evening devotions, before retiring, when he fell over dead. Mr. Cross was 49 years of age, was apparently in good health and had been threshing during the day at one of his farms.

THE EFFECTIVE LAXATIVE

Tastes Like and is Eaten Like Candy.

In our experience in the handling of drugs and medicines, we believe we have never had experience with any Remedy that gave such great satisfaction to our customers as do Rexall Orderlies. This Remedy is not like any other laxative or cathartic. It contains all the good features of other laxatives, but none of their faults.

Our own faith in Rexall Orderlies is so strong that we offer them to you with our own positive personal guarantee, that if they do not thoroughly satisfy you, you only need tell us and we will hand back to you every penny paid us for them. Therefore, in trying them upon our recommendation, you take no risk whatever.

Rexall Orderlies taste like and are eaten like candy. They do not gripe, cause nausea, excessive looseness, or any other annoyance. They act so easily that they may be taken at any time, day or night. They are particularly good for children, aged, or delicate persons. They are put in convenient tablets in three sizes of packages. Prices, 10c., 25c. and 50c.

Remember, Rexall Remedies can be obtained in this community only at our store.—The Rexall Store, McDermid and Jury.

AN UPWARD STEP

Another Peterborough boy is proving a success in the great Northwest. Wm. O. Todd, son of R. J. Todd, Aylmer street, who served his time with the Richard Hall & Son Co., of this city and has been for some time in the employ of J. F. Cairns of Saskatoon, Sask., has recently accepted a more lucrative position as manager of the carpet and drapery department with the MacLeod Co., of Moosejaw, Sask.

THE CANADIANS MAY BE IN DANGER

THE STREETS OF CHENTU RUN RED WITH BLOOD--GREAT ANXIETY FOR CANADIANS

Imperial Troops Mutiny and Kill Their Commander and Every Officer Who Refuses to Swear Allegiance to the Revolutionary Party---It is Stated that the Emperor and His Family Are Preparing to Flee From the Country.

Special Wire to The Examiner.

TORONTO, OCT. 26.—From the Canadian standpoint, the most startling news from China this morning is that the Pekin newspapers, in extra editions published to-day, say that the Imperial troops at Cengtu, the capital of Sex Chuan province, where one hundred and fifty Methodist missionaries are stationed, have mutined and killed their commander, General Chao Erp Fang, and all his officers who refused to swear allegiance to the revolutionary party. It is stated that the entire citizenship of Chengtu is now revolutionary, and the streets were red with the blood of those who refused to denounce the Manchu Dynasty. This is the first word from Chengtu for ten days and again three is great anxiety for Canadians and other foreigners there, though if the rebel leaders took the same course as in other centres, all foreigners would be amply protected. It is also stated in Pekin that the Emperor and his family are preparing to flee to Manchuria, where they would be protected by the Japanese, or to America.

PEKIN, OCT. 25. — An Imperial edict to-day cashiers and dismisses Sheng Hsuan Huai, for whose dismissal the National Assembly put in a demand yesterday. The edict says Sheng Hsuan Huai failed to carry out the railroad scheme to benefit the people. This is the man whom the foreigners thought was the strongest man in the government.

MR. STRATTON'S HORSES BROUGHT BIG PRICES

The Toronto World says:

The greatest sale of show horses and carriage horses that ever took place in the Dominion of Canada, came off at the Repository, Simcoe street, yesterday. In all close upon one hundred horses were sold. Mr. Charles Burns was in the auctioneer's rostrum from 11 o'clock in the morning till 6 o'clock, without ceasing. Among the lot were the famous horses of Hon. J. R. Stratton, that have won prizes in every ring in which they have been shown. Among the places in which they have won ribbons have been the famous International Show at Olympia, the Richmond Show in Surrey, and other places in England, as well as at Madison Square Garden, New York; Toronto, Montreal, Ottawa, Cobourg, Galt and Ogdensburg. No owner in Canada has ever won so many prizes as Mr. Stratton in the last three or four years. Mr. Stratton imported several of his horses and others he purchased from the best known owners or breeders in New York and Canada. It was universally admitted that, considering that the shows in the future are comparatively few, the prices realized were next door to fabulous. The attendance from the outset was exceedingly large, and buyers hung on to the very last, and when all was over there was not a man present who was not surprised at the splendid sale that Mr. Burns had effected. The ring was especially and tastefully decorated in horse show colours by the Robert Simpson Comany, to remain up until after the boxing championships. In fact, no effort was spared to make the sale what it really was—the most remarkable and successful ever held in Canada. While some of the horses undoubtedly were bargains, the best brought prices such as were never paid in an auction ring in Toronto, and that means Canada, before. It will be noticed that the leading buyer of the day was Mr. T. A. Crow ,one of the most successful and best judges of show horses in the Dominion to-day. The Graham Bros., of Claremont, whose fame extends throughout the continent, it will be noticed,, were also liberal buyers. Other prominent breeders and recognized judges of horses from all over the country, were present. If they did not buy it was because the bidding was too keen, and a good deal above the general expectation.

Peterborough Man Organizing Independent Peat Plant

Special to The Examiner:

OTTAWA, ONT., OCT. 26.—An independent peat plant is to be built, either in this city or near it, within a short time.

The latest enterprise in this line promises to be quite a big thing for Ottawa. Mr. Ernest V. Moore, the well-known peat engineer of Peterborough, is in the city in conference with the Department of Mines, in connection with the construction of the plant of the company with whom he is connected.

Mr. Moore represents a number of prominent Canadian capitalists, who have, after careful inspection of the Government peat plant at Alfred, decided to erect a similar plant, but on a more extensive scale in the vicinity of one of the large bogs near Ottawa. The exact location of which will be announced shortly.

The work on the plant will be rushed during the next few months, and it will be in operation in time for the winter trade of 1912. The plant will have a capacity of 15,000 to 20,000 tons a year, and it is confidently expected that the total output in 1912 will exceed 10,000 tons.

MONTREAL TO INDIA

Special Wire to The Examiner.

ST. LOUIS, MON., OCT. 26 — The Business Men's League Traffic Bureau has received the following communication form W. M. Porteaus, agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway and steamship lines. The Canadian Pacific Railway has a direct line of steamers sailing from Montreal in the summer and from West St. John in the winter, to Australian and New Zealand ports of call. These have proved so successful that the Vice-President is now considering the question of arranging a direct service from these ports to Calcutta, India, and writes asking if there would be any prospects of business for the same from this territory. Mr. G. M. Bosworth, Vice-President, in charge of the steamships to-day, said: "It is true we are considering a service from Montreal to India, but details are not yet available."

G. T. Appointments

Special Wire to the Examiner.

MONTREAL, OCT. 26 — Grand Trunk appointments announced this morning are: Frank J. Watson, Assistant General Freight Agent, Montreal; G. T. Pettigrew, Division Freight Agent, Stratford; Jas. Waugh Commercial Agent, Omaha, Neb., vice R. Wallace, resigned.

2 Years For Murder

Special Wire to The Examiner.

WOODSTOCK, N.B., OCT. 26 — William Brayden, convicted of manslaughter, for killing Woodman McClusky, a well-to-do merchant, who lived with Brayden's wife, when the latter was away, was sentenced today by Mr. Justice White, to two years and one month in Dorchester Penitentiary. In giving the sentence the Judge said McClusky did Brayden the greatest provocative wrong one man could do another.

HOUSE ON FIRE

Two Fatally Injured and Twenty Others More or Less Seriously Injured in Brooklyn Blaze To-day

SOME HEROIC RESCUES

Special Wire to The Examiner.

NEW YORK, OCT. 26.—Two were fatally injured, twenty were hurt and eight are missing in a fire in an antiquated four-storey tenement house in Brooklyn early this morning. Gas is supposed to have filtered through from a leak in the cellar, when it located a light. One man was blown from his bed through the roof. There were many heroic rescues of the inmates by citizens and firemen. There were 58 people in the building.

Veiner Case Enlarged

Special to The Examiner.

The case of Edward Veiner, who was arraigned in the police court yesterday on a charge of committing theft of $115.00, through the sale of hay, was enlarged until Thursday, on account of the absence of witnesses. Veiner pleaded not guilty. Mr. G. N. Gordon is appearing for the defence, while Mr. R. E. Wood, Crown Attorney, will prosecute.

HAND AMPUTATED

The many friends of Mr. John Smith, of Fraserville, will learn with regret that it was necessary to amputate his left hand, which was done at the Nicholls hospital on Wednesday afternoon by Dr. McClelland. Mr. Smith is at present reported doing well. His many friends wish him a speedy recovery.

ROUND HOUSE SHATTERED ONCE AGAIN

Passenger Car Shunted Through North Wall of G. T. R. Building This Morning, Demolishing the Partition

NO ONE WAS HURT

The round house at the Grand Trunk station met with another misfortune this morning, having its north-west corner knocked out.

It is not long since an engine ran through the north-east corner, and, as it was probable that the house would shortly be removed and enlarged the damaged portion was boarded up. Both the boarding and the original structure of the north end of the house are now a mass of debris.

It appears that on the arrival of the Belleville train at 8.20 this morning, the yard engine, which followed it, proceeded to shunt the cars up the siding into the house. Owing to a misunderstanding between the brakemen, the pin of the forenmost car was by mistake removed, with the result that on the driver of the engine slowing up ,the car, having been uncoupled, ran right into the house and crashed into the wall.

Happily no one was near at hand at the time of the accident.

Crown Case Ended

Special to The Examiner.

CORNWALL, OCT. 25.—The feature of the trial this morning of aged Farquah McRae, charged with killing William Shaw, was the evidence of Rosser ,the hired man of D. C. McRae's who, an the inquest, stated positively that he saw Farquhar kneeling, apparently taking aim, but today, under cross examination, was not quite sure McRae was kneeling at all. Rosser swore he did not hear Farquhar McRae make use of the words, "Damned Protestant hound." The Crown concluded the case this morning and the first witness for the defence was John White, neighbour's boy.

COMEDY OF ERRORS GAVE ATHLETICS FOUR IN FOURTH

New York Opened Auspiciously With a Run in the First on Doyle's Two Bagger and Murphy's Error but Mackmen Had a Scoring Fit in Fourth Innings--Ames' Wild Throw on Barry's Bunt Caused All the Trouble.

Special Wire to the Examiner.

PHILADELPHIA, PA., OCT. 26.— Fair weather and a great crowd are promised for the game this afternoon between the Giants and Athletics. Both teams were practising bright and early. The odds are strong in favour of the local team winning today's game and the series. The lineup is as follows:

New York—Devore, l.f.; Doyle, 2b.; Snodgrass, c.f.; Murray, r.f.; Merkle, 1st b.; Herzog, 3rd b.; Fletcher, s.s.; Meyers, c.; Crandall, p.

Philadelphia—Lord, l.f.; Oldring, c.f.; Collins, 2nd b.; Baker, 3b.; Murphy, r.f.; Davis, 1st b.; Barry, s.s.; Thomas, c.; Plank, p.

First Innings.

Giants—Bender threw Devore out. Doyle put the ball over the fence for two bases. Snodgrass lifted to Lord. Murphy missed Murray's fly, and Doyle scored. Murray was caught off first, Bender to Davis. One run.

Athletics— Lord easy, Doyle to Merkle. Oldring, the hero of yesterday's game, ingloriously fanned. So did Collins. No runs.

Second Innings.

Giants—Merkle boosted to Oldring. Barry missed Herzog's line drive. Herzog stole second. Barry was slightly spiked by the runner, accidentally. Play was resumed after a doctor had fixed him up. Fletcher struck out. Meyers drove a grounder over second which Collins got, making a beautiful pickup and throw. No runs.

Athletics—Baker lifted to Devore. Murphy's single was too hot for Doyle to handle. Davis rolled out via Ames, Murphy taking second. Barry fanned. No runs.

Third Innings.

Giants — Ames singled sharply to left, Devore forced Ames at second, Bender to Barry. Doyle fouled to Baker. Devore out stealing, Thomas to Collins. No runs.

Athletics—Thomas walked. Bender out, Fletcher to Merkle, Thomas reaching second on the play. Lord doubled over the temperory right field fence and Thomas romped home. The stands went wild, Meyers and Ames held conference when Oldring came up. He went out Fletcher to Merkle, Lord went to third. Collins lifted to Devore. One run.

Fourth Innings.

Giants — Snodgrass lifted to Oldring. Murray flied to Murphy. Collins made another sensational catch of Merkle's hit over second base, getting him at first.

Athletics — Baker singled over Doyle's head. On the hit and run play Baker went to third on Murphy's single to centre. Murray deliberately allowed Davis' long foul fly to drop safe in order that Baker might not score. Davis hit to Doyle and Baker came home with a beautiful slide. Ames, trying to field Barry's bunt towards first, hit him on the top of the head. Murphy and Davis scored and Barry came all the way home on Murray's wild return to second in an attempt to catch Barry. Thomas made the first out by fanning. Bender out Doyle to Merkle. Lord ended the agony with a fly to Devore. The fans simply went wild and the noise was terrific. Four runs.

Fifth Innings.

Giants—Herzog struck out. Fletcher out, Bender to Davis. Meyers singled through the pitcher's box. Crandall batting for Ames, walked. Devore struck out. No runs.

Athletics—Wiltse went into the box for the Giants in place of Ames. Oldring lifted to Devore. Collins bunted and Wiltse got him at first. Baker out, Merkle unassisted. No runs.

Sixth Innings.

Giants— Doyle fouled to Baker, a nice long run catch. Snodgrass lined to left centre, which Oldring took off his shoe strings. Murray walked and was forced at second on Baker's throw off Merkle's grounder. No runs.

Athletics — Murphy long flied to centre. Snodgrass misjduged and it went for two bases. Davis out, Doyle to Merkle. Murphy advancing. Murphy scored on Barry's sacrifice fly to Devore. Thomas missed three. One run.

Seventh Innings.

Giants—Herzig got to first on Barry's fumble of his grounder. Davis made a running catch of Fletcher's foul fly. Meyers fanned Wiltze followed suit. No runs.

Athletics.—Bender popped to Doyle. Lord made an infield single. Oldring singled to centre. Lord going to third, and Oldring taking second on the throw. On the squeeze play, Lord scored on Collins' hit to Wiltse. Merkle dropped Wiltse's throw to the bag. Oldring scored on Baker's single over Doyle's head. Collins going to third. Murphy singled to right centre, scoring Collins. Baker took second. Davis singled to right centre, scoring Collins. Baker took second. Davis singled to right, scoring Baker. Murphy going to third. Barry dropped the ball over the temporary right field fence for a double, scoring Murphy. Marquard relieved Wiltse here, Thomas came to bat. Both Davis and Barry came home on a wild pitch. Thomas singled to right. Thomas out, stealing, while Bender was striking out.—Seven runs, seven hits, two errors.

This innings was a great exhibition of consecutive hitting. The game became a burlesque near the end of the innings, even Thomas hitting, making his first safe drive of the series.

POLISH CAUGHT FIRE A NARROW ESCAPE

A Gilmour street lady yesterday had a close escape from serious injury, an escape that should be a lesson to other housewives, to whom, at this season, the appeal of the autumn housecleaning campaign comes with particular emphasis, including the furbishing of the kitchen stove. The lady was applying some sort of liquid stove polish to a rather hot stove, and the liquid suddenly burst into flame with explosive force, including the contents of the bottle she held in her hand. Her eyebrows and hair were scorched and her clothes took fire, and had it not been for the presence of another lady at the time, she might have been seriously, if not fatally, burned. As it is, she is suffering from intense nervous shock.

NOTICE OF DISSOLUTION

Notice is hereby given that the copartnership heretofore subsisting between the undersigned as restaurant keepers, under the firm name of Peterborough Lunch Company, has been this day dissolved by mutual consent. The business will hereafter be carried on by F. A. Jacobi, by whom all dabts of the old firm will be paid, and to whom all outstanding accounts due the old firm are to be paid.

J. J. McDONALD.
FRANK A. JACOBI.

To the Public

In connection with the above notice I desire to thank my many friends for their patronage to the old firm, and look forward to serving them in the future. I assure exceptionally good service and attention, and ask a continuance of the large patronage the Peterborough Lunch has had.

Commencing Saturday, to continue throughout the fall and winter, I will serve, from 5 o'clock until midnight each Saturday evening, an appetizing fowl supper, well cooked and well served.

Always eat at the Peterborough Lunch.

F. A. JACOBI.

Returned From West

Mr. Robert Leary, in company with Mr. Creswell, returned from Edmonton last night. He reports an excellent trip. In company with two Battleford gentlemen, Mr. Leary and Mr. Cresswell journeyed one hundred and twenty-five miles north of Battleford, where they spent a few days looking over some timber limits. They also stopped at Edmonton and other points.

In conversation with The Examiner to-day Mr. Leary stated that a considerable area of wheat throughout the west, especially the Pincher Creek and MacLeod districts, was frosted, while about two-thirds of it still remains in the stook waiting to be threshed. Mr. Leary while at Pincher Creek purchased a carload of good western ponies and is having them shipped to Peterborough where they will be offered for sale. They are suitable for saddle and driving purposes. They still arrive some time next week.

FUNERAL TO-MORROW

It is ascertained that the arrangements for the funeral of the late Mrs. Hattie Spears, wife of the Rev. Dr. Spears of Toronto, have been altered. Instead of in Toronto, the funeral will take place at the Little Lake cemetery here to-morrow afternoon at 3 o'clock. The remains are expected to arrive by to-night's C. P. R. train from Toronto for that purpose.

Peterborough Presents Possibilities Unparalleled."

THURSDAY, OCT. 26, 1911

A BIG CHANGE.

There promises to be a considerable change in the personnel of the present Legislature. Even before the coming elections there is a change of a dozen or so seats. Eight Conservative and one Liberal member of the Legislature resigned to contest seats for the Dominion Parliament. That is a change of nine. Mr. S. J. Fox, of Victoria West, died recently; Mr. T. E. Bradburn, West Peterborough is not again a candidate. Mr. J. W. Pearce, North Hastings, will not again be a candidate; and the same applies to H. P. Innes, M.P.P. of North Norfolk. These are some of the actual changes in membership and we have still to take into account the changes the electors will make in the coming general elections. The appearances are that there will be a very considerable reduction in Mr. Whitney's at present unwieldy majority. The public recognizes that it is altogether too large to insure effective and satisfactory administration. A ministry with such a strong support beind it can and will be indifferent to public considerations, in the interests of its party. It would not be human if it did otherwise. Then the big Conservative majority at Ottawa, cooperating with a similarly big Conservative majority, in Ontario, smacks a good deal of the political "combine". In the present humour of the public which is suffering from the operations of food and industrial combines, the "combine" idea is none too attractive.

NOT A FAIR DEAL.

The Whitney Government takes great credit to itself for having cheapened—as it has done in a double sense—the school readers of Ontario. The present price is, compared by them, to the apparent discredit of the readers supplied under the previous government. The comparison is not fair. Under the former government the readers were produced by legitimate employment of the printing trade; and booksellers had a fair chance with each other in gaining a fair profit.

The Government now pays the entire cost of the readers, except the mere printing the books, and gives special favours to the present publishers, the T. Eaton Company, Toronto, who are not only allowed these advantages, but the tremendous advantage of having their advertisement—"T. Eaton & Co." appear in every reader to the distinct disadvantage of other merchants throughout the province. The mail order system of this great firm makes inroads into the business of every merchant in every village, town and city, outside Toronto. And it is greatly encouraged in this direction by the action of the Whitney Government. School readers, instead of being purchased through retail merchants in cities, towns and villages are ordered by mail from T. Eaton & Co. The outside merchant—that is, outside the T. Eaton C. and Whitney Government combine — do not only lose trade and the profits of the trade, but they have to contribute their share to paying for the advertisement of a rival firm. A Government does not exist to give speial favours to any one concern, at the expense of the legitimate book printing and book selling interests of the province. And right-thinking people will not appreciate, without a qualm or two of conscience, cheap school books practically provided out of the public funds, but distributed through a great commercial concern, which is given very valuable advertising advantages, which are not paid for on commercial terms, at the expense of the business interests of the country at large.

"HIGH-TONED" RUBBISH.

The Toronto News says:

"The whole system of patronage-giving is a Babel of rottenness. Once a cabinet minister permits his course to be dictated or even affected by patronage considerations he has opened the door of a host of evils."

There seem to be some Conservatives in Peterborough who do not seem to be in harmony with the opinions of the News. The spoils have been already officially apportioned and at least three cabinet ministers will have a chance to refuse to "open the door to a host of evils" and—incompetents. The Minister of Railways and Canals; the Minister of Inland Revenue and another minister, will be bombarded with good party reasons—"to the victors belong the spoils"—for permitting "their course to be dictated by party reasons." It is all very well for the News to talk ponderous rot, which beomes, and is, rot, because it is not—it is not uncharitable to suggest — sincerely conceived, and will not be regarded with the slightest degree of respect. If the Leader of the Government, with a majority of 50 at his back, and 73 followers in Ontario, has not backbone enough to refuse to "permit his course to be dictated" by the Nationalist element, how can he expect his subordinate colleagues in his administration to resist the importunities of party heelers? Like master, like man. The News is fatuously and impertinently inconsistent, in preaching high political morality in the face of its countenance of the action of its leader in the sacrifice of every principle of the higher morality, not to speak of gratitude to the element in Ontario which placed him in power, as shown by Hon. Mr. Borden, in building his cabinet and distributing the rewards or high office among the enemies of Canadian and imperial interests and unity.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Mr. Borden must feel the force of the couplet in Scott's Marmion:

O, what a tangled web we weave,
When first we practice to deceive.

Yukon going Conservative, makes Hon. Mr. Borden's majority the even half hundred. The bigger his majority the less his excuse, and the greater his blame, for yielding to anti-imeprial interests, to interests contrary in every sense, to the issues upon which he gained power.

ANOTHER DANGER.

(Toronto Star)

The Toronto News says that the prospect of reciprocity checked the migration of American factories to Canada, but that now that the defeat of reciprocity is assured, the American manufacturers are recommending their northward trek. Apparently the News is quite satisfied, and even gleeful, over this invasion of Canada by American manufacturers. But to anyone who is sincerely anxious about Americanization, it cannot be wholly satisfactory. The relations created by employment are of great importance, ranking with those of the family, the nation, and the church.

In the recent election, and in other elections, the influence of the employer over his employes was used unsparingly, and with great effect. It is quite clear that this influence must be greater than that of trade. A man is not likely to be converted to the political views of the person from whom he buys a pair of boots. But if he is an employee of a manufacturer of boots, he may be very powerfully influenced by the declaration of his employer that if he votes in a certain way he will lose his bread-and-butter.

The News and many others apparently believe that because we have rejected a proposal for extension of trade with the United States, we have escaped all danger of Americanization. But they are resting in a false security. The American employer, whom the News welcomes, is a constant source of danger. The intermarriage of Canadians and Americans is another. A third peril lies in the association of Canadians and Americans in religious and philanthropic work, sanitary and social reform. The two peoples speak the same language, and there are even those who dare to assert that the human heart is much the same article in Ontario and in Illinois.

Those who have protected us from the dangers lurking in an exchange of horses, barley, and potatoes, must not imagine that their work is done. Influences tending toward assimilation, far more potent than trade, are still at work, and against these the News and its friends ought to wage continual war. The welcome extended by the News to the American employer of labour was innocent, we do not doubt, but it is in just this innocence that our danger lies. Our suspicions as to our neighbours' designs ought not to be allowed to sleep for a moment.

A CONSERVATIVE JOURNAL'S OPINION RE CANADIAN NAVY

The Only True Self-Respecting Policy is to Carry Out Policy of Liberal Government

(Ottawa Journal.)

Curiosity is general as to what the programme on the naval issue will be of the Borden Government. Considerable surmise is appearing in the press. Now, to avert misconception on an interesting point, The Journal to begin with may as well say that it has no idea what the new government's naval policy may prove to be. This remark is not superfluous, for the reason that frequently of late years, when The Journal has said things about politics, Liberal papers have intimated that the views expressed have probably the cognizance of Mr. Borden. Truth to tell, Mr. Borden, while one of our valued subscribers, does not insist upon inspiring us—and what The Journal may say now or at any time upon the naval question, or any other question, may be safely regarded by Liberal papers or anybody as said purely off our own bat, so to speak.

The Montreal Star desires in its customary vociferous manner to have Mr. Borden present two dreadnoughts to England. The Hamilton Herald wants to see Canada giving an annual money contribution towards the British navy. The Journal prefers the establishment of a Canadian navy. We have never seen reason to change this view.

The Montreal Star's proposition of giving dreadnoughts is well enough, if that step would not interfere with some definite naval policy by Canada—but it likely would; and no temporary measure, however interesting and efficient, should be allowed to hinder a definite, resolute and continuous policy of co-operation by Canada in the naval insurance of the empire. The Hamilton Herald's idea is the worst of all. To try the principle of an annual money contribution towards the British navy would be to invite several kinds of trouble. First, there would be an annual squabble in Canada over the principle. Next there would be an annual squabble in Canada over the amount. Thirdly, whatever the amount, some Canadians would think it too much, and some British people would think it too little. Fourth, everybody opposed to Canadian naval expenditure, and many who would favour it if it were a direct Canadian work, would be specially irritated by the idea of sending money out of this country to be spent elsewhere by somebody with whom this country has no say. Fifthly, if the British Admiralty did not use the money in some specific way, neither Canada nor Britain would realize the effect, and no Imperial warmth would attend the matter; while if the Admiralty did use the money in a specific way, that way might not please Canada. Finally, there would be neither educational value nor national satisfaction for Canada herself.

May we ask what particular effeminacy characterises this country that to undertake a direct naval responsibility is unwise? Are we not fit to rank in national effort with Argentina, or Chili, or China, or Denmark, or Belgium? What's the matter with us? Is the breed here inferior to that in Australia or New Zealand? We have constructed the greatest railways in the world, and the greatest canals; we have in forty years welded half a continent of sparse feeble provinces into a strong nation—what mysterious disability prevents us building warships? Extravagance, is it argued? Graft? Corruption? Nonsense. There will be no more of either than there has been about the rest of our nation-building — which on the whole has been a mighty good job.

It is true that some time must elapse before a Canadian navy can be an efficient factor in Imperial defence. But so must some time elapse before anything that Canada could do would be an efficient factor in Imperial defence. Possibly money sent to the British Admiralty would be, for a while, more effective in sea power than direct Canadian expenditure. But as such money subsidy would not mean Canadian national education, nor Canadian industries, nor Canadian crews or training, nor Canadian pride, it would speedily be an infinitely poorer thing for the empire. Canada's motto should not be either gifts or tribute. It should be co-operation upon a basis of national self-respect, self-confidence and self-effort. These things a Canadian navy means.

Conservative Opponent Of "Ne Temere" Decree To Drop Bomb In The House

One Ontario Member Will Introduce a Bill to Make it a Crime to Interfere With Marriage Laws---Says He Will Not be "Pulled Off"---More Trouble for Hon. Mr. Borden Whether He Acts or Declines to Act.

(Toronto Star.)

OTTAWA, OCT. 25.—There seems to be every likelihood of trouble ahead when the new House of Commons meets to do business.

People are already anxious to know what Mr. Borden proposes to do about the navy question, but while Imperialists and anti-Imperialists are bothering their heads over the future relations of Canada with the Empire, a large number of members are more exercised over rumours of trouble arising from religious questions.

The opposition to the application in Canada of the Ne Temere decree raised an opposition which is too well known and clearly defined to need further mention. The application of that opposition to practical politics will come when legislation dealing with the decree is introduced on the floor of the House.

Such legislation is pending.

An Ontario member who would not allow his name to be used said yesterday that it was his firm intention to introduce a bill the purport of which would be to make it a criminal offence to interfere in any way with the marriage laws of Canada. Of course the bill would have to be drafted in such a way as to admit of no possible disputes on the question of jurisdiction.

A Hornet's Nest.

The hornet's nest that would be stirred up by such action on the part of any member of the House, irrespective of politics, would surpass anything that has occurred for some years. Of course it is impossible to say what the result would be, but it is altogether probable that in a question of this character party barriers would be swept away and each member be compelled to act as his constituency demanded.

Every pressure possible would be brought to bear on the author of such a bill to compel him to withdraw it, but the man in question declares that he will refuse to listen to any opposition. It would put the Government in an awkward position were the bill to be quietly pigeon-holed as many bills are. The great mass of people who favour such a bill would ask embarrassing questions.

Possible Cabinet Row.

On the other hand decisive action by the Government would mean the stirring up of violent opposition, no matter what that action should be. With the strong Nationalist element in the Cabinet it is unconceivable that any such bill should receive Government approval without a Cabinet row of the first magnitude. The only method of avoiding trouble will be to secure delay, and delay is the one thing to which a large section of Ontario at least will not listen.

Canadian Entries

MONTREAL, OCT. 26.—A further announcement has been made by the Canadian Pacific Railway, with reference to the competition for the $1,000 prize, offered by Sir Thomas Shaughnessy, President of the railway, for the best 100 pounds of hard, red wheat, exhibited at the coming land and irrigation show at New York. The judges for the competition which is pen to the farmers of the United States, as well as those of Canada, will be Professors Atchison of Boseman, Mon.; Prof. Williams, of Wooster, Ohio, and Professor Jardine of Manhattan, Kansas. The exhibits of grain will be judged as follows: Milling quality, 40 out of weight per bushel, 30 out of plumpness, 15 out of colour, 10 out of purity. Canada is making five entries in the competition for the prize offered by Sir Thos. Shaughnessy, Saskatchewan is forwarding two of these entries, and the other provinces of British Columbia, Alberta, and Manitoba, have each entries on exhibit. The Canadian Pacific has displayed great interest in obtaining these specimens of the best sort of Canadian wheat, and if the Canadian farmers win the competition a great deal of credit will be due Sir Thos. Shaughnessy for their enterprise for obtaining the very best possible samples of Canadian wheat grown. The method followed in obtaining the samples was very thorough, at all the various seed shows throughout the West prizes of a cup and $25.00 were offered for the best sample of wheat exhibited. Then, by a process of elimination, the exhibit for each province was obtained. These exhibits have been entered in the New York competition, under the names of the farmers from which they were obtained, so that besides winning the prize of the Silver Cup and $25, for their district, each of the winners of the five Canadian exhibits have a chance of securing Sir Thos. Shaughnessy's prize of $1,000.00. Canada will also be represented in the apple contest, twenty-five boxes of choice British Columbia fruit having been entered in the competition.

Willing to Do All.

From New York American.

Officials Selected For Monday's Big Races Many Junior Entries

All arrangements are practically completed for the big Examiner road races on Monday next, Thanksgiving Day, and all that is needed now to ensure the complete success of the annual events, is the co-operation of the weather man. Although the scope of the junior race has been cut down this year by the new rules, which exclude all boys who have not reached their fourteenth birthday, a field of twenty junior runners has already entered, and this number will undoubtedly be increased before the end of the week. This is indeed a splendid entry list, with twenty boys between the ages of fourteen and eighteen in line. New entries to-day included two more from Lakefield, Morgan Benett who will run under the colours of the Grove school and Beecham Bates, of the Lakefield Public school.

The following officials will be in charge of the races:

Starter and clerk of the course of the senior race—W. R. G. Higgins.

Timer of the senior race—W. E. Wasson.

Starter and timer of the junior race—Thos. McEachie.

Clerk of the course for the junior race—E. N. McWilliams.

Judges at the finish for both races—Jos. Picard, R. M. Roy, L. Ingram.

There is great speculation over the senior race in which the field is probably the most classy and best trained that has ever taken part in the Examiner race.

Following are the entries up to noon to-day:

Senior.

1 Harold Smith, Peterborough Y.M.C.A.
2 H. Worthley, Ennismore.
3 J. E. Lean, Cambourne, Ont.
4 W. Willis, Toronto.
5 Sidney Knott, Peterborough.
6 Scott Montgomery, Peterborough.
7 Morris Montgomery, Peterborough.
8 W. Smoke, Alderville.
9 Albert Smoke, Chemong.
10 G. Holubeck, Cobourg, Ont.
11 Will Miller, Peterborough.

Recipes For Housewives

SAVORY CRAB WITH TOMATO SAUCE

Break up a boiled crab, separate all the meat from the shell and claws. Put the meat into a saucepan with three heaping tablespoonfuls of fine tomato sauce, the strained juice of half a lemon, and a little finely chopped lemon rind, season with salt and pepper, and a dust of red pepper, add a wineglassful of sherry wine. Let all simmer over the fire, whilst stirring, for 10 minutes; then add one tablespoonful of sweet butter, bring to the boil once more, then turn out of a deep dish, garnish the dish with fried bread croutons and rings of lemon and serve.

WHITE EGGS WITH SMOKED BEEF

Hard boil about six eggs, let them stand in cold water until cold, and then carefully remove the shells. Heat three half pints of milk in a double boiler. Mix one egg with two tablespoonfuls of flour and an equal amount of water until smooth. Pour a little of the hot milk into it and stir quickly, then stir the whole into the remainder of the hot milk for a minute. Add a dash of pepper and set the saucepan on the back of the stove. Season to taste with salt, and lay the whole eggs and about a third of a half pound jar of smoked beef into the sauce. Heat through but do not let the mixture boil after salt is added.

COCOANUT PUDDING

Put two cupfuls of milk and the rind from one lemon into a saucepan, bring slowly to boiling point, strain to another saucepan, add one and a half ounces of cornstarch mixed smooth with half a cupful of sherry wine, stir together till boiling, then add four tablespoonfuls of chopped cocoanut, two tablespoonfuls of sugar and a few drops of red coloring, cool slightly, add one teaspoonful of vanilla extract and pour into a wet mold. Turn out when cold and sprinkle over with cocoanut.

DIPPED TOAST

Toast slices of bread. Mix three heaping tablespoonfuls of flour with a quarter of a cupful of cold milk add it to three cupfuls of scalded milk and cook in a double boiler to 20 minutes, stirring all the time, then add a quarter of a teaspoonful of salt and four tablespoonfuls of butter Dip the toast in the sauce. Serve it a hot dish.

CHEESE PUFFS

Put one cupful of water in a saucepan to boil, add one tablespoonful of butter; season with salt, pepper and red pepper. As soon as it boils, stir in sufficient flour to form a stiff paste, and work quickly over the fire. Remove it from the fire and beat in six heaping tablespoonfuls of grated cheese, also the yolks of four eggs, and let it cool. Beat up the whites of four eggs to a stiff froth, and add them gradually to the mixture. Drop by spoonfuls into smoking hot fat. Drain on white paper, dish up, sprinkle with grated cheese, and serve.

A Hallowe'en Story

Hallowe'en was here and little boy Pumpkin was dwelling in a field. He was very lonely, and he sighed: "All the other pumpkin-boys have been chosen; why must I remain in the lonesome field? I tried to grow just as large as I could. I have always kept my heart full of kind thoughts just as a good pumpkin-boy should; why am I left out here alone?"

Then he shivered in the cold bright moonlight, he was longing so much for a friend, that his poor yellow sides almost burst open, but just then a little earth fairy came flittering along, and softly whispered, "I will throw a mantle of straw around you which will keep you warm; be of good cheer, this is Hallowe'en; if you are patient, perhaps you, too, may enjoy this night, and see fairies, elves and hobgoblins."

The fairy said good-by and little boy Pumpkin felt very comfortable in his warm mantle of straw; then all of a sudden he heard a strange noise that arose very near and on looking up he saw a strange object flying toward him; he felt very much frightened, but he heard the earth fairy whispering, "I am near you, do not be afraid." Very soon he saw the large object in the air was another pumpkin, but it was flying with a pair of golden wings. It gently sank to the ground, exclaiming, "I am an enchanted pumpkin. I dwelt here years ago, but each year I am allowed to return to earth and comfort some pumpkin boy who has been left lonely. Many years ago I was very sorrowful; I was dwelling in a field lonely and forgotten, when suddenly I heard, 'Come hither, pumpkin, you shall be useful; I command you to become a coach for a beautiful lady.' Then I became a golden coach with silver wheels, and was lined with snow-white satin, and I was being drawn along by prancing steeds, while a young girl rested on my satin cushions; she was on her way to a ball that was being given that evening by the king.

"When my lady danced with the handsome young prince a smile of gladness rested on his face.

"Later in the evening when the clocks chimed 11 she hastened out and whispered, 'Golden coach, take me quickly to my home,' which I did.

"The next evening I again took her to the ball, and again we hastened home at the appointed time, but alas! on the third night my beautiful lady disobeyed her fairy godmother and remained too long. Suddenly her handsome clothes were turned to rags and I was no longer a golden coach, only a poor, common pumpkin, but I remained true to my lady and as she hurried home weeping I rolled along beside her, whispering, 'The prince loves you; go home and wait in patience.'

"Every day the young girl, now dressed in tatters, would walk to the edge of the forest, lamenting over the loss of her tiny slipper, which she had lost at her last ball. Then I would whisper to her, 'Be patient; the prince has your slipper and is searching constantly for the owner. Ere long I will have some kind, little pumpkin fairy fly to him and whisper, 'Prince, search in the kitchen of yonder gray mansion, there you will find the owner of the tiny slipper.' One beautiful afternoon a little pumpkin fairy flew on her errand of love and whispered my message to the prince. At once he mounted his jet black horse and quickly reached the gray mansion. He gallantly entered the kitchen and knelt at the feet of the ragged maiden. Then placing the slipper on her tiny foot he saw that he had found the owner. Then he cried, 'You are my princess! O! ragged maiden, you are the loveliest and the fairest! You are clothed in rags, but I can see you are beautiful and faithful. I shall love you forever and forever!'

"Just then the fairy godmother appeared, and, touching the rags with her wand she cried, 'Grand-daughter, you shall be dressed in gorgeous raiment.' Immediately the young girl was clothed in costly satins and velvets. Then she and the young prince rode away in a coach made of diamonds and pearls. When they had gone the fairy godmother came to the field where I was dwelling, and touching me with her wand she cried, 'You shall be an enchanted pumpkin and live forever. As a reward for your services to my grand-daughter Cinderella, and for sending the pumpkin fairy to the prince you shall never die, but dwell with pumpkin fairies in their palaces at the roots of the tall oak trees; each year you shall have the power to give everlasting life to some other pumpkin.' Then the enchanted pumpkin touched little boy pumpkin and he had eyes, nose and mouth, with a green velvety hat made of spinach, and with wisps of straw for hair he became a goblin; then the enchanted pumpkin said, 'We must hasten.' Then he and the goblin travelled lightly over fields and meadows and stopped in front of an old-fashioned home, where a kind-hearted farmer was entertaining some poor children. The goblin was soon in the middle of the dining room table, surrounded by apples, nuts, home-made candies and cakes. Just as the farmer called, 'Children, please come,' a beautiful green light appeared in the goblin pumpkin, and when the children came trooping out and saw the large and handsome goblin, they shouted with glee; the farmer said to his wife, 'I think the enchanted pumpkin must have brought this goblin to us to entertain the children.'

"At 10 o'clock all the children went home and soon the farmhouse was in darkness, then the goblin heard the command, 'Fly out of the window' which he did. He soon met a large number of fairies, elves and hobgoblins, all hurrying home to their palaces. The enchanted pumpkin met him and cried: 'Every year at Hallowe'en you shall return to earth and become a goblin, and your mission shall be to visit the children of the poor and make their little hearts merry with your funny goblin face. Then the pumpkin whispered to himself, 'My heart is filled with joy; I can make little children happy, and that is the greatest mission on earth.'"

FEED SCARCE

The first advance in the price of oats was noticed to-day when four loads were put on the market at $17 per ton, being $1 in advance of the price which has been regarded as standard for the past month. The high first class in quality and readily brought the price asked. It is understood that several more loads were sold for that price, to be delivered at a later date. According to information received, it is likely that the will continue in the upward path for a while.
